AMUNDSEN ON WAY TO NOME BY LAUNCH; DIRIGIBLE AT TELLER

NORWEGIAN CONSUL GETS NEWS BY RADIO

U. S. Signal Corps Station in Touch With Norge During the Day—Much Static Interference.

By the Associated Press.

NOME, Alaska, May 15.—It was authoritatively learned here at 9 p. m. today, St. Louis time, that Capt. Roald Amundsen, Lincoln Ellsworth and two others of the crew of the trans-polar dirigible Norge were en route in a launch to Nome from Teller, 75 miles northwest of here. They were expected to arrive here tomorrow.

Navigators here pointed out that Amundsen probably came over 25 miles of frozen ice on Port Clarence, on which Teller is located to reach open water where a launch could be boarded.

The information was received here by Ralph Lomen, Norwegian consul, via the U. S. Signal Corps radio station here. Latest reports from Teller said the big airship was still aloft, but it was believed here that this was only in order to maintain radio communication between Nome and Teller. Nome has become convinced that the Norge will be deflated at Teller. Preparations had been made for a gala celebration of the arrival here.

Norge Is Deflated.

There was a report here that the Norge has been deflated and was flat at Teller.

The report said the craft would never rise again in Alaska and will be dismantled immediately for shipment to the United States.

Thus has the expedition which flew across the North Pole from King's Bay, Spitzerbergen, terminated.

The Norge had been lost to the world for more than two days when the first message was heard from the dirigible's wireless this morning. Fears that a storm, reported brewing in Bering Sea north and west of here, might have swept the explorers far from their goal were growing when the Norge reported, "All Well."

Communication with the Norge failed again several times during the day, and new fears for the safety of Amundsen and his crew of 17 were expressed. Conditions for radio transmission gradually improved late today.

Congratulations Delayed

Many telegrams from the Norge to all parts of the world and congratulations messages to the explorers were passed back and forth by the army radio station here and the ship's apparatus.

Messages from the Norge were uncommunicative as to details of the flight from the North Pole to Alaska. The reason for the delay in reaching Teller after the Norge was reported over Point Barrow, some 400 miles to the northward early Wednesday, was not ascertained. Many of the messages were garbled by static and interference. A seemingly fragmentary message mentioned "drifting" and "windstorm," then for a while the Norge's radio lapsed into silence. This led to the fears today of the possibility that the Norge had been unable to land at Teller because of the smallness of the population—the town has 75 inhabitants—and that it had been torn away by a sudden storm. Later messages however, were reassuring, and Nome felt sure tonight that Amundsen and his band of explorers had succeeded in anchoring the Norge safe at Teller.

"Trans-Polar flight successful. Greetings."

Nobile Sends Word to Wife.

Commander Umberto Nobile, Italian builder of the Norge, and chief pilot in its polar flight, sent a message to his wife in Rome.

Many other messages, including a reply from President Coolidge to Ellsworth, were handled by the army radio station.

Future plans of the expedition were in doubt tonight. Because the ice-locked, it will be sev-

ONE MAN HOLDS UP TWENTY PLAYING DICE, GETS $1000

Robs Movie Managers and Film Salesmen at 3313 Olive St. at 4:30 P. M. Yesterday.

There were several winners in the crap game at the Jack Weil Film Exchange at 3313 Olive street yesterday but they might just as well have been throwing "snake eyes" as rolling out "naturals." The game ended with everybody loser.

A holdup man walked into the contest at 4:30 p. m. and without making a pass took all the cash in the game, gathered up miscellaneous articles of jewelry that hadn't got into circulation yet and departed—richer by about $1000 in cash and jewelry than when he had entered.

The losing players, about 20 motion picture theater managers and film salesmen who had gathered at the Weil establishment for a meeting and had adjourned to a room on the second floor to try their luck at dice. The game was well along when a young, well dressed man, walked into the exchange.

"Metting over?" he asked Joseph Walsh, secretary of the Film Board of Trade, who was on the first floor talking to another man. Walsh nodded and the young man ran up the stairs to the second floor.

Enter the Winner.

A moment later he knocked at the door of the meeting room and was admitted. He had slipped a handkerchief to his face and as he entered he drew a revolver.

"All right men," he shouted as the players turned from the table. "Stick 'em up and back against the wall."

The invader, back to door, singled out Frank Wagner, manager of the Kirkwood Theater, and ordered him to go through the pockets of the others.

"Then," recounted Louis Stahl, manager of the Union Theater, who was among the victims, "he got Wagner to tear off a sheet of wrapping paper from a roll and lay it on the table where he made Wagner deposit the jewelry, watches and cash.

"Finally he saw a $250 Scottish Rite diamond ring I was wearing. 'Off it comes,' he said.

"'It's tight, I answered. 'I can't get it off.'

"'You're a smart guy aren't you?' he said. 'Get that hand up over your head.' Then he said to Wagner, 'Take off that guy's ring before I shoot it off.' Wagner almost jerked my finger off getting it."

Drops in Just in Time.

At this juncture Walsh went upstairs. He caught sight of the revolver as he entered the room, but the holdup man caught sight of him about the same time and made him line up with the rest where he was also robbed. At the close of the holdup the visitor made his victims go into another room and lie on the floor.

"Stay down there for a while or I'll burn you," were his parting instructions. After a while everybody got up and Stahl, Walsh and two others reported the robbery to the police.

Among those whom they named as participants in the game were Lloyd Lewis, 5031 South Kingshighway boulevard; Jack Weil, proprietor of the exchange where the robbery occurred; Walter Light of 3402 South Spring avenue; Thomas Tobin, 3312 Olive street; Ben Kohn, 2701 Dickson street, and Roy Dickson of 5033 Devonshire avenue.

BRITAIN JAILS 2 COMMUNISTS

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, May 15. — Robert Stewart, acting general secretary of the Communist Party of Great Britain, was arraigned in Bow Street Police Court today, charged with having in his possession at Communist headquarters various documents likely to cause sedition or disaffection. He was remanded on bail until May 19.

James Hamer, secretary of the Altrincham Branch of the Communist Party, also was remanded on a charge of committing an act likely to cause disaffection.

SAY SIDENER'S AID TRIED TO BLOCK INDICTMENT IN RUTHERFORD CASE

Grand Jury Foreman, Two Jurors Assert Ex-Assistant Circuit Attorney Schneider Was Ejected.

CIRCUIT ATTORNEY ORDERS INQUIRY

Issues Statement Saying He Will Get at Bottom of Reputed Payment of $13,500 to "Arrange" Case.

Three members of the grand jury which indicted William Allen Scott Rutherford for the murder of Jack Tucker, Majestic Hotel bellboy, yesterday related that Rudolph Schneider, then an assistant circuit attorney, was ejected from the grand jury room last December, when he tried to influence the grand jurors against indicting Rutherford, whose case was settled recently by a plea of guilty to manslaughter and payment of a $500 fine.

Circuit Attorney Sidener, who said recently that the Rutherford case was a closed incident, announced last night that he would ask the present grand jury to investigate the Rutherford case, particularly the statement of John Rutherford of Pine Bluff, Ark., that he paid $13,500 to W. W. Henderson, former Probate Judge, to "arrange" his brother's case.

The Circuit Attorney's written statement, given out last night, is:

"Up to the present time I have refused to make a lengthy statement relative to the case of the State of Missouri against Lieut. Rutherford, who was fined $500 the other day by Judge Mix after the mother of the slain youth, in an affidavit, had most earnestly requested that the defendant be permitted to plead guilty of manslaughter and pay a fine, which was done. For that action I stated I had no apology to make and have none now. That mother had lost that boy and if she felt it was culpable negligence or accident, and not murder, as she said she did, then her wishes should be respected.

To Meet Situation.

"However, a statement attributed to John Rutherford of Pine Bluff, Ark., today, to the effect that he spent $13,500 in defense of his brother, brings us face to face with a situation which must be met.

I feel it is my duty as Circuit Attorney of St. Louis, under whose jurisdiction this case has been, to find out to whom this money was paid and how and where it was spent. This I intend to do, and I expect the assistance of everyone who may have any information or knowledge of this case. Especially do I expect the newspapers, which have been so interested and active, to help in giving the information. I shall insist upon, if not forthcoming, I shall call upon the grand jury to force it, for this case was either handled on the square or it was not, and the people of St. Louis are entitled to know it.

"In addition I intend investigating an alleged statement of John Rutherford to the effect that he had sent influential friends from that vicinity to see me about this case, and I had shown a friendly attitude. This mean either that Rutherford was misquoted or that he made a false statement.

Orders Investigation.

"I never have talked with anyone from Pine Bluff, Ark., or any other friends of Rutherford about this matter."

He supplemented this written statement by saying, "You can say, 'Sidener calls a grand jury investigation.' I want to know what was done with this money. I shall call John Rutherford, Judge Henderson and newspaper reporters. I am sick and tired of the insinuations in the papers, and I want to get to the bottom of this case."

John Rutherford, in a statement at Pine Bluff yesterday, said that he had conferred with Schneider about his brother's case, and that Schneider had been "very nice and friendly."

Guy H. Wright, president of the Thomas Wright Investment Co., foreman of the October grand jury, and two other members, John J. Scherrer Jr., an officer of the Liberty Central Trust Co., and William L. Protzmann, vice-president of the Cass Avenue bank, told yesterday of Schneider's part in the case

"BUBBLING OVER" WINS THE KENTUCKY DERBY IN ROMP; CROWD OF 70,000 WATCHES RACE

Honoring the 1926 Derby Winner; Photograph by Staff Photographer and Brought by Airplane to the Post-Dispatch

ANOTHER BRADLEY COLT RUNNER-UP, ROCK MAN THIRD

Bagenbaggage Places and Owner Repeats Triumph of 1921 by Finishing One, Two.

POMPEY OUTCLASSED, $50,000 TO VICTOR

Time of 2:03 4-5 Within Two-Fifths of Second of Record—Gay Assemblage Present.

By RALPH COGHLAN.
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

CHURCHILL DOWNS, Louisville, Ky., May 15.—Bubbling Over, running with the precision of a machine, won the Kentucky Derby this afternoon from a field of 13 of the choicest colts in the United States. It was less a horse race than an exhibition of individual brilliance. From the time the barrier was sprung until the race was over, Bubbling Over led the field and never was in danger of being caught.

He passed the winning post five lengths ahead of his stablemate, Bagenbaggage, and his time for the mile and a quarter was 2:03 4-5, within two-fifths of a second of the Derby record, established by Old Rosebud in 1914. Bubbling Over, owned by E. R. Bradley of Kentucky, was the favorite in the betting and seldom in the 52 years of Derby history has a winner been more wildly acclaimed.

A deafening roar went up from the crowd of 70,000 as the green and white colors of Bradley flashed home first and second, just as they did in 1921 when Bradley's Behave Yourself and Black Servant finished one, two. The surging mob in the infield crashed the gates and poured in riotous confusion onto the track, where they were restrained from wedging in the Derby winner only by the vigorous charging of mounted policemen. As Bubbling Over trotted back to the judge's stand, a small space was cleared for him. As sweetly as a debutante, the little chestnut bowed his head to receive a floral horseshoe, while Albert Johnson, his jockey, who rode Morvich to victory in 1922, was handed a huge bouquet of roses.

Above, on the steward's platform, E. R. Bradley was accepting from Mayor James Walker of New York City the gold cup emblematic of the highest honors of the American turf. Later Bradley will receive the purse of $50,075 for which the race is run. Then Bubbling Over submitted to the hands of his grooms, was unsaddled, covered with a blanket and trotted off to his stall. During this performance, the crowd gave uproarious expressions of its joy that a Kentucky horse and a favorite in the betting should win another victory, and such a sweeping one from the East.

Three lengths behind, Bagenbaggage came Rock Man, of the Sagamore stable, the only Eastern horse to get any share of the money, just a nose in front of Rhinock, who was considered the Western dark horse. And then, four full lengths behind Rhinock, came that fallen champion of 1925, that symbol of blasted hopes, W. R. Coe's Pompey. Pompey, considered the flower of the Eastern horses and next in favor in the betting to Bubbling Over, had no alibis and no excuses. He was a badly beaten horse and his backers, who wagered hundreds of thousands of dollars on his chances, contemplated him sadly.

A Duel at the Start.

Though Bubbling Over had a Roman holiday, it looked for a time as though this Derby would be, as experts figured it to be, a duel between these two colts. As the race started, both Bubbling Over and Pompey, though they were on the outside of the field from the rail, leaped into the lead. Bubbling Over led by a head. The remainder of the field was scattered to the rear. This position was maintained as they passed the cheering stands. Here was a pretty sight.

JOCKEY JOHNSON'S OWN STORY

"A Runaway Race," Says Rider of Derby Winner to Post-Dispatch Readers

ALFRED JOHNSON.

HERE is the story of "How I Won the Kentucky Derby," by Jockey Alfred Johnson, as dictated exclusively to a staff correspondent of the Post-Dispatch:

By JOCKEY ALFRED JOHNSON, Derby Winner on Bubbling Over.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., May 15.—Before this great race was started I believed Bubbling Over to be the best horse, but not so much superior to the best blood among the others as the running of the classic later disclosed.

My mount was seconds too good for the field. That tells the story. It was a runaway one-horse race, that's all.

Bubbling Over is a thoroughly sane animal and for one of thoroughbred lineage behaved well at the post. In the parade past the stands as we made our bow to the audience my mount was calm, with not a trace of nervousness.

The great chestnut colt took his place in the lineup behind the barrier without a quiver. Indeed he was so calm and apparently unconcerned during the line-up for the start that the rise of the barrier almost found us unprepared.

Away for Good Start.

The start was good, much better than many I have experienced. There was little or no cutting up at the post, and nothing occurred there to which one might fasten an alibi to account for the result.

As the barrier flew up to send us away we were directly in line, but not on our toes, so to speak. This is why I went to the whip immediately. Two sharp slashes from the stock and we were away. From that moment it was not necessary to remind Bubbling Over that the supreme moment of his career was at hand by the employment of force. It was not necessary to strike him again.

The first stroke of the stock sent him to the front like a flash, a good neck in front of Pompey, and at the second blow he bounded forward like a wild hare, increasing his lead. A few moments later we flew past the roaring grandstands hugging the rail.

All this time I had my mount under double laps. He was running well within himself. There was no heaving or aimless bounding, such as is experienced in an effort to hold a place. I could hear the struggle of the other horses at my side and heels to displace us. But, as I have said, Bubbling Over was running within himself, and from this I knew he had reserve endurance to spare.

Rounding the curve beyond the stands we skimmed over the turf, with a thundering of hoofs and considerable confusion behind us. At no time were we jammed nor even threatened seriously with a

HOW AIRPLANE BROUGHT DERBY PHOTOGRAPHS TO POST-DISPATCH

THE Derby race pictures printed in today's Post-Dispatch were brought from Louisville to Scott Field last night by airplane and rushed from the army field to St. Louis by motor cycle.

The plates were delivered in the Post-Dispatch office at 8:30, three hours and 19 minutes after Bubbling Over had crossed the finish line as winner.

As soon as the race was over, at 5:11, Clint Murphy, staff photographer, was rushed by motor cycle to a field, three blocks from the track, where Charles E. Lindbergh, chief pilot for the Robertson Aircraft Corporation, waited for the plates in his DH-4 mail plane, used regularly in service on the Chicago-St. Louis route.

Taking the air from a field only 30 feet wide and 300 feet long, Lindbergh pointed the nose of his plane to Scott Field at 5:27. He landed at Scott Field at 7:31. His flying time was two hours and four minutes. His average speed, 122 miles an hour, for the 251-mile flight.

The last 15 minutes of his flight was made in darkness but by special arrangement, Lieutenant-Colonel John A. Paegelow, commanding Scott Field, had had the field floodlights turned on at dusk in preparation for Lindbergh's arrival.

The pilot turned over his package of plates to a Post-Dispatch reporter who was waiting. The run from Scott Field to the Post-Dispatch office was made in slightly less than an hour.

The best train time between Louisville and St. Louis is nine hours and 21 minutes.

STEAMER CALLS FOR AID

Clyde Line Vessel With 235 Aboard, Springs Leak Off Florida.

MIAMI, Fla., May 15. — The Clyde Line steamer Seneca was off Miami bar tonight taking water in her hold through a leak which was detected when the vessel was off Hollywood on her way to New York, according to messages from Capt. B. W. Leek, her commander. The vessel had 235 passengers aboard.

The captain radioed for a tug after the Seneca had turned back to Miami. Later messages urged that a tug be sent immediately.

GASOLINE GOES UP ONE CENT

KANSAS CITY, May 15. — An increase of one cent a gallon in the price of gasoline will go into effect next Monday in the territory of the Standard Oil Co. of Indiana, it was announced here today. The new price at Kansas City filling stations will be 23.9 cents a gallon, which includes a one-cent city tax and two-cent state tax.

POLICE SEARCHING FOR HERMIT WITH $100,000 ESTATE

Theory Advanced That Ohio Man Who Came Here Died and Was Buried as a Negro.

TRACE OF MEN OF SAME NAME

One Lived as a Negro in County and the Other Passed as a Mexican in East St. Louis.

Several interesting theories are guiding police in their search for information about Calvin Goodman, 65-year-old eccentric bachelor, reported to have died here recently, leaving a $100,000 estate. One theory is that he lived as a hermit among Negroes and was buried as a Negro. Another is that he met with foul play and his estate was stolen.

The investigation was requested by Police Chief Kipker of Lima, O., and Goodman's three sisters and heirs, Mrs. A. V. Hefner and Mrs. J. Beehler of Lima, and Mrs. Caroline Moyer of Marble, Ark. The sisters have been unable to find their brother or his estate.

Eight years ago, Goodman, a farmer near Lima, performed the strangest deed in his queer life. He sold his farm and quit Lima with $25,000 assets in his possession. Before departing he is alleged to have compelled his sisters, at the point of a shotgun, to sign over to him their interest in certain real estate.

Informed of Death.

Occasionally Goodman communicated with his sisters, first from Walla Walla, Wash., later from various cities all over the country. His wanderings apparently ended about 1922, when he settled down here. He informed his sisters he was living alone in a "swell district" about 15 miles from the St. Louis Courthouse. The sisters remember the district as "Forest Grove" or "Forest Park." Then no word came for months and last March attorneys in St. Louis and Chicago wrote, announcing that Goodman was dead and offering to supply full information and administered the estate for a substantial fee.

Contracts submitted by the attorneys were considered exorbitant by the sisters. They and a Lima bank are investigating the report of Goodman's death and have spent $10,000 so far, hoping to find him alive, or to find his burial place and his estate.

It has been learned that a Calvin Goodman lived from 1922 to 1925 on Rock Hill road in St. Louis County. He lived alone in a settlement of Negro workmen and was accepted as a Negro. The Goodman from Lima had dark skin and might have passed for a Negro. The settlement is near Webster Groves, possibly the "swell district" recalled now as "Forest Grove."

Dabbled in Real Estate.

There also is a record of a Calvin Goodman having lived near East St. Louis in 1924. He was dark-skinned and passed for a Mexican among Mexicans, it is said. Investigators believe it possible that the Lima man alternately impersonated a Negro and a Mexican. In this connection it is suggested the Lima man wished to lose his identity as far as possible, without losing his name. If the three men were not one and the same, they at least had one common distinction—they were regarded by their neighbors as hermits.

Striking Features of Most Colorful Derby of Recent Years

St. Louisans in Bright Array Among Gay Throng at Derby

Tan the Chosen Color of the Women — Miss Maud Miller Streett; Reigning V. P. Queen, in Delegation

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., May 15.—The 1926 Derby crowd was beautifully dressed, in spite of the cold wind of the morning and a slight drizzle of rain at noon that threatened havoc to spring frocks and forced the donning of coats and furs for comfort.

St. Louisans, although not grouped as were many of the Chicago visitors, were easily noted in the clubhouse. Among them was a group of investment bankers headed by Mr. and Mrs. Alden H. Little, just back from a convention at White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., and with the Littles were Mr. and Mrs. Thomas N. Dysart, Mr. and Mrs. Ben G. Chapman Jr., and Mr. and Mrs. Tom K. Smith, guests in a box party with Mrs. Pliny Jewell of Boston and Miss Wilson of Louisville.

Miss Maud Miller Streett, the reigning Veiled Prophet Queen, looking stunning in a bright red picture hat and pongee mandarin coat with a blue Chinese motif embroidered on the back, was in a box with Mrs. Floyd Augustine and Mr. and Mrs. Elzey Roberts.

Tan a Favorite Color.

Tan seemed to be the chosen color of St. Louis women. Mrs. Charles Pond Capen and Mrs. Alanson Brown wore complete tan outfits as did Mrs. Thomas H. Wright. With Mrs. Brown were Mr. and Mrs. Capen and Mr. and Mrs. Ingram Boyd, Mr. and Mrs. J. Howard Holmes, and Mrs. J. T. Ford Jr. The entire party motored over from French Lick Springs.

Mr. and Mrs. George R. Wendling graciously received in the Haldeman box in place of Mrs. Wendlings' sister, Miss Bessie Haldeman, whose illness prevented her appearance at the track. With them were another sister, Mrs. George C. Lieb of Burlingame, Cal., Mr. Lieb and Sharp Ezzell. Mrs. Wendling wore a dark blue ensemble suit with a full-length coat and a close-fitting hat to match. They attended the breakfast given by Robert and Sevier this morning as did many of the other St. Louisans, arriving at the track late and hurrying away immediately after the race for a tea given by Mrs. Wendling's mother, Mrs. John Avery Haldeman.

Near the Judges stand were two boxes occupied by a group of St. Louisans, who have a house in Louisville for the week-end. In one were Mr. and Mrs. Eugene F. Williams Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Gates Williams, Mr. and Mrs. John Nickerson of New York and Guy Gamble and Thomas Reyburn, while the second held Mr. and Mrs. Harry Potter, the latter very chic in an all orchid costume with a matching picture hat, Mr. and Mrs. Harold M. Kauffman and Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Bascom.

In Dr. Freeland's Box.

Dr. John Freeland of New York whose annual parties are among the gayest of Derby week arrived this morning to occupy his box and had as his guests Mrs. Charles Parsons Pettus, her brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas H. Wright and Samuel W. Fordyce, all of St. Louis, and Mr. Walker of New York. Mrs. Pettus wore a gown of apricot flat crepe with a cloche felt hat of corresponding shade.

Part of the St. Louis delegation to the Junior League convention in Nashville remained over for the Derby. Miss Eleanor Simmons with Miss Trimble Hoblitzelle and Mrs. Edward Schofield Travers were the guests with Frank O. Watts Jr. of St. Louis and John Bell of Nashville. Miss Simmons was in flowered georgette and Mrs. Travers wore an all-blue costume.

In an adjoining box were Mrs. F. Y. Leslie, Mrs. Herman Uhl, Miss Emma Wagner, Dr. C. O. C. Max and E. Nixon, all of St. Louis.

Miss May Reynolds Scott, who, with her father, R. G. Scott and Mrs. Earl M. Conner, were the guests of A. O. Simpson, wore a stunning white georgette coat with heavy colored embroidery covering the lower skirt and sleeves with a gown and hat of bois du rose.

Mrs. H. W. Peters in Pink.

Another well-dressed St. Louisan was Mrs. Henry W. Peters, in watermelon pink chiffon made with the prevailing cape effect, the whole embroidered in white and a pink hat. She and Mr. Peters, with Mr. and Mrs. T. F. Kirkpatrick, annual Derby visitors, were in the F. W. Bradsby box.

Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Caperton of Louisville had Mrs. Caperton's brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Carl Langenberg, with them in their box, and in another party wer Mr. and Mrs. Mahlon B. Wallace Jr. and Mr. and Mrs. Harry Hall Knight.

Mr. and Mrs. Breckinridge Jones and Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Norris were guests in the William P. Castleman box, and later Mr. and Mrs. Castleman gave a dinner for them at the Louisville Country Club.

Mrs. Herbert Lawrence Parker and her son, King Parker, were in a box with friends, and in another box were Mr. and Mrs. Lawson Watts. Mrs. Watts wore an attractive green crepe gown and large hat to match.

Mr. and Mrs. George L. Corlis and their daughters, Mrs. Marion Corlis Mersman and Miss Kitty Corlis, were in a party who motored from French Lick Springs for the day.

Luncheon With Lyman T. Hay.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter B. Stinde were having luncheon at the clubhouse with Lyman T. Hay and others, and Eugene B. Stinde was noted on the lawn.

Mr. and Mrs. Milton Hellman and Mr. and Mrs. Harry Lesser were in a box with Louisville friends. Miss Emily Isaacs wearing grey crepe trimmed with silver nail head and a grey hat was in the Obrien party.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles L. Geraghty were with their son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Francis McGee, who are here en route home after their honeymoon trip to New York and Atlantic City. Mrs. McGee was Miss Margaret Geraghty. Mr. and Mrs. Thomas A. Dooley Jr. were with friends and in another group were Virgil A. Lewis, Alfred H. Murphy, Mr. and Mrs. Gus Arendes, also were there.

Other St. Louisans noted on the clubhouse lawn were M. E. Singleton, Mr. and Mrs. T. Anderson, E. H. Thurston, A. B. Williams, Theodore White, Ben G. Brinkman, R. E. Cave, W. V. Wilson, N. O. Whaley, Ben Lang, M. K. Bassett, Joseph J. Farrell, Mr. and Mrs. Jim Hagerman of Washington formerly of St. Louis, Frederick G. Zeibig, Rhodes E. Cave, Mr. and Mrs. James O'Brien, Ben G. Brinkman, Mr. and Mrs. Ben O. Weatherby, Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Welsch, Senator and Mrs. Brogan, Mr. and Mrs. Hyman Kahn, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Switzer and Mr. and Mrs. Jerome Casey.

These two, upon which most of the money was bet and around which most of the discussion had hinged for months, were at last fighting it out fairly under ideal conditions. Against the green of the infield and the variegated crowd which lined the rail, Bubbling Over and Pompey were the cynosure of 70,000 pairs of eyes. This contest is what they expected to see. This is what they were seeing.

Laverne Fator, one of the best jockeys in the country, was astride Pompey and apparently contented with his position as second. They rounded the clubhouse turn and sped toward the half. Here Fator urged his mount, called upon him to overtake the flying chestnut. It was useless. Bubbling Over, still running under restraint, easily maintained his lead and Pompey began to falter. The amazed and disappointed crowd in the grandstand which had expected a duel to the death saw green and white polka dots of Pompey's rider slowly recede.

Rock Man's Effort.

Rock Man, here, made his challenge for the East. Vigorously ridden by F. Coltiletti, Rock Man came within a head of the Bradley colt, only to be beaten off as was Pompey. Then Bagenbaggage, winner of the Louisiana Derby, shot forward like a meteor into second place and, at the head of the stretch, was one length behind. Pompey had slipped to fourth place. The others were nowhere. Just to show how good he was and without being urged by his jockey, Bubbling Over came down the stretch past the grand stand with dazzling speed, making an ever-lengthening interval between himself and Bagenbaggage, to go past the winning post five full lengths in front.

Those who backed Bubbling Over were rewarded as follows: For every $2 bet on Bubbling Over to win, $5.80 was refunded. A $2 ticket that he would place brought the same figure. A $2 ticket to show paid $4.60. Bubbling Over and Bagenbaggage, because they are owned by the same man, were coupled in the betting. That is, each $2 ticket on Bubbling Over was also a ticket on Bagenbaggage. Thus, Bagenbaggage paid the same to place and to show as Bubbling Over. The real surprise came when Rock Man's odds to show were posted. The holder of every $2 ticket on Rock Man to show was rewarded with $30.

Display Runs Dull Race.

Other horses, highly prized before the race, were no match for Bubbling Over. There was, for example, Display, who won the $50,000 Preakness at Pimlico last Monday. Display ran a dull race. He was twelfth at the start, never was closer than eighth and finished eleventh. Roycrofter, the hope of G. F. Croissant of Chicago, finished a melancholy last. Champ de Mars, upon which much St. Louis money was placed, ran twelfth, or next to last, and never got nearer than sixth. Blondin, carrying the celebrated colors of Harry Payne Whitney, finished a dismal ninth. Canter, one of the prime favorites in the winter books, ran in fourth position to the three-quarters and seemed for awhile to be a contender, but his muscles flagged and he finished eighth. Somewhere in the cloud of dust one picked out the lamented figures of Recollection, Espino and Light Carbine.

It was 5:09, when the shadows were beginning to lengthen over the track, that the Derby horses got under way. Although the post time of the first race was 1:45, the enormous crowd that milled in the betting sheds was in a betting mood, and the races were delayed while they lined in long queues before the numerous pari-mutual machines. The races were run at intervals of approximately 50 minutes, which threw the Derby to a much later time than it is usually run.

At 4:20, after the fourth race had been run, the Derby colts were led from their stables, far across the track from the grandstand, to the paddock. Pompey was trotted to a point near the judge's stand, where his grooms clothed him in a green and white dressing gown. He was then taken down the tanbark into the paddock. At 4:30 the Derby colts were in their stalls at the paddock, and there began that interesting parade round and round the ring, when the spectators are permitted to get a close glimpse of the favorites. This process proceeded until shortly before 5. The crowd, tense in expectation, cheered as the bugler sounded "Boots and Saddles."

At two minutes of 5, the jockeys who were not riding in the race, still wearing their brilliantly colored caps and white breeches, and light coats, came across the track to get a position of vantage on the rail of the infield a few yards from the finish line. Promptly at 5, the Derby colts made their appearance.

This moment eagerly awaited throughout the long afternoon, found the crowd on tip-toe. The battery of movie camera men on the roof of the clubhouse fingered and pointed their instruments. On the track itself, just beyond the finish line, were a horde of newspaper photographers, who now began clicking their cameras. The stewards appeared on their platform. And those who had saved their places on the rail from the early morning now reaped their reward.

Leading the brilliant colorful procession which now issued from the paddock-walk to the track was the inevitable calico lead pony, a docile creature used to have a quieting influence on the line of prima donnas behind him. His rider, a dignitary in a scarlet coat, clutched the rein of Display, the winner of the Preakness, who was alongside. Then came Light Carbine, Rock Man and Bagenbaggage. Last of all were Pompey and Bubbling Over. As they walked to the opposite side of the track in Indian file and appeared in all their glory in the sunlight, it was a sight of such beauty and of such dramatic value that it seemed worth-while that a multitude should gather to witness it from all parts of the country.

Jockeys Ride Easily.

The jockeys sat easily on their mounts, their silks looking like bay bubbles above the glistening browns, blacks and chestnut coats of the horses. And so this pageant proceeded slowly past the clubhouse, the horses steping daintily and springily. As they reached the far end of the clubhouse, they turned to repass it and the grandstand and head for the starting place just beyond the head of the stretch. The process of turning created some disarray in the orderly line, and now they began to dance and plead for their heads and cakewalk in pretty fashion.

Both Pompey and Bubbling Over were marvels of grace as they broke gently from the line and pirouetted for the crowd. Bubbling Over was coaxed back into the line, but Pompey, apparently full of run, insisted upon going to the barrier in splendid isolation. He waltzed down the middle of the track in the proudest fashion. Within five minutes of the time they emerged from the paddock-walk, the finest 3-year-olds of 1926 were at the barrier ready for the greatest ordeal of their careers. They were at the post four minutes while the starter and his assistants did the nerve-wracking work of forming a perfect alignment. Suddenly a guttural roar, "they're off" and the beauties came flying down the stretch.

It was an ideal day for the big race. Those who greeted the dawn found a chilling and morbid prospect. The sky was completely overcast and gray and a chilly breeze brought out cloaks, topcoats and slickers. As the morning progressed the outlook became worse. Shortly before 11 a light sprinkle began to moisten the hopes of the pop-eyed fans. There were intermittent sprinkles from then until 1 o'clock. But by time the bugle sounded for the first race, the sky began to clear and at 2:20, in the interval between the first and second race, the sun shone forth.

Crowds Line Track.

It revealed this old historic race-track, Churchill Downs, looking its best. Many-colored flags waved from the huge flagpole and around it was the infield, velvety with grass and relieved by plots of flowers. Beyond, still in a haze, were the low Kentucky hills, just above the green roofs of the stables. The boxes in the clubhouses and in the grand stand were filled with well-known persons, who were attired in their best Derby raiment. But the sight which fascinated the eye was the crowds massed on the terrace of the grand stand.

Here, nearly as far as the eye could reach, was a solid mass of persons, weaving and ever-changeful, with splashes of bright red and yellow and white and green making it a fantastic pattern. For five-eighths of a mile from the farthest reach of the grand stand to the extreme limits of the clubhouse, on both sides of the track, a vast assemblage lined the rails.

The vanguard of the Derby crowd arrived at Churchill Downs before 7:30 a. m. when 400 entered as the turnstiles were opened. These were followed by hundreds of other early birds, carrying their lunches, most of whom sought immediately a place on the rail or a seat in the general admission section of the grand stand. At 10 o'clock 4000 were present and the advance betting on the Derby began, 20 booths being opened in the grand stand for that purpose and ten in the clubhouse. The terrace in front of the grand stand was filled at 12 and a hungry throng besieged the restaurants and hot dog stands. Between 12 and 1 the more leisurely box-holders made their appearance. The world of fashion massed in the restaurant clubhouse for lunch, and Derby day was under way with the odds for the first race posted on the board and the pari-mutual machines clicking.

In all of Louisville on Derby mroning there was no sleeper or more somnolent place than the stables where the heroes of the occasion quietly awaited the call. Few visitors were to be observed. The only gatherings were of the stable and exercise darkies who were engaged in their daily crap games. Few precautions were taken to guard the Derby winners. Last year it was impossible to get near the stall of Quatrain, the Derby favorite. This year even Pompey and Bubbling Over were easily to be seen. A lone guard stood with his back to the door of Pompey's stall, but Pompey himself was visible through the grating. He was engaged in the prosaic task of teasing wisps of hay.

Bubbling Over pushed his nose curiously over the crossbar of his stall and gazed at the occasional visitor. Now and again, a trainer or an exercise boy would pass his stall and murmur an affectionate "hello Bub" to him. Once a trainer entered to rearrange his bedding. Bubbling Over stepped aside and, the trainer once in, he resumed his position at the crossbar. He is a handsome little brute, delicately and beautifully built, and amply proves the accuracy of Mr. Bradley's judgment that he is the best Derby colt Bradley ever owned. Louisville experiences tonight the last quivers of its annual spasms. The crowd is heading homeward. The congested hotels are giving up their occupants and the special trains are getting up steam for the return journey. Automobiles bearing license tags from far-off places are cluttering the outgoing roads. Tomorrow only a few thousand of the great invasion will remain. And Louisville will get the first good night's sleep it has had for a week.

Gowns With Coats to Match In Trimly Tailored Sports Models Predominate at Derby

By MARGUERITE MARTYN
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., May 15. — "Well, I'm glad I did not wear my chiffon dress," this remark overheard repeatedly in the clubhouse grandstand very well epitomizes the feelings of thousands of women in the estimated 125,000 spectators at the Derby.

Truly the fates annually seem to conspire to make things propitious for this event. The morning was as cold and bleak as November. Women sallied forth shivering in top coats—smart ones if they were available, but otherwise traveling coats, slickers, or anything that could be had. Then as the afternoon wore on the skies cleared and the sun smiled pleasantly. There still remained another reason for substantial garments. This was the density of the crowd through which one had to squeeze at the risk of tearing flimsy garments.

Smart Sports Attire.

A compensation to fashion in the situation induced by the cool weather was that women really look smarter and more appropriately dressed in trim sports and tailored garments out-of-doors than in the flowered organdies.

Happy should have been the woman today who had planned to wear a gown with coat to match and there were many who revealed this prescience. Gowns of crepe or kasha with coat linings matching the frocks beneath were the smartest. White ensembles were in the majority but pastel shaded ones were always "in the money." Next to ensemble suits, smart top coats claimed the greatest approval. And every well-dressed woman, if this turnout was any criterion, seemed to have possessed herself of a smart topcoat. Many were of fur for there are lightweight furs nowadays reserved for between season wear—chipmunk, gazelle, flying squirrel, coney, and summer ermine.

Mrs. Martin Saportas of New York in Mrs. Raymond Baker's box, both ladies as patterns of the mode being familiar to us in the fashion journals, wore a short coat of chipmunk.

Coat of Antelope Skin.

One of the Mrs. Wideners of Philadelphia whose name also is synonymous with fashion, wore a long coat of antelope skin. Many topcoats were trimmed with kasha, tweed or flannel, gazelle or leopard, while also many were adorned with white, platinum and beige fox. And being trimmed with fur usually means having cuffs, pocket facings, collars and facings all down the front and round the bottom of fur.

Many of the topcoats were of the rough tweed mixtures in bright colors and subdued plaids. Still others were of tapestry weaves or had bizarre patterns done in cross stitch. Underneath the coats frocks were most frequently of crepe, either plain or printed.

Many plain crepes and some jersey frocks were trimmed with small metal nailheads. Usually the frock was made two-piece fashion with blouse tightly belted round the hips. Capes were attached to some of the crepe frocks and to many of the top coats. High colors were in the ascendancy, ranging from white through all the pastel shades but navy blue and black were not out of the running.

High-Crowned Black Satin Hats.

Indeed, some of the smart black crepes with close-fitting high crowned black satin hats were the most striking and navy blue printed crepes stood out equally as a relief to a surfeit of color.

Because of the bleakness of the prospect, most women wore small hats of felt or visca or fabric, close at the back, narrow visored in front with crown draped to fit the head snugly, but there were enough large hats of Milan simply bound and banded with ribbon worn by women who had planned more seasonable costumes to presage the swinging of fashion's pendulum from the very small to the extremely wide-brimmed hat.

Almost every hat had its single jeweled ornament which note was repeated in jeweled accessories, earrings, shoulder pins, buckles, necklets and a multiplicity of bracelets. Many of these last, where not jeweled, were of the slave link variety.

Something ought to be said of the dainty sky blue, bois de rose, primrose yellow, and chartreuse green tweeds worn by the men at the races, and the pink and lavender shirts and hat bands that rivaled the rainbow and how the men are just as keen about having their coats fit tight round the hips as are the women. But that is another story.

COAST GUARDSMEN AMONG 200 INDICTED IN DRY WAR

Federal Grand Jury at Seattle, Wash., Also Names Police and Sheriff Officers.

By the Associated Press.

SEATTLE, Wash., May 15.—Roy Lyle, Federal District Prohibition Administrator, declared tonight that "at least five or six" United States Coast guardsmen had been indicted by the Federal grand jury which brought accusations against nearly 200 persons in 37 indictments this week.

Boatswain William Gardner, officer in charge of the coast guard rum chaser AB-11, was the first guardsman to be arrested. Other arrests today included: Warren C. Brill, harbor department pilot; Leroy Mills, harbor department deep-sea diver; Sylvester A. Moore, who formerly had charge of issuing alcohol permits in the Pacific Northwest, and Fred Nourse, Kirkland (Wash.) aviator.

Roy Olmstead, who is appealing from a four-year penitentiary sentence for conviction of complicity in an international rum-running ring, was said by Federal officers to have been the head of the group named in the present indictments. A Seattle police captain, a lieutenant, the County Sheriff and two deputies also are under indictment.

REPORTS $2375 IN JEWELRY AND $361 CASH WAS STOLEN

Salesman Notifies University City Police Robbers in Roadster Held Up Automobile.

W. S. Freeman, a salesman, last night reported to University City police that he had been held up at 11 o'clock while on his way to his home at 1101 Pennsylvania avenue in his automobile and robbed of jewelry valued at $2375, and $361 in cash.

Freeman said he had passed Ferguson avenue, westbound on Olive street road, when three men in a Ford roadster pulled up alongside and crowded his car to the curb.

Two of the men jumped into his car as he drove slowly westward, he related, and with pistols at his head took from him his wallet, a three and a half carat diamond ring worth $2000, and a diamond scarf pin worth $375.

The Ford, driven by the third man, followed to Pennsylvania avenue where the two men jumped from his car, rejoined their companions and escaped, he said. Freeman told the police his jewelry was insured.

MEXICO TO DEPORT PAPAL DELEGATE

Msgr. Caruana Charged With Having Improperly Entered Country.

By the Associated Press.

MEXICO CITY, May 15.—The Mexican Government tonight ordered the deportation of the Right Rev. George J. Caruana, Papal Nuncio in Mexico, and American citizen, on the ground that he had improperly entered Mexico by concealing his identity and mission. Msgr. Caruana denied the charge, but said he would leave for the United States tomorrow.

He declined to comment on the Mexican Government's action. Neither would the American embassy issue any statement.

The entry of the Papal Nuncio into Mexico by way of Juarez caused the dismissal of the Mexican immigration chief at that city. He had been warned, according to reports, not to permit Msgr. Caruana to enter.

Msgr. Caruana's deportation is the climax of the present phase of the religious situation due to the enforcement of the constitutional regulation regarding the clergy and represents the latest development in the movement which began more than half a century ago, to curb the power of the Catholic Church in Mexico and establish Mexican control of all Mexican religion.

The Papal representative at one time was secretary to Cardinal Dougherty at Philadelphia. Msgr. Caruana is the archbishop of Porto Rico and the Antilles. He is a former Brooklyn, N. Y., priest.

FIVE ALLEGED BOOKMAKERS ARRESTED IN FOUR RAIDS

Police Keep Telephones Busy Inquiring of Reporters Who Won Derby.

The gambling squad arrested five alleged bookmakers in four raids yesterday afternoon. It is said all of the men had marked racing forms and pads on the Kentucky Derby in their possession. Despite these arrests, the gambling squad reported that there seemed to be far less betting, of the open-and-above board variety at least, this year than last.

The men arrested were: Cecil and Peter Powers, brothers, in a room of a cigar stand at 11 North Ninth street; Louis Molasky, at 18½ North Ninth; Christ Kelm, in a saloon at 712 Pine street; Frank Bunyan, in the rear room of a cigar store at 110 North Eighth street.

And about the time the gambling squad was bringing in its victims, the telephones in the press room at Police Headquarters were kept continuously ringing by policemen who wanted to know "who won the Derby?"

WEBSTER GROVES BOND ISSUE PROPOSITIONS LOSE AGAIN

Bond issue propositions totaling $290,000 were defeated by Webster Groves voters yesterday for the second time this year. A proposal of $65,000 for a new city hall was given 1093 favorable and 588 adverse votes, failing of the necessary two-thirds majority. An item for $225,000 for parks and playgrounds got 882 favorable and 7[illegible] adverse votes. The items were defeated once before on March 1[illegible]

E. W. GROVE TELLS HOW HIS DAUGHTER WAS WOOED AND WON IN 48 HOURS

He Deposes That Fred L. Seely Came to House in High Hat, Prince Albert and White Silk Vest.

2 WILLS MISSING, MILLIONAIRE SAYS

Set Out to Make Chill Tonic but People Grew Too Healthy, So He Turned to Remedy for Colds.

Edwin W. Grove, millionaire president of the Paris Medicine Co., testifying in the suit filed against him by his son-in-law, Fred L. Seely, for participation in his estate, told Thursday how Seely came to his home "with a Prince Albert coat and a silk hat and a white silk vest," and in 48 hours was engaged to his daughter. The suit is estimated to involve values between $5,000,000 and $6,000,000.

Depositions of Grove and of other witnesses have been taken during the past week in the office of William H. Allen, former Judge of the St. Louis Court of Appeals, the Boatmen's Bank Building. Seely's suit, filed last December, is to enforce an agreement which Seely declares was made between him and Grove, requiring Grove to provide in his will that Seely should have his choice between control of the medicine company and all Grove's holdings outside that company.

Wooed and Won in 48 Hours.

Seely became Grove's son-in-law in February, 1898. Testifying as to events before that time, but giving no dates, Grove said:

"Some time within a year after our first meeting in Detroit he came to Asheville, N. C., where I was staying. He came with a Prince Albert coat and a silk hat and a white silk vest. He first met my daughter at this meeting. When he came dressed up, as I stated, and it was only 48 hours before he became engaged to her."

Replying to Seely's allegations, Grove denied that he promised to give Seely his option between control of the medicine company and his other property. He said that his first will, which contained provisions for Seely, was not based on an ypromise made to Seely.

Grove denied that, as alleged by Seely, the Paris Med'cine Co., needed rehabilitation, and that for that reason he promised Seely unusual inducements to remain with it.

Both his first will, made in 1901 or 1902, and his second will, have disappeared, Grove testified, and he had sought for them in vain. His third will is in the hands of the St. Louis Union Trust Co.

Drawer Taken From Cabinet.

The first will, Grove said, was placed in a cabinet of the Paris Medicine Co. He has made a search for it, and has found that the drawer containing it was taken out, and could not be found. He has also looked elsewhere for it, he said.

The second will, he said, was drawn by the late A. C. Stewart, then his attorney, and he has looked for it at the St. Louis Union Trust Co. and in his files at Asheville, but has been unable to find it.

In describing his first two wills from memory, Grove said:

"At that time (1901 or 1902, when the first will was made) the company was not very large, and my salary was $5000 a year. I remember providing in the will that Mr. Seely, in the event of my death, the responsibility would be increased, should have a salary after death of $10,000 a year. It provided also that in the event he got the profits of the business fall short of what they were at the time of my death, when he would take exclusive control, he should be removed from general management of the business."

Told Seely About Changing Will.

When he decided to change his will, Grove said, he told Seely of his decision. "I do not remember the date," he said, "but it was in August, and my reason for telling him was that I though he would be pleased at the provision I had made to take care of his children, particularly his daughters.

"In my second will, Mrs. Grove, Mrs. Seely and my son (Edwin Jr.) were given a one-third interest in the estate, with a provision that at the death of Mrs. Grove her interest should be equally divided between Mrs. Seely and her children and Edwin and his children. I cannot remember what Mr. Seely said in reply, but I do remember that he showed no appreciation for what I said about taking care of his wife and children equally with my son and his children." He said Seely made no objection to his plan.

Grove, in telling of the founding of the Paris Medicine Co., said:

"I had a little retail drug business in Paris, Tenn., just barely making a living, when I got up a little invention, tasteless quinine. As a poor man and a poor boy,

In describing his first two wills from memory, Grove said:

"At that time (1901 or 1902, when the first will was made) the company was not very large, and my salary was $5000 a year. I remember providing in the will that Mr. Seely, in the event of my death, and the responsibility would be increased, should have a salary after the death of $10,000 a year. It provided also that in the event he took the profits of the business fall short of what they were at the time of my death, when he would have exclusive control, he should be removed from general management of the business."

Told Seely About Changing Will.

When he decided to change his will, Grove said, he told Seely of his decision. "I do not remember now," he said, "but it was in Asheville, and my reason for telling him was that I though he would be pleased at the provision I had made to take care of his children, particularly his daughters.

"In my second will, Mrs. Grove, Mr. Seely and my son (Edwin Jr.) were given a one-third interest in the estate, with a provision that at the death of Mrs. Grove her interest should be equally divided between Mrs. Seely and her children and Edwin and his children. I cannot remember what Mr. Seely said in reply, but I do remember that he showed no appreciation for what I had about taking care of his wife and children equally with my son and his children." He said Seely had no objection to his plan.

Grove, in telling of the founding of the Paris Medicine Co., said:

"I had a little retail drug business in Paris, Tenn., just barely making a living, when I got up a little invention, tasteless quinine. I was a poor man and a poor boy, and I conceived the idea that whoever could produce a tasteless chill tonic, his fortune was made. The company was started on the money of friends who trusted me when I did not have anything to put into it. We ran the business in Paris about three years, and moved to St. Louis after the business had become too big to handle in a little town.

"After we came to St. Louis it looked like all the chills in the country dropped out. We did not have anybody at that time to pray for people to have chills, and it was necessary for me to get up something, or go back to the old friends in Paris and say, 'I am a failure, I have lost your money,' because the overhead expenses were eating up what profits we could make on chill tonic, when they did not have any chills in the country.

"My conclusion was that there was never any year that people did not have more or less colds and grip, and that led to getting up what, after a great deal of thought, I named Laxative Bromo Quinine tablets. A name, which will appear to the people as the thing they need for any complaint they have, is three-quarters of the battle in advertising.

Built Up Without Cost.

"The first three months of advertising, the profits on Bromo Quinine paid for all the cost of advertising, the cost of manufacturing, and a small profit besides, so that it never cost the Paris Medicine Co. one dollar, up to this date, to build up the large business that we have all over the world.

"As far as we were able to pay for it, the method adopted was newspaper advertising. We had a few men out that tacked up some cards along the road, but the records show that as we increased the amount of advertising the sales on Bromo Quinine increased in proportion."

He said it was 10 or 11 years after the business started that he met Seely at the establishment of Parke, Davis & Co., in Detroit. He went there to consult the experts of the company about compression of the tablets of medicine, and he was introduced to Seely, who had charge of compressing tablets.

Much of the questioning of Grove, in several days of depositions, was about the relations of Seely to the medicince business, and to Grove's hotel enterprises in Asheville. Seely took charge of Grove Park Inn after he retired from the medicine company in 1917.

Letters Praising Seely.

Several letters were shown, which Grove acknowledged writing to Seely and to Mrs. Seely, commending Seely's ability. Explaining these letters, he said:

"Mr. Seely's disposition was such that if you were not always praising him to the world as a great man, it was impossible to get along with him. It was on account of my daughter, and wanting to keep family relations in god shape, that I wrote a good many things, possibly, that I did not really mean."

CHANGED MIND ABOUT SUICIDE

Missing Husband Is Alive, Woman Notifies Police.

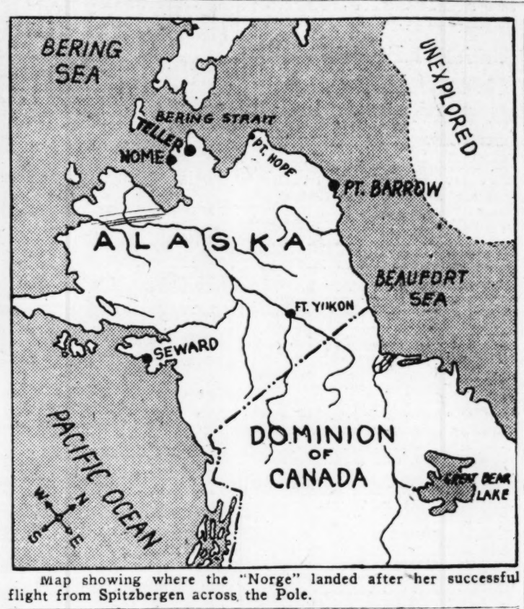
Police were notified by Mrs. May L. Mann of 3617 North Broadway yesterday that they need no longer search for the body of her husband, James, whose automobile and a note saying that he intended jumping in the river were found on the Free Bridge May 5.

According to Mrs. Mann, her husband was seen in a restaurant a block from their home Friday night by her grandmother, who spoke to him. Questioned concerning the suicide note, Mann explained that he had changed his mind and was now living in East St. Louis, Mrs. Mann said.

Amundsen's Career and Details of Airship in Which He Made Record Journey

CAPT. ROALD AMUNDSEN.

LINCOLN C. ELLSWORTH.



Map showing where the "Norge" landed after her successful flight from Spitzbergen across the Pole.

NORGE IS OF SEMI-RIGID TYPE, HYDROGEN FILLED

Amundsen Airship Originally Was Built for Use of Italian Government; Cost $75,000.

The airship Norge, in which Capt. Amundsen and his companions are now on their way across the top of the world, is a semirigid dirigible, designed and built for the Italian Government by Col. Umberto Nobile, pilot in charge on the transpolar flight. She originally was christened the N-1 and fitted with two-passenger cabins, one luxuriously appointed for the use of King Victor Emanuel III.

She was contracted for by Amundsen and Ellsworth at a price at $75,000 shortly after they returned from their attempted flight to the Pole with airplanes in 1925. A complete overhauling and reconditioning of the ship followed, the N-1 shedding everything in the way of furnishings that could be spared in order to make room and save weight for fuel and other indispensable supplies. Her two cabins were thrown into one. When she left Rome on the first stage of her great adventure, renamed in honor of Amundsen's native Norway, the Norge boasted but one chair, the throne of her navigator, and the rest of the crew were forced to stand or sit in cramped positions on the floor whenever the ship was in flight.

The Norge is 347 feet long and has a gas capacity of 724,500 cubic feet—a little less than one-third that of the Los Angeles. She has 30 fuel tanks, each containing 67 gallons. It was planned to carry 600 pounds more of gasoline in tin cans.

Will Have Fuel to Spare.

This amount, it is said, is sufficient to drive the Norge 65 hours at 50 miles an hour, more than 3000 miles, whereas the contemplated cruise over the Pole and through the center of the unexplored area of 1,000,000 square miles, which is Amundsen's real goal, is less than 2000 miles. The Norge should have a comfortable reserve of fuel to seek land in the unexplored spot at the top of the world and still be able to reach Point Barrow or even Nome without difficulty.

The ship is driven by three 250-horsepower Malbach motors. Larger engines of the same make brought the Los Angeles across the Atlantic when she was delivered to the navy.

In order to carry the maximum amount of fuel, Capt. Amundsen and Col. Nobile have substituted gasoline for the water ballast ordinarily carried. This change was made at Kings Bay, water having been employed on the earlier legs of the Norge's flights from Rome.

Capt. Amundsen has said frequently he would take his time on the flight to Alaska, investigating anything en route that is deemed worth investigating and stopping frequently to make accurate observations. He has variously estimated the length of the flight he is now making as 50 hours to three days. An airship, unlike an airplane, can stop in the air for a look around and if weather conditions are favorable can hover over one spot and take more accurate observations than are possible from a speeding plane.

Hydrogen Lifts Airship.

The Norge is filled with hydrogen. Hence she is able to carry more fuel and other supplies—Amundsen has sledges, tents, firearms and emergency rations aboard on which he and his men can subsist several months in case they are forced down on the ice—but she is more apt to catch fire and explode than if filled with the safer but less buoyant helium now required in all lighter-than-air craft of the United States.

Capt. Amundsen's original plans called for a crew of 16 men on the trans-Polar flight, but these may have been altered at the last moment. It is unlikely he would attempt the flight with less than 14 men or more than 18. Eighteen were aboard when the Norge reached King's Bay from Vadso, but this was only a 700-mile flight.

In addition to Amundsen, Lincoln Ellsworth and Col. Nobile, those who undoubtedly were included in the ship's complement are Lieut. Hjalmar Riser-Larsen, second pilot of the Norge, and the man who brought the Amundsen expedition safely out of the North last summer; Lieut. Oscar Omdal, pilot of the Dornier flying boat which was left in the Arctic; Capt. Oscar Wistin, commander of Capt. Amundsen's ship, Maud, and Lieut. Emil Hargan, Amundsen's nephew, Gustave, probably is included. About five Italians are in the crew. Col. Nobile's terrier Titina, chaperone of the Norge from Rome, is considered indispensable.

The Norge's course takes her through the area Capt. George H. Wilkins plans to explore with his three-motored airplane, the Detroiter, and if successfully followed will carry Amundsen over the "pole of inaccessibility," which is the center of this unknown territory.

Began Voyage April 10.

The initial stages of the Norge's "Rome to Nome" flight were a series of brilliant achievements for her Italian-Norwegian crew and commanders. She left Rome April 10 at 9:30 a. m., and arrived without stop at Pulham, England, April 11 at 2 p. m., after a flight estimated at 1400 miles. April 13 she left Pulham and late at night flew to Oslo, capital of Norway, arriving there the afternoon of April 14, and leaving early next morning for Leningrad, arriving there April 15 at 8:30 p. m. She remained at the flying field at Trotsk, a Leningrad suburb, until May 5, waiting for completion of a hangar and mooring mast at Kings Bay, and favorable weather. She left that day for Vadso, 700 miles distant, arriving there to refuel, May 6, and continuing next day another 700 miles to Spitzbergen, which she "hit on the nose," though navigating above a trackless sea. A radio compass was credited with the feat.

The Norge differs from a rigid airship of the Los Angeles type in that her envelope depends upon the hydrogen within it for its shape. Her motors, fuel tanks and control car are suspended beneath the buoyant gas bag by cables. The envelope itself is flexible, although it has a duralumin shield at the nose which breaks the wind and protects the rest of the ship.

Col. Nobile believes this flexibility makes the Norge more suitable for polar exploration than a dirigible of the rigid type, which will not give to sudden strains without breaking. Flyers of the Zeppelin school champion the rigids.

ONLY ONE THRILL LEFT FOR ROALD AMUNDSEN AND THAT IS MARRIAGE

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, May 15.

ONLY one great adventure is left for Capt. Roald Amundsen, conqueror of the North and South Poles, and that is marriage.

Just before his trans-Polar flight, Amundsen, who is 58 years old, was asked what thrill would be left for him after he had conquered both Poles.

"None, probably, but marriage," he said, "although I have not yet found the girl. Certainly I think I should then retire and let younger men do something for flying is but started and there will be many new fields to conquer in that realm."

eral weeks before steamers from the south can reach there and take the explorers and dirigible to the states. Wheather Amundsen and some of his companions will choose to mush over Port Clarence ice and overland here, is not known. Nome is ice-free long before Teller.

Before Amundsen left the United States after his recent lecture tour he predicted he would spend the Fourth of July in Seattle. It is not known here whether he will attempt to do that.

War Department Receives Word That Norge Is at Teller, Alaska.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, May 15.—The War Department announced today that the Amundsen-Ellsworth polar dirigible Norge was at Teller, Alaska. Communication between Nome and the Norge at Teller was established at 11 p. m., May 14, Alaska time (4 a. m. today, St. Louis time).

"The office of the chief signal officer," said the announcement, "is in receipt of a message from Nome, Alaska, to the effect that the Norge is at Teller, Alaska ,about 75 miles northwest of Nome."

Praise of Capt. Roald Amundsen, Lincoln C. Ellsworth, and the officers and crew of the Norge were mixed with the expressions of gratification at the news that the first airship to fly from Spitzbergen to Alaska across the North Pole was safe in American territory.

Since the sudden discontinuance of radio messages from the Norge more than two days ago there had grown a feeling of uneasiness. To indicate the eagerness of the officials for news of the Norge, the White House relayed to President Coolidge at Williamsburg, Va., a wireless message received from Ellsworth. Ellsworth is a cousin of Vice President Dawes, who has kept his office busy inquiring for word from the big ship. The President promptly sent his congratulations.

The feat of the Norge brought the highest praise from the National Geographic Society, through Dr. Gilbert Grosvenor, its president.

"Not since the great voyages of the 16th and 17th centuries," Dr. Grosvenor said, "has any explorer made such a long traverse across the unknown as this 2750-mile journey of the Norge from Spitzbergen to Alaska.

"Amundsen, Ellsworth and Nobile, as well as Commander Byrd, have added as dramatic and important chapters to world exploration and scientific progress as the greatest navigators of history.

"We take pride in the fact that American energy and American talent were so largely associated in this extraordinary triple alliance of Norway, Italy and America in courageous and scientific endeavor."

The statement related to the part played in the flights by the bubble sextant invented by Commander Byrd and the sun compass, invented by Albert H. Rumstead, of the Geographic Society and "the sportsmanship evinced by both men, and illustrated in Byrd's presentation to his fellow explorer of both these instruments."

Rear Admiral Moffett, chief of the Bureau of Aeronautics of the Navy pointed to the advantages of lighter-than-air craft for polar flights.

Deaf Hear Instantly

Amazing Invention Brings Immediate Relief to Those Who Are Deaf.

A wonderful invention which enables the hard of hearing to hear all sounds as clearly and distinctly as a child, has been perfected by the Dictograph Products Corporation, Suite 1392, 14 E. Jackson Bl., Chicago, Illinois. There is no waiting, no delay, no danger, but quick, positive, instantaneous results—you hear instantly. So positive are the makers that everyone who is hard of hearing will be amazed and delighted with this remarkable invention, the Acousticon, that they are offering to send it absolutely free for 10 days' trial. No deposit—no C. O. D.—no obligation whatever. If you suffer, take advantage of their liberal free trial offer. Send them your name and address today.

SYSTEMATIC PREPARATION KEYNOTE OF NORWEGIAN'S SUCCEESS AS AN EXPLORER

He Is Only 58; Perhaps He Will Settle Down, but Not as Long as There Are New Spots to Investigate.

Should one say to Roald Amundsen, as many will, "You are the world's greatest adventurer!" he would smile until his reddened cheeks furrowed, as if with sledge tracks, and reply "Thank you, no."

For him this latest adventure must seem a sly trick put over on the blizzards and icebergs and sub-zero temperatures of the North. There is magic in it. He pops off in an airship for the North Pole and after drifting belatedly beyond that ghostly horizon while all the world worries, he bobs up again, safe in Alaska.

This time there will be no talk of treks across the icefields; no calculations of so many sledges and so many dogs and so many kilometers marched a day. Amundsen has brought his arctic exploration up to date. It used to be a very primitive business with him. When he was making the name he holds, a name honored above all adventurers living, there was plenty of talk about dogs and sledges and snow-blindness and marches.

Opened Northwest Passage.

He opened the Northwest Passage with an ice-bucking sloop and seven men, following a trail from Europe to Alaska on which stout men have died. With a sledge and a team of dogs he mushed across the tundra of King William land to locate the Magnetic Pole. On the good ship Fram, blackened from years of frowning weather, he sailed South, and then made the marvelous march to the South Pole. That was a race of nations, Norway, Germany, England, Japan and Australia—Amundsen and his four men got there first. Undaunted by perils and hardships, the famous Norwegian turned back to to Arctic seas and went with the steamer Maud to drift across the North Pole.

Aged by years on the longest trail a man ever walked across the earth; having stood at one top of the world; knowing the death that always threatens explorers; his hair turned white from sufferings, it seemed time for Amundsen to quit. But did he?

New Way to Beat the North.

He wanted to try a new way to beat the North. He went in for airplanes. He had placed his country's flag at the South Pole with numb and weakened hands after toiling for two months across the antarctic plateau. He would now proceed to drop the ensign of King Haaken from the clouds upon the North Pole after a flight of 15 hours. Two months! Fifteen hours!

It is high tribute to the daring youth that has always lived in this man of 54 that he should have forsaken the dog sledge for the airship, and after failing and nearly losing his life in an unsuccessful flight with airplanes, tried again and succeeded with the Norge.

Those who have talked with Amundsen remark first of all on his youthfulness. The spirit of adventure in him is young, restless and bold. It flashes from his eyes, and they are as blue as chips of virgin ice. His nose is high-bridged and prominent, a bit blue-veined and battered from many freezings and thawings. His skin is ruddy and when a smile spreads, that wind-toughened epidermis of his breaks up like floe ice in front of a plunging ship. He is of medium height and knotty-muscled. His voice he uses with reluctance and mistrust at first—he is won slowly to conversation. Silent hours on the trail have caused that. Once interested in a subject, however, he speaks well, albeit in broken English, and has a forcefulness of gesture.

Born July 16, 1872.

Amundsen was born in Sarpsburgh, Norway, July 16, 1872. He came of exploring, roving stock. His father was a sea captain and ship builder. The family wanted to make of young Roald a great surgeon. He submitted to the extent of studying a year at the University of Christiania. But at the age of 19 he went to sea in a whaling ship. Followed six years of this and then he saw his chance to sail beyond the North Atlantic. He signed as first officer of Gerlach's South Polar expedition. This gave him a bit of look-see, and he liked it very much. When he returned to Norway he was planning an expedition of his own.

It was a laughably foolhardy project he devised—so his friends thought. He wanted to find the old Northwest Passage that ancient mariners had spun large dreams about—the fabled short route to the East.

McClure, an Englishman, had won $50,000 offered by the British Parliament by sailing in 1853 from the Bering Sea eastward to Europe. But no one had sailed westward along this passage. Hendrik Hudson tried it, but his crew mutinied. Sir John Franklin and his brave crew of 220 vanished down this perilous highway and were seen no more.

Buys 47-Ton Sloop.

Young Amundsen raised $30,000, most of it his own money, and bought a 47-ton sloop, called the Gjoa, which had been used for hunting walruses. The boat had a small gasoline engine and in her he installed his crew of seven men. He sailed up Baffin Bay, through Lancaster Sound, Barrow Strait, Peel Sound, James Ross Strait, Rae Strait, Simpson Strait, Deasc Strait, Coronation Gulf, Dolphin and Union Straits to King Point into the Mackenzie River delta. Here he met some whalers who had been caught in the ice and they told him of a break between Norway and Sweden.

The youthful Viking decided to walk 700 miles south to the Yukon telegraph line to see if his family in Norway was all right. The captain of the whaler went with him and together they marched on snowshoes those 700 miles to Eagle City, Alaska, in the dead of winter; a trip that has not been equaled since for daring and test of endurance.

He afterwards rejoined his crew and they proceeded to King William land, where, frozen in the ice for two years Amundsen located the true magnetic pole very near the spot where Sir John Ross claimed to have found it in 1831.

Preparation for Expedition.

As an example of Amundsen's care in preparing for expeditions, it developed later that he had studied several years the subject of magnetism under Prof. Neumeyer of Hamburg, Prof. Schmidt at Berlin and under Prof. Borgen at Wilhelmshafen.

The world became interested in Amundsen after these feats and he was ranked with Peary, Greeley and Nansen as an arctic explorer. But students of the Arctic were to have further and stronger proof of his ability as an explorer.

In 1911 there was a great to-do over the race for the South Pole. Four expeditions were in the field, bent on carrying man's knowledge of the Antarctic beyond Shackleton's "farthest south" of 88 degrees and 23 minutes.

Amundsen had formed an expedition to explore north polar regions and had loaded a vessel called the Fram with 110 dogs and eight men. He had arranged his personnel and equipment with the greatest care. A special deck had been constructed for the dogs so as to give them fresh air on the voyage and extra rations were provided for them. Sledges and other gear had been tested meticulously by Amundsen. When the Fram reached the Madeira Islands he suddenly changed his plans and turned south.

Makes 16,000-Mile Run.

He ran 16,000 miles from Norway to a point on the south polar continent where he established a base. Then he began a systematic plan of plotting out the route to the pole. He left his base with 110 dogs and seven men on February 10, 1911.

Between that date and April 11 the party made caches of provisions at 80 degrees, 81 degrees and 82 degrees. These caches were marked with flags four and a third miles to the east and west.

Before the Winter arrived Amundsen had cached 60,000 kilos of seal meat in depots. The party dug in for the Winter then and did not start the real dash for the pole until October 20.

It was decided to send three men and all but 52 dogs east to King Edward Land and strip the dash party to a less cumbersome outfit. Amundsen and his four companions who had been picked to make the final dash took four sledges and supplies enough to last four months. At every degree of latitude as they went south they cached a store of provisions for the return. They also built pillars of snow at intervals to guide them on the way back.

Amundsen prescribed a rigid schedule for himself and men. At first they traveled fifteen miles in five hours, fed the dogs and themselves and mended equipment for two hours then slept 17 hours. This proved to be too much rest, so they marched 15 miles in six hours, ate and worked on gear for two hours, slept six hours, breakfasted and marched again.

System!

It carried the Amundsen party toward the pole at an average of 16 miles a day. In order to conserve food and lighten burdens, the foresighted leader had arranged to take enough dogs so that some could be killed.

Party Reaches South Pole.

When the party reached 85½ degrees 24 dogs were slain and used for food. As they neared the pole Amundsen reported coming to a huge plateau guarded by a glacial rim.

They marched across the plateau and on Dec. 14 in the afternoon reached the approximate location of the South Pole.

Systematic Amundsen, to make sure he would step on the scientifically correct spot, walked across and recrossed a large area of ice. After taking copious observation and ascertaining that the South Pole is a point on a continent and not in a polar sea, Amundsen and his men started back.

They made the return march easily, having plenty of food and following a charted path.

They did not realize that 34 days later Capt. R. F. Scott of the British expedition and his men would reach the Pole, see their flags and start back along a route they never lived to follow to its end.

Amundsen returned because of careful planning of supplies. Scott's supplies ran low, he lost his way and perished, after writing generous records to show that Amundsen had beaten him to the pole.

Scott's Records Proved Point.

When word went out from Hobart, Tasmania, that Amundsen had discovered the South Pole, there were many doubters, but the finding of Scott's records later firmly established his claim.

Amundsen's next venture was to seek a channel in the ice and drift across the North Pole. He chartered the specially built steamer Maud and on June 28, 1918, set out for the North.

He passed Dixson Island and vanished—the first of his disappearances which awakened the anxiety of all men who had come to admire his courageous adventurings. For a year and a half nothing was heard of him or his crew. Then he appeared at Anadir, a trading post on the Bering Sea in Eastern Siberia. Again he vanished and in July, 1921, suddenly came to view in Seattle, as if he had taken a long dive under the Arctic Ocean and come up in the Pacific. He explained that the Maud had been locked in the ice at various places along the Siberian coast for three years. He brought the ship back to Nome and had come to the United States to repair his finances.

Then began one of his lecture tours of one-night stands, by which this man of the frosty unknown has endeavored to wring from a grudging civilization the means to continue his explorations.

Sets Out Again With Plane.

He gathered a little money together, set out again in the Maud with an airplane given him by an American builder and sought to drift or fly to the Pole. Both projects failed.

Not at all discouraged and convinced that the way to the Pole was through the air, Amundsen came back to this country for another lecture tour. He fell in with Lincoln Ellsworth, young millionaire and aviation enthusiast, who agreed to finance an attempt to fly to the pole with heavier-than-air craft.

Thus was born the dramatic flight in the Summer of 1924 when Amundsen and party in two airplanes set out for the pole. They were forced down when 151 miles from their goal, one ship was wrecked and they mushed out in the other ship after an absence of 28 days, and when even the most optimistic prophets had given them up for dead.

Back to the lecture platform he went again, this ever-enthusiastic Norseman to beguile with dress suit and modest speech more dollars from stay-at-homes.

He turned up in St. Louis last October, still smiling, still hugely childlike in his faith in adventure. It had played him many mean tricks, had let him down hungry on many an icefield miles from God knows where, but to adventure he was true. He would go back as soon as he raised $300,000.

Decides to Use Airship.

"This time I shall try an airship," he said, "you can't set an airplane down on an icefield without crashing, and if you do make a landing you'll never get up again."

Ellsworth, following him in hero-worshiping modesty, contributed $100,000 to the second expedition. The Norge was bought. Amundsen stood off creditors who had pressed him into bankruptcy proceedings, and away he went, to play with danger in the Arctic wastes once more.

Amundsen has never married. In 1922 he adopted two Siberian girls and sent them to Norway to be educated. Perhaps some day he may go home to a fireside and settle down, but not while he is only 54 or 60 or 70 and there is a spot on earth worth exploring.

VICTORS IN POLISH REVOLT ORGANIZE A NEW CABINET

Marshal Pilsudski, Heading Troops That Captured Warsaw, Is Made Minister of War.

PREPARATION AGAINST COUNTER REVOLUTION

New President to Be Elected —Heads of Overthrown Government Flee From Capital.

By the Associated Press.

WARSAW, May 15.—A new Cabinet, headed by Prof. Charles Bartel as prime minister, was formed tonight by the revolutionists under Marshal Pilsudski who have captured Warsaw. August Zaleski, former ambassador to Rome, was named temporary minister of foreign affairs. Marshall Pilsudski took over the portfolio of minister of war.

Prime Minister Bartel announced that the new Cabinet which will be sworn in tomorrow would remain in office until after the election of a new president for the republic.

Old Government in Flight.

Confronted with sanguinary civil strife, the disruption of the army and the passible invasion of the Polish frontiers, President Wojciechowski lost little time in making up his mind to resign from office. Premier Witos and his Ministry also resigned and followed the President in flight Friday night.

A hastily convoked association of the ministry debated the question of further resistance to Marshal Pilsudski, who already held control of Warsaw and who had occupied the principal public buildings. The President of the republic finally confronted the Premier and his fellow members in the Cabinet with the choice between opposition to the victorious Marshal or surrender.

A communique issued by Premier Witos announced that the President and Cabinet unanimously voted in favor of surrender. President Wojciechowski then made his way out of the city, proceeding to Wilansow, a few miles outside the capital.

Marshal Pilsudski, who was formerly President of Poland, made the announcement tonight that he proposes to stabilize the army and carry out his measures in a constitutional way. It is understood he will retain only sufficient garrison troops in Warsaw to ward off a possible counter-revolution which it has been reported is being organized at Posen by Gen. Haller and Gen. Sikorski.

A Speedy Revolution.

The fight for political supremacy in Poland, which began Wednesday, was short and sharp. Many of the victims were buried today and a great number of wounded are in the Warsaw hospitals under the direction of an American nurse, Miss Helen Bridge of the Warsaw nursing school.

The political situation in Poland, despite the surrender of the Government, remains uncertain. Parliament is so divided in consequence of the electoral law providing for proportional representation for all parties, that it may be as difficult for Pilsudski, as it was for Count Skrzymski, former Premier, to find a stable majority to support his Government.

No Americans Hurt.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, May 15.—The American legation in Warsaw telegraphed the State Department:

"The President and Cabinet have resigned. The President and all but two of the Cabinet Ministers are out of Warsaw. The general strike is over and all public utilities are functioning except the tramways and trains which await repair of rails. Absolute quiet and order prevail in Warsaw.

"The Speaker of the Diet, in accordance with the provisions of the Constitution, has assumed the presidency during the interim. A Pilsudsky Cabinet has taken charge of the Government departments. The country is quiet.

"More than one hundred were killed and several hundred were wounded. No Americans were killed or wounded."

Socialists Back Pilsudski.

By the Associated Press.

KATTOWITZ, Upper Silesia, Poland, May 15.—The German and Polish Socialists here have passed resolutions agreeing to act in cooperation, in case a call comes for action in the present Polish disturbances, which is interpreted as indicating they will support Marshal Pilsudski.

Several detachments of Government troops have arrived to quell any possible uprising.

Demoralization of the railroads and a possible miners' strike threaten to tie up the coal fields here which are the principal source of Poland's coal supply.

A Polish consular official traced the causes of the revolution, led by Pilsudski, to fundamental weaknesses in the Republican constitution, which failed to give the President power to dissolve Parliament.

'Because of the multiplicity of political parties, no Cabinet could effect energetic legislation," he said. "Every Premier has bartered or traded with political factions, making a fixed course impossible. With the currency falling and the economic crisis increasing, cries for a dictator arose everywhere."

New Traffic Engineer

REYBURN P. HOFFMANN.

R. P. HOFFMAN MADE TRAFFIC ENGINEER

Gets $4000 a Year Post Here to Devise Ways to Relieve Congestion.

Reyburn P. Hoffmann, St. Louis architect, of 3633 Meramec street, was appointed yesterday traffic engineer of the Department of Streets and Sewers by Director Brooks at a salary of $4000 a year. The position was created recently to provide for a study of the steps necessary to improve the traffic facilities of the city.

Hoffmann is 35 years old and was educated in St. Louis public schools and at the College of Engineering of the University of Illinois. He has been a member of city plan commissions throughout the Middle West, and is credited with having worked out the details of the major street plan of St. Louis under the supervision of Harland Bartholomew. He is also a member of the Executive Committee of the St. Lou's Safety Council.

Loss $2,000,000,000 a Year.

Discussing the problem of traffic congestion yesterday Hoffmann said the burden placed upon the streets an dhighways by the widespread use of pleasure and commercial vehicles is in many cases far beyond their capacity for safe and economical movement. It is estimated, he said, that $2,000,000,000 annually is lost to the United States by fatal accidents, injuries, property damage and lost time due to congestion of traffic. This economic waste has led to the establishment by the National Government and by large cities of organized bureaus and departments to study the causes and to make such recommendations as will reduce this loss to the minimum. St. Louis being one of the last of the larger cities in the country to take up this work, will benefit by the experiences of other cities.

Three Plans Suggested.

The Committee on Metropolitan Traffic Facilities of the National Conference on Street and Highway Safety in 1926 recommends that the traffic program contain a transit plan covering the facilities for the mass movement of population by vehicles of all classes, including rapid transit, steam railroad commuter service, street car lines, bus lines, private automobiles, and other means; a street and highway plan providing for main thoroughfares, by-pass and interconnecting thoroughfares, secondary streets, business and industrial streets and local residence streets, with any necessary enlargements and improvements required to carry the traffic with expedition and safety; and a traffic control plan to provide for the orderly improvement of facilities and measures for the safe and efficient utilization of street and highway capacity.

The studies included in this recommendation have been made for the last 10 years by the City Plan Commission. Hoffmann said, as well as those relating to parks, playgrounds, schools and zoning, as affecting the location of industrial, commercial and large housing areas.

The three important factors in determining the solution of the problem, according to Hoffmann, are: First, a searching study of existing conditions and contributing factors; second, co-operation by the city departments and other agencies directly concerned; and, third, an appreciation of the magnitude of the problem by the citizens, who are most vitally affected, and the desire on their part to bring about improved conditions in the city.

PRESIDENT URGES EXERCISE OF FULL POWERS OF STATES

Speaking at Williamsburg, Va., He Pleads for Elimination of Sectional Lines in Principal Thought.

"LIBERTY LINKED TO LOCAL GOVERNMENT"

Rights of Humanity Have Been Greatly Increased, He Asserts—Given Honorary Degree of LL.D.

By the Associated Press.

WILLIAMSBURG, Va., May 15.—The exercise of the full power and influence of the states was urged here today by President Coolidge, who at the same time, pleaded for national unity and the elimination of all sectional lines in principal thought and all actions based on geographical lines.

Speaking on the campus of William and Mary College at exercises commemorating the sesqui-centennial of the Virginia resolutions which declared for American independence, the President characterized as states as "the sheet anchors of our institutions," and called upon them to discharge their functions so faithfully that there can be a contraction, instead of an extension, of the authority of the Federal Government.

The address was interrupted by repeated outbursts of applause, especially when Mr. Coolidge declared that "no method of procedure has ever been devised by which liberty could be divorced from local self-government, no plan of centralization ever has been adopted which did not result in bureaucracy, tyranny, inflexibility, reaction and decline."

Modern Developments.

At another point a reference to present day problems was seen when the President, after recalling that the Virginians in 1776 "declared for complete independence," said:

"They could not escape the conclusion that as the individual derives his liberty from an observance of the law, so nations derive their independence and perpetuate their sovereignty from an observance of that comity by which they all are bound. As modern developments have brought the nations closer and closer together, this conclusion has become more and more unavoidable.

"While the rights of the citizen have been in no wise diminished, the rights of humanity have been very greatly increased. Our country holds to political and economic independence, but it holds to cooperation and combination in the administration of justice."

Wears Cap and Gown.

The exercises were presided over by Gov. Harry Flood Byrd of Virginia. Afterward William and Mary College conferred upon the President and the Governor the honorary degrees of Doctor of Laws. Both were in cap and gown, distinctive of their doctorates, when they were escorted to the platform, in the rear of old Sir Christopher Wren Hall by the students and faculty of the college in academic procession. It is the first honorary degree Mr. Coolidge has accepted since he became President.

The occasion included addresses by representatives of the Governors of several of the original 13 states, as well as by the spokesmen for the National Congress, including Representatives Mills of New York and Temple of Pennsylvania.

Gov. Byrd, in introducing the President, declared him to be a man who commanded the respect of the entire nation and paid tribute to the high ideals and abilities of the chief executive.

Returns to Mayflower.

Upon conclusion of the exercises, the President and Mrs. Coolidge attended a luncheon in the college dining hall, after which they left by auto to board the Mayflower. The cruise back to the National Capital will be leisurely and the yacht probably will not arrive in Washington before Monday morning.

Arriving at Yorktown this morning from Washington, Mr. Coolidge and Mrs. Coolidge and a party of guests debarked and reached Williamsburg just before the exercises began. The President was greeted by a 21-gun salute, troops from Fort Eustis preceding the presidential party down historic Duke of Gloucester Street, while above a squadron of airplanes from Langley Field soared in formation. Thousands lined the streets and applauded the President while the students greeted him with their college cheers.

NICARAGUAN TROOPS MOVE

Depart for Atlantic Coast to Engage Liberal Revolutionists.

By the Associated Press.

MANAGUA, Nicaragua, May 15.—Gen. Jose Solorzano Diaz has left for the Atlantic coast with a large detachment of troops to engage the Liberal revolutionists who recently captured Bluefields and El Bluff. The Government has dispatched 3000 troops to oppose the forces of the revolutionists which are believed to number about 1200.

Ran Three Fords Into $260,000 in Eleven Years

W. J. Brown and J. R. Cathcart Prospered in "Jitney" Business Sale of Brown Taxicab Co. Discloses.

Eleven years ago William J. Brown and J. R. Cathcart started in the "jitney" business with three Ford touring cars, running from a shed behind 5244 Cote Brilliante avenue. Yesterday the physical assets of the Brown Taxicab Co., controlled by Brown and Cathcart, were sold to the Yellow Motor Co. of St. Louis for $260,000.

The purchase includes 279 Yellow and Brown cabs and the equipment of three garages, the results of 11 years' business effort by Brown and Cathcart. The purchasing company, recently incorporated under the laws of Delaware, is headed by Fred M. Williams, an undertaker, of 4561 Delmar boulevard. The new company will operate the cabs from garages at 3320 Pine boulevard, 4554 Delmar boulevard and 4617-19 Delmar boulevard, established by Brown. The Brown company, all stock in which is held by Brown, Cathcart and members of their families, will be liquidated.

When the "jitney" craze hit St. Louis in 1915 William J. Brown, an accountant, his brother, Samuel, a mail carrier, and J. R. Cathcart, a shoeworker, between them scraped together $500 and made a first payment on three Ford cars. The machines were "jitney busses" for a time and then became "service cars." In 1913 Samuel Brown was shot to death by robbers posing as "fares" and William Brown and Cathcart went out of business for a month, but returned more determined than ever.

In 1919 the partners incorporated the Brown Taxicab Co., with 13 meter cabs. Low taxi rates were introduced by the Brown Co., and it prospered. In June, 1924, Brown and Cathcart bought in the 29 cabs of the Black and White Cab Co. here from mortgage holders, and two months later purchased the Yellow Motor Car Co. and its fleet of 97 taxis for $100,000. The company continued to expand and this year began replacements of old equipment with a new type of sedan cab.

Brown and Cathcart, during their successful climb from "jitney" operators to owners of nearly 300 taxis, weathered several serious "taxi wars," which followed wage disputes with drivers, and various moves by competitors. Now that they have sold out, neither has any plan for the future.

"Guess I'll stick around awhile and help the new fellows out if they want me to," Brown said. "After that, I don't know what I'll do."

WILL LEAVES $18,743 BEQUEST IN DOUBT

Trustee Asks Court Whether Relative or City Shall Get Mrs. Phoebe Nye's Money.

Whether fountains "where both man and beast may at all times have fresh water to drink" are to be established in this city, as mentioned in the will of Mrs. Phoebe Delilah Nye, depends on a judicial interpretation of the document.

The Mercantile Trust Co., as trustee, has a balance of $18,743 belonging to Mrs. Nye's estate for distribution but is in doubt whether to turn the fund over to the city on account of the fountain bequest or pay it to Mrs. Mabel Hillenbrand of Brooklyn, N. Y., a niece of Mrs. Nye. Accordingly the trustee yesterday, through Attorney Forest P. Tralles, filed suit in Circuit Court asking that the will be construed, the suit naming Mrs. Hillenbrand and the City of St. Louis as defendants.

Under the original provision it was clearly set forth that if neither or two heirs mentioned was alive at the expiration of the trust period the balance of the estate remaining was to be given to the city for the benevolent purpose mentioned, but if any heir or heirs survived they were to have the principal. However, a codicil made later is giving the trustee trouble. By the codicil it appears Mrs. Nye intended that the surviving heirs were to receive only $1000 each from the trust estate, the remainder of which was to be used for the fountains. In this connection the codicil recites that the "residue shall be used in the manner and purposes directed by the will." The trustee's suit says that this language complicates the case so that petitioner is uncertain how to disburse the fund.

Mrs. Nye died 11 years ago. She was the widow of Frederick W. Nye, formerly of Danville, Ill., and her estate has been held in trust for the benefit of her half-brother, Charles Maytum of Brooklyn, who died last June 2. His daughter, Mrs. Hillebrand, and his son, Edward, under the terms of the original will, were to have the property at his death. As the son died eight years ago, the daughter is the only heir. Unless the Court holds that the codicil modified the original bequest she will be entitled to the entire residue.

THREE WOMEN BRUISED AS AUTO IS OVERTURNED IN COLLISION

H. C. Woodley Drove Car That Upset Them at California Avenue and Wyoming Street.

Three women were bruised late yesterday, when an automobile in which they were riding was overturned in a collision with a machine driven by Harold C. Woodley of 3319 California avenue, at California avenue and Wyoming street.

The car occupied by the women was driven by Mrs. Adelaide Hartman, 45, of 5734 Vernon avenue. Mrs. Clara Junger, 20, and Mrs. Theresa Walt, 19, were with her at the time of the accident.

ERROR INVALIDATES ELECTION

Because a printer failed to deliver the ballots for the special election in the Frey school district, southeast of Edwardsville, last week, the election will have to be held over, County Superintendent F. M. Scott has ruled. When the ballots failed to arrive the election board wrote out ballots which were used by the voters. The proposition to build a new school building carried. It was found, however, that in their haste the writers of the informal ballots had left off the location of the site and the details of payment of bonds. Another election has been called for May 29.

DEATH THREAT SENT TO PREVENT MARRIAGE

Divorced Man's Children Admit Mailing Cartridge to Woman.

A revolver cartridge dropped out when Mrs. Katie Dietmeier of 4512 North Broadway opened a letter received in the mail Thursday. The letter was illustrated with pencil sketches of a clock, a bullet and a hand pointing to a grave and tombstone. It read:

"Say woman. You better stay away from Glover as you are timed. Stay away from the hospital or a bullet will be in your back."

"Glover," Mrs. Dietmeier surmised, was Edward G. Glover, 63-year-old Spanish-American War veteran, now in the Veterans' Hospital. He has been proposing marriage to her for three years and she hasn't said "yes." Neither has she said "no."

Angelica Street Police were called in, made an investigation, and arrested Glover's divorced wife, Mrs. Ella Glover, 56, and their children, Bryan Glover, 28, and Mrs. Florence McConnell, 29, all of 3004 Cass avenue.

Bryan Glover and Mrs. McConnell signed statements admitting their part in the correspondence and exonerating their mother. They said their father was determined to marry Mrs. Dietmeier, a widow with four children, and to turn over his $15,000 estate to her. When they learned of this they decided it would be a good idea to scare Mrs. Dietmeier. Mrs. McConnell wrote and mailed the letter, and her brother supplied the accompanying cartridge.

Mrs. Ella Glover was released when her children said she had opposed sending the letter. The children are held for the Postoffice Inspectors. They say they did not know it was against the law to mail threatening letters.

ST. LOUIS GOOD WILL TOUR ENDS AT HOT SPRINGS, ARK.

HOT SPRINGS, Ark., May 15.—The itinerary of a week's tour through Arkansas and Louisiana of 100 St. Louis business executives was completed with a meeting here tonight. Thirty-eight cities had been visited. The story of the last day's voyage on the special train would start exactly alike for eight towns. "Fair flower girls showered us with roses.

After the first three short stops the delegates looked like walking flower shows. The towns visited beginning at 7 a. m. were Texarkana, Hope, Prescott, Gurdon, Arkadelphia, Malvern, Benton and Hot Spring. At Texarkana the twin Mayors with their reception committees met us, H. S. Brashears for Texas and G. T. Conway for Arkansas. The tourists had the thrill of marching up State Line street in double column, one line of men in Texas other in Arkansas. Two hours were spent in visiting business houses.

Hope Arkansas pointed with pride to their 3000 acre peach farm to move the crop of which will require 2200 cars. The crop is valued at $250,000.

Gurdon, Ark. was elated at a report just received of the bringing in of an oil well five miles distant. At Hot Springs which was reached at 4:30 p. m. the St. Louis representatives marched up Central avenue for a mile from the depot to the Arlington Hotel, and dispersed among the business houses until time for the big smoker staged in the auditorium theater. Rev. Charles Collins introduced the principal speaker for Hot Springs, F. Leslie Body, manager of Chamber of Commerce whose subject was why we led the 19 national parks. The principal speakers for St. Louis were John B. Hall and Judge John D. Edwards. The party will arrive in St. Louis at 11 o'clock tomorrow morning.

MAYOR TO MEET WEDNESDAY WITH BRIDGE COMMITTEE

Miller Said to Be Sympathetic With Criticism of Proposed Ordinance by Cotter.

DRAFTERS READY TO ANSWER OPPOSITION

Ordinance Result of Six Years of Study of Eads and Municipal Bridges Traffic Exchange.

Mayor Miller will meet Wednesday noon with the sub-committee that drafted the proposed ordinance for the exchange of uses of the Eads and Municipal bridges to express his criticism, if any, of the ordinance. The sub-committee is expected to reply whether or not the criticism can be satisfied by changes.

The Mayor so far has withheld any statement. It is believed that he is sympathetic with some of the criticism of William Cotter, president of the Manufacturers Railway, a belt line competitor of the Terminal railroad, particularly that the ordinance would perpetuate the "tariff" rate charge of the Terminal, regardless of the cost of moving freight over the river. The meeting will be held in Hotel Jefferson.

Experts on Committee.

The ordinance is the net result of more than six years of study and work. In 1919, W. Frank Carter, then president of the Chamber of Commerce, was told by the president of a railroad entering St. Louis that the railroads were prepared to enter discussions with the city to use the Municipal bridge "as best would serve the unselfish interests of all." Carter thereupon appointed a large committee—there now are 27 members—representing the municipalities of St. Louis and East St. Louis and business organizations within them and having on it representatives of the railroads.

It was clear early in discussion, that the committee had not sufficient authentic facts at hand with which to approach any adequate solution of a terminals reorganization. Accordingly a committee of engineers was appointed upon which the railroads, the city and the Chamber of Commerce had representation. This committee spent two and one-half years in study and reported a comprehensive plan for the reorganization of terminals based upon exchange of uses of the bridges and laying down a pattern for future terminal improvement, to which, it was announced, the railroads subscribed.

That was in 1922. Since then, a sub-committee of the general committee has been at work on the ordinance. All meetings were secret, but it was understood that legal and other differences to be composed among so many parties interested was the cause of delays.

Ordinance Made Public Friday.

At this time, the sub-committee is composed of the following: Harry Scullin, who succeeded Melville L. Wilkinson as chairman of the general committee; J. Palmer Clarkson, F. W. A. Vesper and W. Frank Carter, former presidents of the Chamber of Commerce; former Mayor Kiel; Henry Miller, president of the Terminal Railroad; J. M. Kurn, president of the Frisco; C. N. Whitehead, president of the Katy; John Fitzgerald of the Louisville & Nashville; L. W. Baldwin, president of the Missouri Pacific; James E. Taussig, president of the Wabash, and Benjamin McKeen, vice-president of the Pennsylvania. From time to time, Charles E. Williams, a shoe merchant; former Judge Glendy B. Arnold, counsel for the Chamber of Commerce; C. E. Smith, consulting engineer for the city, and Charles Deal, sat in at the conferences and frequently the railroad presidents delegated subordinates to the meetings according to the phase of the ordinance being discussed. Arnold wrote the ordinance under the committee's instructions.

When President Cotter of the Manufacturers' Railway destroyed the secrecy about the ordinance by making it public Friday, it had been submittd to the Mayor, but had not been acted upon by the general terminals committee. Accordingly, Chairman Scullin has characterized the document given out as a tentative draft subject to change. He has asked the public to withhold opinion until the final draft is ready.

WOMAN EARNS $40,000 A YEAR

Is Leading Race Bookmaker of England; Visits Monte Carlo.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, May 15.—A woman, Mrs. Ella Verney, is one of the two or three ranking bookmakers of England, and makes an average profit of approximately $40,000 annually. Quiet and unassuming, she books her bets with lightning calculation.

The race track, however, does not claim all her attention, as she is a good dancer, and plays golf and tennis when the racing season is over. She visits Monte Carlo at the end of each season.

Say Sidener's Aid Tried to Block Rutherford Indictment

SLAYER WHO ESCAPED WITH FINE OF $500

WILLIAM A. S. RUTHERFORD.

taken up by the grand jury Nov. 19. He said:

"That day I noticed Assistant Circuit Attorney Schneider in the grand jury room. Although Assistant Circuit Attorney Walter Roos was conducting the Rutherford case, it was Schneider's privilege to be in the room. I thought nothing of it until I observed him leaning over the chairs of several grand jurors and whispering to them.

"Presently these men—three of them, I think—came to me and complained that Schneider was trying to influence them before they had had a chance to review all the facts.

"They said he had told them 'there wasn't anything to the case.' They complained that he said 'This case should never have been brought to the attention of the grand jury.' I considered such talk highly improper and told Walter Roos that Schneider would have to leave the room.

Ordered Out by Sidener.

"At this point Circuit Attorney Sidener happened to enter the room. Roos and I complained to him about Schneider and Sidener said to Schneider: 'Get out of the grand jury room.' Schneider got out. 'We then proceeded with swearing in the witnesses and after hearing their testimony indicted Rutherford for second degree murder.'"

When Wright's account of what had occurred was related to Scherer, he said: "That is substantially correct." Protzman's corroboration went into detail.

"I was one of the men Schneider approached," he asserted. "Schneider told me there was nothing to the case and that Rutherford should not be indicted. I gathered from his talk that he was spreading propaganda among the grand jurors favorable to Rutherford. I joined with Scherer and another grand juror in asking that Schneider be ejected."

Louis B. Woodward, president of the Woodward-Tiernan Printing Co. and named as the third of the grand jurors who complained against Schneider, would not discuss the matter.

Circuit Attorney's Version.

When asked for his version of the affair Circuit Attorney Sidener remarked: "You heard what the foreman of the grand jury said."

He was asked if Schneider's interest in the Rutherford case had anything to do with his resignation April 1.

"You know what happened to Schneider, don't you?" was Sidener's reply.

Schneider announced at the time that he was resigning to enter the race for Judge of the Court of Criminal Correction, a post now held by Calvin N. Miller. Assistant Circuit Attorney John Bowcock, who recommended that Rutherford be let off with a $500 fine of a plea of guilty of manslaughter, also is a candidate for this judgeship in the August primaries.

Denies Being Ejected.

A search for Schneider by a Post-Dispatch reporter yesterday revealed him at the office of former Assistant Circuit Attorney Verne R. C. Lacy, one of Rutherford's counsel, with whom he was in conference.

"I deny being ejected from the grand jury room," Schneider said. "I deny I was in the grand jury room while the Rutherford case was under consideration. I deny ever having met John Rutherford, or ever having discussed the case with him."

In questioning witnesses at the inquest Assistant Circuit Attorney Schneider sought to determine whether there had been a fight between Rutherford, the 32-year-old army reserve Lieutenant, who was drunk, and the 19-year-old bellboy who, just after showing Rutherford and two drinking companions to a hotel room, was shot because "he wouldn't get Rutherford a woman."

Quoting from the official report of testimony Schneider's questioning of Patrolman Edward Co... shows at one point:

Ques. Did anybody tell you there was a fight?

Ans. No, sir.

Ques. You observed no sign of a struggle?

Ans. No.

Again, in questioning Police Lieutenant White, Schneider asked:

Ques. Did the boy (Tucker) show any bruises?

Ans. No, sir.

Ques. No one told you there had been a fight that night?

Ans. No.

Ques. No one spoke of an accident?

Ans. No.

When William Donovan, an ... witness, took the stand, Schneider asked him: "You couldn't tell whether this was an accident or not?" The witness replied that he wasn't sure.

The missing witness angle in the case having been exploded by newspaper reporters, interest centered yesterday on the humanitarian side much emphasized by Circuit Attorney in explaining why he allowed Rutherford to walk out of court for $500 instead of going to trial with the damaging testimony of police and civilian witnesses who were available.

"Go and ask that poor old mother if she isn't satisfied with the settlement," Circuit Attorney Sidener advised reporters.

Question of Gift to Mother.

However, nothing has been brought forward to show that Mrs. Tillie Tucker, mother of the murdered boy, ever received a cent of the $6000 promised her if she would agree not to press for prosecution punishment of Rutherford. The slayer's brother, in a conversation with a Post-Dispatch reporter over long-distance telephone yesterday said he had turned over $1... to Henderson, his counsel. The sum was given Henderson with which "to arrange matters." Rutherford admitted that he does not know how the money was spent, how large a fee Henderson took, how many lawyers were paid out of the fund, or how much went to Mrs. Tucker.

"I assumed that she would be taken care of," John Rutherford remarked, and when told that appearances indicated she had not been taken care of, he added that it looks as if the lawyers got it.

John Rutherford readily admitted that he had used influence to get his brother off, that he had sent prominent friends from Arkansas to the Circuit Attorney, and that he had not required Attorney Henderson to itemize his expense account. Henderson, when asked yesterday if he would tell Mrs. Tucker the $6000 agreed upon or if he had paid it, said: "I will not discuss the Rutherford case with anyone."

A. Samuel Bender, who appeared in the dual role of special prosecutor and damage suit attorney representing Mrs. Tucker, and whom Circuit Attorney Sidener vainly relied to produce the "missing" witnesses, conferred with John Rutherford about the case. The Pine Bluff man says Bender has denied that his client received $6000 or that he agreed to the settlement with the Circuit Attorney's office. He, like Henderson and Schneider, is noncommittal as to the negotiations which preceded Rutherford's escape from punishment.

As was told last Sunday, "influential men," whom he declined to name, called on Circuit Judge Frey with a proposition to fix the case for $500 fine. Judge Frey refused to agree that Rutherford be allowed to plead guilty of manslaughter before him and get off with a fine. The case was finally taken on change of venue to Circuit Judge Mix.

Bender has a damage suit for $10,000 pending against the Majestic Operating Co., owners of the Majestic Hotel where Tucker was shot Oct. 10 last, and William Allen Scott Rutherford. His petition, he alleges, in behalf of Mrs. Tucker, his client, that the Majestic Hotel was careless in permitting Rutherford to stay about its premises drunk and armed with two pistols, Rutherford, in the petition, is accused of "maliciously" shooting Tucker." There has been no notice in the suit—it was filed May 8—and Rutherford is understood to have no property in his name.

OIL SALESMAN SHOOTS SELF

Phillip A. Moore Found Dead in Attic of His Home.

Carrying out his declaration of two days ago that he was going to kill himself, Phillip A. Moore, 37 years old, a salesman for the Standard Oil Co., committed suicide yesterday afternoon. He was found in the attic of his home at 7 Parkland place, a bullet in the base of his skull, a revolver in his hand.

Moore, who was married and father of two children, suffered a nervous breakdown two months ago. Thursday he told members of his family he was tired of being ill and was going to kill himself. At 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon, Mrs. Moore, her father-in-law, A. A. Thayer, and the two children left their home. Upon returning at 5 o'clock Thayer found his son-in-law dead.

ILLINOIS OFFICIALS SUMMONED IN PRISON INQUIRY

Reported Laxity at Stateville, Ill.. Prison and "Parole Mill" Scrutinized by Grand Jury.

LEOPOLD WROTE FAREWELL NOTE

Bobby Franks' Slayer Likely to Be Questioned as to Action When Seven Convicts Escaped.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, May 15.—With special grand juries idle today both in Chicago, where a panel is investigating gang warfare, and in Joliet, Ill., where prison conditions are under scrutiny because of the escape of seven convicts from Stateville, Ill., penitentiary, and the killing of a Deputy Warden, interest was focused on possible developments of next week, when both bodies will resume their sessions.

C. H. Jenkins, head of the Illinois Public Welfare Department, is scheduled to appear Monday before the Will County grand jury at Joliet, as that group enlarges its inquiry to include the methods and policies at the two State prisons there, which have been blamed in some quarters for alleged laxity which may have made possible the escape of the prisoners. Will Colvin, Supervisor of Paroles, and Warden John L. Whitman, also are under subpena.

The Joliet inquiry has passed the investigation of the escape and the murder of Deputy Warden Peter Klein, for which it indicted seven convicts yesterday. Five of the seven are in prison, but two have not been recaptured.

Whether additional indictments will be voted depends, according to State's Attorney Hjalmar Rehn, upon the new leads developed next week. The re-entrance into the spotlight of Nathan Leopold Jr., slayer of Bobby Franks, through the revelation that he wrote a farewell note on the day his seven comrades escaped, may cause his further questioning. He has not been before the grand jury, but was questioned by the State's Attorney.

Here is the note in full:

"Dear Father: As I am about to go away, I want you to know that in my last hours I acknowledge that had I followed your teachings, I would have avoided trouble. I am sorry, dear father, for the trouble I have caused you and realize that I did not do the right thing. Lovingly, Your Son, Nathan."

The Cook County grand jury, summoned after the murder, apparently by gangsters, of William H. McSwiggin, Deputy State's Attorney, and two comrades, returned additional indictments yesterday, bringing its total true bills returned to more than 20, but none of them accuses anybody of any of the more than 90 slayings attributed to gang warfare here. This grand jury also has yet to take definite action upon evidence indicating the existence here of a "pardon mill" which operated to obtain pardons and paroles for convicts.

The bombing of a roadhouse on the far South Side early today was feared by police to have marked a new flurry in the war of gangster bootleggers. The bomb jarred the vicinity of Homewood, suburban racetrack site, and did damage estimated at $5000. Another police theory was that roadhouse competition, stimulated by the coming of the summer season, may have inspired the bombing. The owner of the damaged roadhouse, John Vallordi, would not throw any light on either theory.

CHAQUETTE NEWEST ADDITION TO THE LEXICON OF LIQUOR

Police Pick Up New Word Also a Tank Such as Distilleries Use.

To the liquor lexicon, which includes such standardized words as hooch, moonshine, white mule, donkey and lightning, police believe a new word has been added. It is "chaquete."

At 2:15 a. m. yesterday police stopped a truck occupied by two men, one a grocer, the other a horse trader, at Kingshighway and Pattison avenue. The truck contained a wooden portable tank such as may be used in distilleries.

"What's it for?" the police inquired.

"Chaquete," replied the horse trader, winking an eye. He said a man had asked him to deliver it to a point on the Clayton road 20 miles out, and also had ordered 500 5-gallon square tin cans. Police are investigating.

TWO MOTORCYCLISTS INJURED

George Hauser, 32 years old, 2910 South Jefferson avenue, suffered a fractured left ankle at 4:15 p. m. yesterday when his motor cycle was overturned in a collision with an automobile driven by Irwin H. Koch, 2732 Accomac street, in front of 2619 South Jefferson.

HE PREACHES THE 3 T'S

DR. WILLIS A. SUTTON

3 R'S NOT SO VITAL AS 3 T'S, EDUCATOR SAYS

Teeth, Tonsils and Thyroids Basis of New Schooling, Dr. W. S. Sutton Declares.

Not the three R's as a basis for education but the three T's—teeth, tonsils and thyroids, especially teeth—was preached last night by Dr. Willis A. Sutton, superintendent of schools of Atlanta, Ga., who addressed about 100 members of the St. Louis Dental Society at Beaumont High School.

"If boys and girls have perfectly functioning bodies, they will have not only minds that are clean, but clean morals as well," Dr. Sutton said. "There is much being said about the crimes of American youth, but it is only because we are so negligent of their bodies that youth is today what we call bad. And considering their mothers and fathers, I think they are doing very well.

"Our idea of education has always been the implanting of facts and thoughts in the heads of the pupils. But I have seen too many tired teachers trying to teach classes that have anemic bodies, pale faces, decayed teeth, sore eyes and drooping attention. We came to the conclusion in Atlanta that we should have to cut out $10,000 worth of Latin, and spend it on teeth.

Dental Soundness Called Essential.

"The women on the school board raised such a protest that we got the dental aid and kept the Latin too. On looking over the records of our pupils for the past 15 years we found that from 91 per cent of children admitted to our schools with defective teeth, we had reduced the number only to 89 per cent.

"We instituted an intensive educational program. Teachers, parents, dentists, and the children themselves were taught the necessity for good teeth. And we insisted on 100 per cent of every school being dentally sound for it is always the last few to respond to urging who need treatment most.

"At the very first our program was but partially successful, because the children didn't respond. We finally hit on the plan of making them brush their teeth in school, and of promising them the reward of a holiday as soon as their school could show a long 100 per cent record. It worked like magic.

Children who formerly gained 2 pounds a year now gained from 6 to 22 pounds. Only 8 per cent instead of 28 per cent are failing. We have instituted a pre-examination in the Spring for children expecting to be admitted to kindergarten in the Fall, and in this way we save much time, that otherwise be lost after admission. We find that about 8 per cent are physically fit to enter school. At the other end—at graduation—92 per cent of our boys and girls have certificates of physical fitness.

Eliminating Delinquency.

"We have eliminated a great deal of what used to be called delinquency — misdemeanors that were due to physical troubles, mainly bad teeth. The saving not only to the school system, but also to society at large in the prevention of future careers of crime has been immense.

"The expense to the City has been practically nothing. The parents of the children themselves have paid for the work. We have thus avoided pauperizing the family of the child, as would certainly have been the case, had we offered to have the work done as charity. We have saved the City the expense as well. At the same time, the dentists, who at first were reluctant to take child cases, have come around to our view of the importance of the task."

Dr. Sutton concluded with a plea for the adolescent, whose temporary maladjustment he said was due to the physical strain on the nervous system, resulting from an environment which, unchanged for ten thousand years, has suddenly become terrifically complex.

Indians Do Snake Dance On Plaza of U. S. Capitol

Hopis From Pueblas of Arizona in Weird Ritual Before Vice President and Others to Disprove Charges That Acts Are Inhuman

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, May 15.—The Capitol Plaza was transformed today into a picturesque, vivid bit of the Far West by five Hopi Indians from the Cliffs and Pueblos of Arizona.

Before a crowd that included Vice President Dawes, with his inverted pipe; Speaker Nicholas Longworth and Mrs. Longworth, the latter adding to the spectacle with a flaming red gown; Associate Justices Sanford, Holmes and Sutherland of the Supreme Court; Senators and Congressmen innumerable and some 5000 common citizens, the Indians, descendants of Chieftains of the tribe which holds that it originated from snakes, presented four of their tribal religious dances.

All of the panoply and paraphernalia of the Red Men were there—bows and arrows, moccasins, feathered, variegated war bonnets, gaudy Hopi head bands, bear skins which formed smocks, small bells strung around the bodies, war whoops, and six Arizona blacksnakes that were caressed by the dance leader and then coiled and squirmed across the small platform as the Indians wove back and forth and swayed to the beat of a tom-tom.

Snakes Lifted to Lips.

Once or twice, when a prancing performer lifted the glistening head of a struggling serpent to his lips, the crowd gasped in anticipation. But no one was bitten—not even a snake.

The names of the actors added glamor to the exotic scene—chief Kol-Chov-Te-Wah, or Rope Out of a Bear Hide; Sol-Lof-To-Chee, or Evergreen Shoes, chief of all snake priests of the tribe, there being six in every generation; Pon-Ya, or Displayd on the Sacred Altar, youngest priest of the tribe; See-Tal-La, or Water-Flower, last surviving member of the ancient Sun-Clan of the tribe, and Quama-Taut-Te-Wa, the The Designer, a member of the hieroglyphic artist clan.

M. W. Billingsley, Phoenix, Ariz., whose ranch adjoins the Hopi reservation, explained that the dances had never been performed before off the reservation and that the tribe prays throughout the dancing period.

Lengthy Jargen Means "Hello."

He introduced Chief Rope Out of a Bearhide, who addressed the assemblage for several minutes. His remarks, in the guttural Chinese-Spanish sounding langauge of the tribe, were translated into "hello."

The dances were the cachina, or prayer for rain, the Buffalo dance with cardboard masks and horns representing Buffalo heads, the victory war dance which also serves as a warning to other tribes to let the Hopis strictly alone, and the dance with the sextet of snakes.

The purpose of the exhibition, Senator Cameron (Rep.) of Arizona, explained, was to show that the rites and ceremonies of the Hopis are not inhuman or cruel, as had been contended by organizations which seek to have the Government prevent the annual performance. He said the dance was not as bad as the Charleston.

It had some of the strutting of that performance, it is true, but lacked some other elements, and also possessed a slight bit of the Hula of Hawaii.

WEATHER MAN PICKS DATE FOR CELEBRATION

Sept. 4 to 19 Most Likely Period for St. Louis Independence Fete.

The Greater St. Louis Independence Celebration and Exposition of Industrial Progress, to be held in Forest Park, will begin Sept. 4 and continue through Sept. 19. These two weeks weer selected after United States Meteorologist Montrose W. Hayes had discovered, after a perusal of St. Louis' weather reports, that in the past 15 years there had been less rainfall during this period than in any other two weeks during the summer or autumn.

During the last five years there have been only four days during a corresponding period without sunshine. While for the same period, in the past five years, there has been a total rainfall of only 8.78 inches. And the records attest that, except for last year, the temperature between Sept. 4 and 19, inclusive, has been more than enticing for events in the open spaces.

The Missouri Historical Society, in a resolution has asked the Chamber of Commerce to observe during the celebration and exposition four historical events: The 150th anniversary of the Declaration of Independence and the centenaries of the deaths of Thomas Jefferson and John Adams and of the establishment of Jefferson Barracks.

Records show that the site for Jefferson Barracks was definitely selected by Gens. Atkinson and Gaines, in 1826, following orders from the War Department. It was named Jefferson Barracks by Maj. Gen. Brown, in honor of Jefferson, who had died on July 4 of that year.

Mayor Miller, in reply to a message sent to Secretary of the Navy Wilbur, in an effort to bring Lieut. Com. Richard E. Byrd's arctic flight plane to the exposition, received a telegram from the Secretary saying that the plane belongs to the Byrd Polar Expedition and that Byrd's plans are unknown, but suggesting that arrangements be made with Byrd, on his return, to send the plane here. Wilbur also stated that he thought the exhibition of the ship would be "very beneficial to the development of commercial aviation in America."

ESTATE OF MAN KILLED IN FALL BEQUEATHED TO FRIENDS

Will of George J. Wilson Disposes of Several Shares of Stock in Industrial Firms.

The will of George J. Wilson, 60 years old, who died as the result of a fall Friday night at the home of William Randon, 4926 Washington boulevard, where he was employed as houseman, was filed yesterday. He had no known relatives and bequeathed his property as follows: To Mrs. John F. Galvin, 5170 Enright avenue, five shares of the stock of the H. & G. Manufacturing Co. of St. Louis, three shares of Union Electric Light & Power Co. stock to Lucille Randon, one share of Liberty Hospital stock to Mrs. James Hade, six shares of Union Electric stock to Mrs. Mamie Randon and William Randon and one share of stock in the same corporation to Miss Ida Mackie.

The residue was left to Randon, who was appointed executor. Randon said that the estate was small.

$700 IN JEWELRY REPORTED STOLEN IN AUTO HOLDUP

Car of One of Victims Wrecked When Robbers Flee From Pursuers.

Lawrence Hazlit, of 5731 Kennerly avenue, and Miss Nellie Allison, of 2844 Park avenue, last night reported they were held up at 11:30 o'clock at Denny and Olive street roads, St. Louis County, by two men who took three diamond rings worth $700 from Miss Allison, $24 cash and a $50 tiepin from Hazlit and escaped in Hazlit's car.

The victims of the robbery were picked up by a Deputy Sheriff who brought them to St. Louis. On the way they sighted Hazlit's car and gave chase, the deputy firing several shots. The car got out of control at Etzel and Delaware avenues and was wrecked against the front porch of a house. The robbers escaped on foot.

Earl Bowman, of 5222 Delmar boulevard, and Miss Ezie Williams were help up as they sat in his coupe in front of her home at 5922 Etzel avenue at 11:30 last night, by two men, who took a $125 ring from Miss Williams and escaped in Bowman's machine.

CHICAGO & NORTHWESTERN GAINS ENTRY TO ST. LOUIS

I. C. C. Authorizes Railroad to Bill Freight Through to Consignee.

The Chicago & Northwestern Railroad, which heretofore has had to turn over incoming shipments to "West Side" railroads for delivery in St. Louis, can now bill its freight shipments through to consignees in St. Louis, Harry L. Hammill, general agent, announced last night.

The change in billing is made possible through an order of the Interstate Commerce Commission giving the road authority for shipments direct to this side of the river. The railroad carries heavy shipments of flour and grain from Duluth, St. Paul and Minneapolis, and loads of lumber and other commodities from St. Louis northward.

HINDENBURG CALLS DR. MARX TO ACCEPT CHANCELLORSHIP

Appeals to Man He Defeated for Presidency, After Gessler Fails to Form Cabinet.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, May 15.—President von Hindenburg has requested Dr. Wilhelm Marx to resume the post of Chancellor at the head of the present minority cabinet. Marx will reply tomorrow. The President's appeal to the former Chancellor, who now holds the portfolio of justice, was brought about by Dr. Otto Gessler's failure to find suitable candidates for his ministry.

The President declares that a protracted parliamentary deadlock is incompatible with the economic interests of Germany.

Zinc and Lead Ore Prices Firm.

By the Associated Press.

JOPLIN, Mo., May 15.—Zinc and lead ore prices remained firm in the Tri-State district during the week, the former bringing a basis price of $45 a ton, and lead ore $92.50, the same as the preceding week. Current opinion is that prices are likely to be better. Production was cut sharply and was below 15,000 tons for the first time for several months. Almost 20 per cent of the mines are closed, and a dozen others curtailed operations. Shipments were lighter, and the turn-in was worth only $750,000.

IN RACE FOR CONGRESS IN ELEVENTH DISTRICT

J. J. Cochran Against Volstead Act, League of Nations and World Court.

Post-Dispatch Bureau, 20-23 Wyatt Bldg.

WASHINGTON, May 15.—John J. Cochran, secretary to Representative Harry B. Hawes of St. Louis, today announced his candidacy for the Democratic congressional nomination for the Eleventh Missouri District, and issued a statement setting forth his views on public questions.

Cochran filed only for the full term, beginning March 5, 1927. He said if Gov. Baker issued a proclamation calling for a special election he also would file for the unexpired term, due to the resignation of Hawes, effective Dec. 1.

Gov. Baker was said to be considering the legality of a proclamation calling for a special election prior to the date of the vacancy. Well informed members of Congress contended that when Hawes filed notice of his resignation with the Speaker, a vacancy was created as of Dec. 1. Once such a notice has been filed, they maintained, it could not be withdrawn. For that reason, they concluded, the Governor has the right to call a special election before the actual vacancy exists.

In his announcement of his platform, Cochran went on record against the Volstead act and the Eighteenth Amendment, and denounced bureaucracy, the Fordney-McCumber tariff, the League of Nations, the World Court, laws interfering with business and branch banking bills that would inflict branch banks on states where they are not now allowed. He favored strict economy in Government, more liberal provisions in the immigration and disabled veterans' laws and strict interpretation of the bill of rights.

SPAIN RENEWS THREAT OF QUITTING LEAGUE

Contest for Permanent Seats in Council Still Unsettled by Commission.

By the Associated Press.

GENEVA, May 15.—Owing to the persistent demands of Spain and Brazil for permanent seats, it seems extremely likely that the Commission on the re-organization of the council of the League of Nations, will separate without reaching an agreement concerning the future composition of the council and that efforts will be concentrated through the regular diplomatic channels to induce the governments at Madrid and Rio Janeiro to abandon their claims in the interest of preserving the future usefulness of the League.

With the exception of Spain and Brazil, there is practical unanimity in the commission that the non-permanent seats can be increased to nine, without, however, augmenting the permanent seats, and these two countries will be urged in a spirit of compromise to accept the probability that under the scheme for an increase of the elected members they stand a good chance of becoming virtual permanent members through constant re-election.

Both Argentina and Uruguay have in effect repudiated Brazil's claims, and especially Brazil's insistence that she should represent Latin-America as a permanent member of the council.

Spain's representative notified the commission today that unless she was accorded a permanent seat Spain would be convinced that it was not useful to collaborate longer with the League. This renewed threat to quit the League unless her aspirations are satisfied is causing considerable worriment among the powers, and the League crisis will continue until the problem of permanent seats has been solved.

GETS INJUNCTION AGAINST LOVEMAKING

MRS. IVA M. BRYAN of Monroe, Mich., who has been granted a temporary injunction preventing alleged lovemaking by the Rev. William R. Curtis, pastor of the First Baptist Church of Monroe, Mrs. Bryan charges the pastor, who is married and has two children, forced his attentions on her. Curtis denies it all and claims the charges are a frame-up. Mrs. Bryan is supported in her claims by her husband.

AUTO, WATCH AND $10 STOLEN

Nat Steiner, 5904 Enright avenue, was held up and robbed of $10 in cash, and a $30 wrist watch, last night, when two armed youths entered his parked machine, at Westminster place and Union boulevard, and forced him to drive to the 7200 block on Westmoreland drive, where they ejected him from the car and drove away. Steiner was taken to the Twelfth District police station by a passing motorist, where he reported the robbery.

CHANGES PROPOSED IN PLUMBING LA

After Test, Committee Dec... Ordinance Can Be Simplifi... for Economy.

A committee appointed by Building Commissioner Christopher to determine whether the present ordinance regulating plumbing in buildings could not be simplified to make plumbing more economical has reported changes which it declares, accomplish the end sought.

The base of the new ordinance is the so-called Hoover code, compiled by a committee appointed by Herbert Hoover, Secretary of Commerce.

Both master and journeymen plumbers expressed doubt that the simplified Hoover system of venting would be practicable. Accordingly, the committee decided to arranged for a test at the [illegible] Ranken Jr. School of Mechanic Trades, and, with the so-called "crown vent" for traps eliminated, proved to its satisfaction the practicability of the simplification proposed.

The ordinance, the committee believes, will give St. Louis citizens the outstanding plumbing of "We believe," it declares, "that these simplified methods will result in cheaper plumbing installations to the individual, but that the men who sell the material and perform the labor will find the total volume of business will be so increased as to more than repay them on the individual job."

The committee was composed of John P. Austin, former plumbing inspector, chairman; R. M. Hagan, commissioner of buildings; the Board of Education; James McBride, plumbing engineer; Charles F. Walther, chief plumbing inspector; Dr. Max Starkloff, Health Commissioner; Austin E. Fitch, associate professor of architectural construction in Washington University, and William A. Vornholdt, secretary to the city board of plumbing examiners.

CAMPAIGN PLANS FOR FUND FOR JEWISH ORPHANS' HOME

Leaders and Team Workers Appointed to Raise $250,000 for New Building on Larger Site.

Plans for the $250,000 building fund campaign of the Jewish Orphans' Home, to be conducted May 24—31, were announced yesterday by Nathan Frank, general chairman of the Campaign Committee. Edward G. Platt, Mrs. A. Shank, Isadore Mathes and Louis Gollin are vice chairmen, and Sam Hamburg Jr., treasurer. Ferdinand S. Rauch, Gilbert Harris and Lazer W. Grossman are campaign directors. Headquarters have been opened in room 304, Statler Hotel.

In a talk to team captains, Rabbi Samuel Sale emphasized the fact that all elements of the Jewish population of the city are back of the movement to build a modern institution on the cottage plan for the Jewish orphans, on Oakland avenue, east of Skinker. A site covering about three acres has been bought, and with the funds to be raised in the drive the first unit of three buildings will be constructed. The home, which was founded in 1909, at present occupies an old residence at 3117 Lafayette avenue, which is badly overcrowded and lacking in playground and other facilities.

The division leaders in the campaign will be Dr. A. A. Margulis, I. Bakes, Louis Grolinek, David Aaron, Harry Rovin, Henry Berger, Mrs. M. Golland, Mrs. Florence Kurlander, Mrs. D. D. Israel, Mrs. S. Rosenberg and Miss Rose Silverstone.

There will be a mass meeting of several hundred team workers to have been enlisted for the drive at the Columbian Club, Lindell boulevard and Vandeventer place, Monday evening, May 24. The campaign is indorsed by the Jewish Federation of St. Louis, the central agency through which all of the Jewish charitable institutions of the city are administered.

CHANGES PROPOSED IN PLUMBING LAW

After Test, Committee Decides Ordinance Can Be Simplified for Economy.

A committee appointed by Building Commissioner Christopher to determine whether the present ordinance regulating plumbing in buildings could not be simplified to make plumbing more economical has reported changes which it declares, accomplish the end sought.

The base of the new ordinance is the so-called Hoover code, compiled by a committee appointed by Herbert Hoover, Secretary of Commerce.

Both master and journeyman plumbers expressed doubt that the simplified Hoover system of venting would be practicable. Accordingly, the committee declares, it arranged for a test at the Daniel Ranken Jr. School of Mechanical Trades, and, with the so-called "crown vent" for traps eliminated, proved to its satisfaction the practicability of the simplification proposed.

The ordinance, the committee believes, will give St. Louis one of the outstanding plumbing codes. "We believe," it declares, "that these simplified methods will result in cheaper plumbing installations to the individual, but that the master who sell the material and perform the labor will find the total volume of business will be so increased as to more than repay them on the individual job."

The committee was composed of John P. Austin, former plumbing inspector, chairman; R. M. Milligan, commissioner of buildings for the Board of Education; James McBride, plumbing engineer; Charles F. Walther, chief of plumbing inspector; Dr. Max Starkloff, Health Commissioner; Austin E. Fitch, associate professor of architectural construction in Washington University, and William A. Vornholdt, secretary to the city board of plumbing examiners.

ANSWERS TO QUERIES

The Post-Dispatch reserves the right to reject any query. Personal and telephone calls, or answers by mail, cannot be given attention, except letters on medical questions of undoubted sincerity when accompanied by stamped addressed envelope.

HILDA.—The electric car started on the Broadway line on Oct. 8, 1900.

X. Y. Z.—Call the moving picture theater in questiton for the information desired regarding the actress who appeared there in person.

ANXIOUS.—The old State Capitol at Jefferson City was destroyed by fire Feb. 5, 1911. The corner stone was laid for the new building June 24, 1915. Eighteen months later the exterior construction was finished.

J. A.—The Tacna-Arica dispute is involved in considerable of a diplomatic tangle and there is no telling what the result may be.

M. J.—The dictionary gives the following definition for "flapper:" One who, or that which flaps; a young girl from 15 to 17 who wishes to attract attention, probably from the wearing of loose overshoes which flap.

LEGAL INFORMATION

(By a Member of the St. Louis Bar Association.)

M. M.—She should consult a lawyer. If the divorce suit was not contested it would probably cost from $75 to $125.

C. V.-78. — You can make a charge of careless driving against him. Report the facts to the police.

INQUIRER.—Probably the song is copyrighted, and if you put out a song very much resembling it you would be liable for damages for infringement of his copyright.

McD.—What notice you will have to give depends entirely on your contract. If it does not provide for notice you will not have to give him any.

T. B.—Probably a lawyer in St. Louis could take care of the estate; if he could not he could refer you to a lawyer in Philadelphia to whom you could write.

ESTER.—You can marry again immediately but it is safer to wait until the end of the term of court at which the divorce was granted since the divorce decree may be set aside during that term.

G. E. S.—It would be wise to register the formula in the Patent Office. Write to the Commissioner of Patents, Washington, D. C., for full information or consult a patent lawyer.

MEDICAL QUESTIONS

Health and sanitation questions of public interest only will be considered. Diagnosis or treatment of individual cases will not be given.

READER.—A certain amount of dandruff in the hair is normal, it is the natural exfoliation of the upper layer of the skin of the scalp. When it becomes excessive it generally indicates some disturbance in the scalp and is very often found to precede falling of the hair. Excessive dandruff therefore, calls attention of those who wish to preserve the hair. There are three forms of baldness from a practical viewpoint: Senile, hereditary, premature baldness and symptomatic baldness. The first two are not amendable to treatment from the standpoint of a cure, although in premature baldness the eventual loss of the hair may be delayed somewhat. It is in symptomatic baldness that treatment is effective, and it is to this that the following implies. Disorders of the general health is often reflected in the loss of the hair and this should be considered in such cases. any departure from the normal health being sought for and corrected. Locally the treatment may be summed up in one word — "stimulation." Weekly, semiweekly or even daily cleansing of the scalp should be practiced. This is best done with the following wash: Saponis Viridis, 2 ounces; alcohol, 2 ounces. Dissolve with heat and filter. After shampooing, the hair is finally rinsed in clear water and dried as much as possible and the following applied: Carbonic acid, 15 grains; bay rum, 4 drams; cologne water, enough to make 1 ounce. Mix thoroughly and apply as follows: Make a part in the hair and drop the mixture on the scalp at intervals of an inch and rub in with a soft brush, a tooth brush serves well. Cover the scalp by this method, making one part after another. Once a time the shampooing may be done less often but the mixture should be applied faithfully and persistently until the hair ceases to fall or the case must be abandoned as hopeless.

ONE IN TROUBLE.—They can hold you to the contract and can sue you. However, they cannot sue your husband or garnish his wages if he did not sign the note or contract, and did not authorize you to do so for him.

IN DOUBT.—Under the provision of the policy which you quote, the insurance would be paid to the son, not to you. (2) There is no reason that we know why he should place property acquired by him in his son's name. You might consult a lawyer and tell him all the facts.

BETTY JANE.—If you cannot make the payments as you agreed they have a right to replevin the furniture. Explain the circumstances to them and ask for more time. If they refuse to give you more time consult the Legal Aid Bureau in the Municipal Courts Building, Fourteenth and Market streets.

F. A. N.—File a petition in the Juvenile Court. The written consent of the parents is required in the adoption except in certain cases. If the court thought that the petitioners were not proper persons to adopt the child and take care of it, the court could refuse to grant a decree of adoption. You should consult a lawyer.

HERE IS OPPORTUNITY

If you can SELL and are willing to WORK, here is an opportunity to substantially increase your earning power, and at the same time build a permanent and profitable future for yourself.

You can, if you qualify, represent a $600,000,000 public service organization, of nation-wide reputation, which is selling its sound investment securities to thrifty people. Already, more than 235,000 satisfied investors own these securities.

You do not need to have a "clientele" of wealthy investors, in order to fully capitalize this opportunity. Previous experience in selling securities is not necessary. The best money can be made by selling in comparatively small amounts to people of moderate means.

The most practical kind of co-operation in training, advertising and circularization will be given to the successful applicant for this position. Promotion to an executive position will be in order, just as soon as his demonstrated ability merits it.

If you think you can quality for this opening, write us in detail, just why you think so. Tell us about your education, experience (selling or otherwise), and age.

Address C-344
Post-Dispatch.

ACTION SALESMEN, WE CAN INTEREST YOU—SURE

We belong to the most responsible National and Local Business Organizations. We have as our Clients 22,000 of the most meticulous and best rated concerns in America.

We are and old-established, large highly rated INDUSTRIAL SERVICE CONCERN, the recognized leader in our line. You have seen our full-page national advertising in Forbes, Nation's Business, Management, etc.

We are an old-established, Sales Organization that covers this country. We have increased our Sales Volume over 300 per cent since 1920 and over 100 per cent again this year. We have no dull years; no dull months.

This is an individual proposition that is in a field by itself without real competition. We will prove to your satisfaction that a salesman after salesman made from $11,000 to $12,000 last year and the year before, and the year before that. The PROOF of every statement we make is here is worked out in the Nth degree and ready for your consideration in very understandable form.

You can get away quick in this business and earn a substantial sum your very first week. What's more, if you're a real, genuine, honest-to-goodness Salesman there is no doubt you can SUCCEED with us and make Big Money month after month. Promotions on the merit basis are a prompt when deserved. All of our Executive Positions have been filled from the Sales Organization.

We have in our force a dozen of the Classiest Stock Salesmen in America. We have the three best Book Salesmen in America. We have several "stars" from the Advertising and Specialty fields. These men came to us voluntarily and they are making more with us than they ever made elsewhere because their past Sales experience in selling chief executives qualified them to quickly sell the same type of Executives in our work.

Yet never in our best year have we sold 5 per cent of the existing prospects and the market renews itself each year. Why, then, waste your time with a dead job? Come over with us, where salesmen are optimistic and prosperous.

We are all salesmen over here. We have only the salesman's viewpoint. As individuals we've been over every jump you've ever been over. We know your heart and your mind and we've with you all the way for a square deal. We've never had one minute's trouble with any salesman who ever worked for us. We pay what's due promptly. We never cut commissions when the men prosper, and we never will.

So write or phone us in detail and tell us about yourself, who you are and what you've sold and all necessary details, including phone number. Everything that will help you to land this job should be told. Don't write us rix words and ask: "What-da-ya get?" That's not the kind of salesmen or salesmanship that interests us. We'll answer promptly. R. M. Drucker, Statler Hotel. (c1)

DRY WEATHER SCARE IN THE WHEAT MARKET

ST. LOUIS MERCHANTS' EXCHANGE.

May 15.—Grain futures closed higher at the final session of the week on the local market. It was a dry-weather scare trade in wheat. It was said that reports appeared to indicate that a large part of the spring wheat area had received no substantial rain relief. The market was also influenced more or less by the rise of sterling exchange to above par. A decrease of the domestic visible supply total on Monday was forecast. Corn was affected largely by the action of wheat, notwithstanding that higher temperatures were favorable for the growing crop.

In the local cash grain market soft wheat was steady with a few mill orders for good soft red wheat. Hard wheat was scarce but the demand was not what it had been, mills refusing No. 2 hard on track at $1.06. Mixed corn was 1c lower and other classes unchanged to ½c higher. There was good demand. Mills in buying of yellow. Oats offerings were cleaned up closely at unchanged prices, local trade, mills and shippers buying.

Wheat feed was dull and weak, hard bran in arrear of offers, quoted $25.50 to $26 and hard grey shorts $27.50. No. 2 A car of alfalfa meal, old crop, sold in new account at $27.10.

Opening prices on wheat were about unchanged and the initial basis proved to be the day's high level. Gains were shown shortly. Winnipeg early was ⅛c to 1¼c higher. Liverpool close 1¼d to 1½d

Ending of British General Strike Exerts Little Influence on Stocks — Activity in a Prominent Motor Issue Furnishes Diversion.

NEW YORK, May 15.—The Evening Post in its weekly copyrighted financial review, says:

"Failure of the shares market to break on the news of a disturbance so serious as the British general strike or to rally materially when the crisis ended emphasizes the conclusion that stocks no longer can be swayed violently by influences remote or temporary. Through the relentless pressure against weak holdings earlier this year, the froth of the stock market was brushed aside so neatly that the professional traders have been unable to stimulate any very powerful interest either on the upside or downside lately by appeals purely to the imagination. What the substantial investors want now very clearly is information on the underlying trend of domestic trade. If industry in this country is going to remain on a sound foundation, a temporary lag in activity here or a labor crisis abroad will not destroy faith in our securities markets, but if this country must suffer a period of depression further adjustments in prices unquestionably may be expected.

"Such spectacles as was witnessed this week when a prominent motor stock was attacked by the bear crowd in an effort to break the market afford diversion but throw no light whatsoever on the underlying movement. Back of everything is the fundamental position of business which, despite the bellerings of many commentators, remains sound. That we are in a period of mild recession from the 1925 and early 1926 peaks does not mean that an industrial depression lies just around the corner. Industry is more than ordinarily busy in this country at the present time even if some of the former momentum has been lost. A substantial further drop in the level of activity could come before business would be forced down to a position of real danger. In persistent decline of commodity prices is one of the most serious of the different problems now puzzling the prophets, because, unfortunately, the recession is marked by a pronounced loss in the value of agricultural products. News on the volume and probable prices of our 1926 crops will be watched eagerly this year, for, notwithstanding improvement in that direction, the purchasing power of the farmer still is below what it was before the war. At this season little can be said of agricultural prospects beyond the statement that growing conditions now are distinctly encouraging.

Promise of Easy Money.

"With the spring demands for capital all satisfied the money market gives every promise of ease for the summer months and in analyzing the position of trade and the markets this condition is significant. From the standpoint of trade it suggests that building activities on a large scale may be sustained longer than had been expected, that the purchase of automobiles on the instalment plan will continue to stimulate sales and that development work in many instances will be undertaken while funds at a reasonable price are available. In the securities markets the presence of loanable funds in heavy volume has been and still is a sustaining influence that cannot for a moment be overlooked even by those who understand that the trade position and not money ease in the end must control the course of the barometers. So well have our own companies been provided with funds for expansion in recent years that, on any real improvement in the European situation, we may expect to see a rising tide of foreign flotations in this country and an increasing interest in descriptions from overseas that already are listed here.

Adjustments Are Slow.

"Slow as their progress may appear to be, the governments of peoples across the sea are working toward a stabilization of their own financial positions and a settlement of debts here. In our impatience we should not forget the real problems that these foreign governments face and the general opposition that the imposition of heavy taxes always raises. Even in our own land the suggestions for a downward revision in taxes brought a disagreement on the technicalities of the measure that blocked the passage of the bill for a considerable period. In the form of government over seas and the fact that the tax revisions must be upward are two obstacles to haste that must be recognized on this side of the water. Labor crises of the character that now engulfs Great Britain act, unfortunately, to lengthen the delays and to embitter different factions in politics. As the countries reaffirm their determinations to mend their financial houses from the inside, however, investors here will not be slow in supplying such funds as are necessary."

Motors Sold at Week-end.

"After a burst of fairly heavy selling at the opening, under which prices receded, the market turned dull again. A drive was made against the motors, particularly Hudson, but this failed to force liquidation to any material extent, with the result that it was soon given up. Bonds were well supported, with the exception of the Poland 8s, which dropped to another new low for the year. Accumulation was in evidence in the steel issues, most of which were fractionally higher. Rails gave a good account of themselves, some of them touching new highs. One of the features of today's financial market was the spurt in rates on London to above gold parity of $4.8662 for the first time since 1914—a recovery in only about a week from the lowest level of the year, recorded soon after declaration of the general strike. The sudden rebound of sterling came as a surprise to bankers here and was attributed to a concerted demand for British exchange by continental countries as well as by traders who had sold for a decline during the strike. The British Government was credited also with buying sterling and reducing accounts in other European capitals. Coincident with the new peak for sterling, French francs fell to a record low level barely above the 3c level, and Belgian francs sagged in sympathy. Italian rates rallied briskly, however, on official support.

Hudson Prominent.

"Failure of the motors yesterday to respond to the favorable dividend action by General Motors encouraged the bear element to no small extent. In addition they had a little score to settle with those who have been sponsoring this group of stocks because of the Nash Motor episode on Thursday, when they were forced to hoist the white flag. Today's attack was in another section. Hudson has proven a comparatively easy victim during the past few weeks and in this morning's session it was forced down to a new low of 59. The bears showed no inclination to take another fall out of Nash, however, which was only slightly below the previous closing level and still more than a point above the so-called pegged price of 52.

Advance in Crude Oil.

"The stock market for more than a week has been purely professional. Those who would ordinarily buy and sell stocks, frequently referred to as 'the public,' are either holding long lines of stocks which were purchased earlier in the year for the spring rise, which never came, or have abandoned the stock market entirely and have placed their surplus funds in bonds. They avail themselves of every show of strength to lighten their investment load, which has made it easy for the bear element to halt all advances. Answer to the better tone of the oils of late was found today in the advance of Midcontinent crude of oil 25c a barrel. Oil producers throughout the country have generally followed those in the Midcontinent fields in the matter of prices in the past. However, the California producers have in the last few months become bigger factors in the market and have shown a tendency to lead rather than follow. It will be interesting to note their action in the present case.

Weekly Bank Statement.

"Another small increase in surplus took place this week, according to the weekly Clearing House statement, which revealed an excess surplus of $37,418,810 as a result of an increase in surplus of $5,667,970. Loans, discounts, etc., increased $12,727,000."

SHARES SOLD

NEW YORK, May 15.—Total sales for the week on the New York Stock Exchange were 5,316,700 shares, compared with 5,129,100 last week, 8,666,000 same week a year ago and 3,331,200 two years ago.

STERLING NOW ON FULL EQUALITY WITH DOLLAR

Gold Parity Basis of British Currency Reached for First Time Since 1914.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, May 15. — Sterling exchange today returned to a level of full equality with the dollar, a position which it had not occupied since the closing days of 1914, following the outbreak of the world war. The long awaited goal of $4.8665, representing the gold parity basis of the British currency, was passed in London early in the day, with the cable rate in both London and New York later going as high as $4.86⅝.

The final advance of sterling to par was curiously aided by the depression of other European currencies, which in the past week had resulted in a flight of capital from France, Belgium, Italy and Poland, to London and New York for temporary investment. No less a factor was the general restriction of confidence on Great Britain's financial and commercial position, influenced by the government's successful handling of the recent labor crisis.

Although the pound suffered a sharp reaction as the general strike went into effect, it quickly recovered on the settlement of the labor difficulties and attracted funds from neighboring European countries whose currencies were falling to new low levels as the result of financial and political troubles.

In striking contrast to the strength of sterling was the break in the French franc, at the lowest level in its history, 3.02c. The rate on the Belgian franc was virtually the same. The Italian lira, after sinking to the lowest rate of the year at 3.56c, recovered about 20 points today as the government renewed its support, which abruptly withdrawn earlier in the week, when the exchange was selling around 4c. Polish zloty, depressed by the revolt of the government, meanwhile continued to hover around its record low of 9c.

New Securities

NEW YORK, May 15.—A 725-year-old German coppr mining, smelting and refining company is latest borrower in the American market, according to the statement yesterday that Brown Brothers & Co. and Lee, Higginson & Co. will offer in this country early next week an issue of $3,000,000 Mansfield Mining and Smelting Co. 15-year 7 per cent mortgage bonds, yielding 7¾ per cent. The bond will carry detachable warrants, exercisable after Jan. 1, next year, which entitle the holders to purchase, prior to May 1, 1936, common stock of the company on the basis of 15 shares of the par value of 50 reichsmarks for each $1000 bond. The average dividend on the amount of stock now outstanding has been about 9 per cent for the past 20 years and at present is 8 per cent a year.

Nearly $70,000,000 of municipal awards will be opened within the next two weeks. The majority of these bids will be opened next week our issues alone accounting for nearly $56,000,000.

Baltimore, Md., Monday will auction $18,822,000 of miscellaneous bonds and the next day Jersey City will sell $4,236,000. Westchester County, N. Y., also will be in the New York market on Tuesday. It wants $1,032,000. Small issues will be awarded Wednesday. They are $578,000 of Reading (Pa.) bonds and $500,000 of Union County, N. J., securities.

The major issues of the week will be awarded Thursday, when Detroit opens bids on $22,088,000 bonds. The next day Lehigh County, Pa., will sell $600,000. Several other miscellaneous issues will close the week. On June 1 Buffalo will sell $7,582,000 of securities.

TONE COMPARATIVELY STEADY ON THE CURB

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, May 15. — Today's market on the Curb Exchange purtook a course similar to that shown in recent sessions, although business during the opening period was slightly increased in some quarters.

Standard Oil of New York opened with a small gain but this improvement was cancelled with the introductory dealings in the new when issued shares to be exchanged in the merger with General Petroleum. Sales in the new stock were reported at 31⅜. The quotement issued by Ex-Jersey showing a gross business for last year amounting to more than one billion dollars had no apparent effect on that group.

A few industrials sold off sharply, among which were a five-point loss in Ford Motor of Canada and a decline of eight points in Kraft Cheese. Baking shares were lower.

Penn. Water fluctuated more than utility division, moving up 3½ points to 141½. Other stocks ranged narrowly in quiet trading.

The market all through the week showed a comparatively steady tone. Movements, even in specialties, were unusually narrow, and there was a general absence of large offerings, reflecting the chief haustion of much of the supply that had come into the market on previous downward movements. This market did not make such a good response to the settlement of the British strike as other security trading groups, reflecting the absence of any substantial short account. Where large trading occurred, the dealings were generally connected with special conditions or developments, among them being General Electric.

Oil stocks were irregular, Anglo-American moving up from 16⅜ to 17⅜ on the strike settlement, and Imperial Oil of Canada advancing over a point to above 36. Low records were made in the Galena issues, the common stock falling from 20 to 18½ and the preferred, old, from 82 to 78.

Public utilities showed a sagging tendency, while bonds were strong and active.

Foreign Exchange

NEW YORK, May 15.—The Evening Post, in its weekly copyrighted foreign exchange review, says:

"The features of today's financial market was the spurt in rates on London to above gold parity of $4.8665 for the first time since 1914—a recovery in only about a week from the lowest level of the year, recorded soon after declaration of the general strike. The sudden rebound of sterling came as a surprise to bankers here and was attributed to a concerted demand for British exchange by continental countries as well as by traders who had sold for a decline during the strike. The British government was credited also with buying sterling and reducing accounts in other European capitals. Coincident with the new peak for sterling, French francs fell to a record low level barely above the 3c level, and Belgian francs swayed in sympathy. Italian rates rallied briskly, however, on official support.

"Movements and events of world-wide importance were included on the developments in the market all through the week, the most important feature being the recovery in sterling exchange following the settlement of the general strike in England on Wednesday, which was followed by an immediate readjustment in the sterling rates to the levels prevailing before English affairs were menaced by the strike order. Following that action demand sterling, which had ranged around $4.85 at the beginning of the week, moved up to $4.86 and at the same time the difference between sterling and cables was restored to the quotations prevailing before the strike started.

"Leading continental rates were acutely unsettled from the week. It had been a matter of current report for some days preceding that the Italian institute had practically exhausted available resources in its previous efforts to sustain the lire in the exchange market, and absence of this support left the market for Italian exchange without any firm demand. At times the institute put in bids, but the bids were on a downward scale and only caused temporary checks to decline. Yesterday the market situation for Italian exchange became most acute when one block of 50,000,000 lire was offered at 3.57 and within a short time the market yielded to below 3.40, the lowest at which the Italian currency ever sold and a loss of ¼ cent from the level prevailing at the beginning of the week.

FOREIGN SECURITIES FEATURE BOND TRADE

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, May 15.—With a few outstanding exceptions, bond prices remained very motionless today in one of the dullest trading sessions of the year. Interest centered confidentially in the foreign list, where changes were conflicting.

The return of sterling to gold parity for the first time since 1914 strengthened United Kingdom bonds but failed to stimulate a large volume of buying. Net gains were limited to fractions. Polish obligations, on the other hand, continued to sag under a heavy weight of liquidation on reports that the revolutionary movement had forced the high officials of the government to resign. Both the 4 and 8 per cent issues sold at new low levels for the year. French and Italian bonds were little changed.

Buying interest was at a low ebb in the domestic list, although a few developed independent strength. Atlantic Refining debenture 5s were strengthened by the announcement of higher prices for crude oil and gasoline, and Lehigh Valley Railroad liens responded to reports of record April earnings. Advances of a point or so were reported by Punta Alegre Sugar 7s, Crown Cork and Seal 6s and Pacific Gas and Electric 5s.

Public offering of $3,000,000 Mansfield Mining and Smelting Co. of Germany 15-year 7 per cent bonds will be made next Monday at a price of 93½ to yield about 7¾ per cent.

NEW YORK BOND MARKET

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, May 15.—In the following table will be found a list of sales, highest, lowest and closing prices of bonds traded in on the Stock Exchange today, sales being in $1000 lots (000 omitted).

Quotations on all United States Liberty Bonds are in dollars and thirty-seconds of a dollar, that is, for instance, a sale printed 99—24 means $99 and twenty-four thirty-seconds of a dollar and not $99.24.

Total sales today were $5,092,000 against $9,527,000 yesterday, $6,297,000 a week ago, $6,676,000 a year ago, and $6,155,000 two years ago. From Jan. 1 to date sales were $1,240,900,000 against $1,443,175,000 a year ago, and $1,250,447,000 two years ago.

POST-DISPATCH DERBY PICTURES SENT BY AIRPLANE

These Photographs were made by Staff Photographer Clint Murphy at Churchill Downs yesterday afternoon and were carried from Louisville by airplane to Scott Field and thence by motorcycle to St. Louis. The airplane left Louisville at 5:27 p. m. and landed at the field near Belleville at 7:31. The pictures were in the Post-Dispatch at 8:30 o'clock, three hours and 19 minutes after the finish of the Derby.

Bubbling Over assumed lead at once and restrained showed the way until stretch, where Johnson permitted him to sprint away and win with ease. Barenbarrage began slowly but came around others steadily and finished going gamely. Rockman showed good form and raced prominently from the start but was tiring and just lasted for third place. Rhinock came with a big rush near end. Pompey was done after three-quarters and had no mishaps. Espino raced well. Canter was far back for most of the way.

Scratched: Bolton, Rassuli, Take a Chance, Boot to Boot.

Mutuels paid—Bubbling Over (entry) $5.80, $5.80, $4.60; Bagenbarrage (entry) $5.80, $4.80; Rock Man, $30.

By George H. Daley
Racing Editor of the New York World.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., May 15.—Bubbling Over is on racing pedestal. There is no soft spot in him. E. R. Bradley's good 3-year-old son of North Star III and Beaming Beauty raced to commanding victory in the fifty-second renewal of the Kentucky Derby at Churchill Downs, here, today.

Thousands did Bubbling Over homage. The Middle West scored the East. It was Kentucky's big day. With Albert Johnson in the saddle, Bubbling Over broke well, made all the running and shaking off Pompey at the turn for home, galloped down through the stretch—a lane of cheering humanity—to win easily by five lengths from his stable companion, Bagenbaggage. It was a triumph for Bradley as in 1921, when Behave Yourself and Black Servant also ran one-two.

Mrs. Margaret Emmerson Baker's Rock Man was third, three lengths back and only a short head before the Park view Stable's Rhinock.

Pompey, the futurity winner of last year; Canter; Display, winner of the Preakness last Monday, and Blondin, among others of the 13 which faced the barrier, were beaten ruck.

Close to Record Time.

Bubbling Over ran the mile and a quarter in 2:03 4-5, only two-fifths of a second behind the record for the race hung up by Old Rosebud in 1914. He earned $50,000, a princely prize.

He paid $5.80 in the mutuel machines, going to the post a favorite. This represented 19 to 10, just short of 2 to 1.

By a strange freak of machine betting, he paid exactly the same price for the place, and $4.60, or 13 to 10, for third. This was because his stable companion ran second.

Rock Man paid his followers $30 for $2, or 14 to 1 for finishing third.

The fractional times of the race were: 0:23, 0:47, 1:12 1-5, 1:38 1-5 and 2:03 4-5. The pace was fast and even. It killed off Pompey.

For a brief space of time, as the horses raced through the stretch, the colorful crowd of close to 70,000 men and women was torn by an earthquake of emotion and swept by a hurricane of enthusiasm.

There was nothing placid or phlegmatic about the huge gathering. It gave way to pent-up feelings, intensified by long anticipation, and broke loose to hail a worthy winner of a turf classic. Voices were raised in a roar, characteristic of racing; hats were tossed in the air, relief was sought by the shaking of hands and slapping of backs. Hundreds poured out on the track and surrounded Bubbling Over like a wall.

"A Great Horse, a Big Day."

When the tumult and the shouting died away, when men and women returned to something approaching reason, Mayor Walker of New York, who watched the race from the stewards' stand, picked up the gold cup, the trophy of victory, and, handing it to Bradley, said: "It is indeed a privilege to congratulate the owner of such a horse. He is worthy and you have reason to be proud of his achievement. This has been a big day and you have played a big part in it."

The Mayor was enthusiastically received and heartily cheered, and so was Albert Johnson, the jockey, when he was called to get his congratulations.

In the meantime, a huge floral shawl had been thrown over the withers of Bubbling Over, and a bunch of American Beauty roses handed to the jockey. So they were decked when the cameras clicked.

The race was truly run and fairly won. Bubbling Over was the complete master. He had the speed to race free of trouble in the first sixteenth and he had the stamina and the heart to carry the full distance. His performance was truly impressive.

No Excuses for Pompey.

Pompey had no excuses. Laverne Fator got him off in a good position and dropped in behind the pacemaker hardly more than a length away. For a mile he held to his position, with Rock Man at his withers; and then he weakened. Just when it looked as if he would come on to give challenge, physical exhaustion overcame him. The pace told, as pace of such a kind will. The soft spot was in his stamina, not in his courage. He battled, but to no purpose.

Bagenbaggage, carrying first colors of the stable, was patiently rated in sixth place for the early part, but he moved up smoothly, rounding the turn, and when Pompey began to hang back he rushed into second place to chase his stable companion home and to protect him. Rock Man hung on grimly and ran a good race. Rhinock closed resolutely, but earned only fourth money.

Display acted like a wild horse at the barrier and breaking slowly, was carried wide at the first turn and never reached a contending position.

H. P. Whitney's Blondin, which was beaten only a head in the Preakness, and William Ziegler's Espino, were back all the way.

Canter Unequal to Test.

Canter was prominent for a mile, running smoothly close to the pace, but like Pompey, he weakened when the real test came.

The rumor spread like wildfire after the third race that W. R. Coe had been taken to a hospital. He denied it, saying: "I may have a heart attack if Pompey is beaten, but just now I'm quite well and full of confidence."

After the race he said: "I am disappointed, but there is nothing else to say. Pompey had his chance."

Albert Johnson said: "Bubbling Over was full of run from start to finish. I never had to call on him. He is a good horse."

FRENCH AND DANISH CUP TEAMS ARE TIED

By the Associated Press.

COPENHAGEN, Denmark, May 15.—France and Denmark divided honors in today's doubles play of the second round, European division, Davis Cup tennis matches. Rain caused the postponement of a third set with the games 5 to 4 in favor of Denmark. It will be continued tomorrow.

Ulrich and Hendricksen of Denmark won the first set, 6—4. Brugnon and Cochet of France took the second set by a 6—3 score.

CARLARIS,
Coffroth Handicap winner, early Kentucky Derby favorite, and his trainer, Fred Kraft.

JOCKEY JOHNSON 'JUST SAT STILL AND LET BUBBLING OVER RUN'

By the Associated Press.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., May 15.

SITTING still and letting Bubbling Over run was the way Jockey Albert Johnson tonight described his Kentucky Derby victory.

Johnson was almost crying from emotion when Mayor Walker of New York presented the gold cup of victory to Bubbling Over's owner, E. R. Bradley of Kentucky, and those near by heard a quaver in the Mayor's voice, and in Bradley's, too.

Then Johnson got in a word, and it was, "Thank you, Mr. Bradley, for letting me work for you and for letting me ride him."

H. J. Thompson, who trained the winner, wasn't even in the judges' stand. Somebody asked the jockey where Thompson was and got the reply: "Oh, he's probably over at the stables."

Johnson was up on another winner in the same classic in 1922, when he piloted Morvich to take a $50,000 purse.

The same season he won both divisions of the Pimlico Futurity at Baltimore, with an $80,000 purse.

Johnson is 25 years old. He rode first on big tracks at Tijuana, Mexico, in 1915, and the following season was within two mounts of the nation's leading jockey.

Carlaris to Be Shipped May 20 For Local Derby

Coffroth Handicap Winner to Skip Latonia Derby and Train Here.

Carlaris, winter book favorite for the Kentucky Derby, until he developed a leg infection, will be shipped next Thursday from Churchill Downs, Louisville, to Fairmount race track, Collinsville, to finish his preparation for the Fairmount Derby.

The Fairmount feature, which carries $25,000 added money, will be run June 19. It has attracted a field of 169 entries, five more than entered the Kentucky Derby. Practically all of the good horses of the Kentucky event will be eligible for the local one.

Carlaris was considered almost certain to win the Kentucky event because of his amazing race and time in the Coffroth handicap. It was said that had he been extended he could have gone the mile and one-fourth in close to two minutes' time. Bubbling Over's time for yesterday's race was 2:03 4-5.

Carlaris' leg infection caused him to be withdrawn from the Kentucky event about three weeks ago. Trainer Fred Kraft declared the horse would not be fit to train for a hard race. It proved to be correct.

Carlaris will pass up the Latonia Derby, which is to be run June 5 because of the shortness of the time to prepare for it. The Latonia is the only Derby in the United States to be run over the full derby route of one and one-half miles.

SCHALK DENIES THOMAS IS WILD; SAYS UMPIRES ARE FOOLED BY BREAK

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, May 15. — Alphonse Thomas, the White Sox pitcher, puts so much stuff on the ball that he not only baffles the opposing batsmen but also fools the umpires, according to Ray Schalk, the veteran Pale Hose catcher. The "wildness" of the former Oriole star in his few starts for the Collins aggregation is attributed to the fact that the umpires are not familiar with Thomas' pitching, according to the "Cracker," who adds that the arbiters spot the ball coming in apparently outside when it actually breaks quickly and snips the corner of the plate. Thomas' fast ball acts like forked lightning, says Schalk.

In the recent game with the Tigers, Thomas appeared to be as wild as the prairie flower, as batter after batter was waved to first base by the umpire. Schalk was just about as wild mentally as apparently Thomas was physically. He argued with the umpires but had no luck.

"Tommy is a great pitcher," said Schalk, "and the only trouble is that the umpires are not used to his pitching."

Schalk told his difficulty to Umpire Billy Evans. Evans said that he had never worked behind the plate when Thomas was doing the twirling, but he recalled the case of "Wee Dick" Kerr, the former White Sox left-hander.

"Kerr had just about the same trouble that you tell me Thomas is having. When Kerr first broke in, his showing was not good because his curve broke so sharply that some strikes were overlooked by the umpire. Later on he was very effective. When the umpires became familiar with his style of pitching."

Athletic Southpaw Gives Only Six Hits—Bishop Triples With Bases Full.

By the Associated Press.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., May 15.

The Athletics took the first game of the series with Detroit today, 8 to 0. A record crowd of 38,000 saw Lefty Grove blank the Tigers, giving them only six widely scattered hits. It was his fourth victory in 13 days.

Bishop's triple with the bases full in the third, followed by Cochrane's homer gave the Athletics five runs and in the following inning four more hits gave them another pair of tallies.

MAJOR STROCK RESIGNS AS MISSOURI MILITARY ACADEMY HEAD COACH

MEXICO, Mo., May 15.—The resignation of Maj. J. C. Strock, director of athletics and part owner of the Missouri Military Academy here for the past 12 years, has been announced. Maj. Strock, with W. F. Woodford, president of the Atchison Savings Bank, Atchison, Kan., and Paul G. Bodley, former cadet, will enter the insurance business in Topeka, Kan., where the three are forming the Metropolitan National Life Insurance Co. The resignation is effective with the close of the present school year on June 1.

Beaumont Wins Over Central 8-3 And Takes Lead

Roosevelt Gains 9 to 6 Victory From Soldan in Opening Contest.

Perfect fielding and timely hitting enabled Capt. Harold "Lefty" Grant to pitch Beaumont to an 8-to-3 victory over Central, and incidentally to reach first place in the City High School League baseball race, yesterday afternoon, on the Cleveland High school Field. In the opening battle, Roosevelt outhit Soldan in winning a 9-to-6 win, in breaking the last place tie.

The coolness of Grant on the mound is equal to that of any hurler in the league, and the diminutive southpaw won his fourth victory.

Grant permitted only two hits in four innings. In the fifth George Bohringer singled through short and McIncosh spoiled "Lefty's" hope for a perfect day by tripling down the third base line. McIntosh scored on a sacrifice for Central's second run.

Central Starts Poorly.

The first three batters to oppose Wielandy, the Central twirler, got on first in the opening inning. Two Central errors and a passed ball enabled all three to tag home plate. Beaumont kept piling up its lead, even scoring in the sixth, the last time at bat for the winners.

The heavy hitting of Kelly Heitz, center fielder, was one of the potent factors in Roosevelt's victory. Twice the speedy Heitz poled home runs, each time scoring behind a runner. Soldan donated all the other runs to the South Side nine, either by muffing the ball, or by throwing the pill around, or by free tickets to first base.

The Roosevelt outfielders had a serene afternoon in the gardens, not having an assist or put-out among them. This was largely due to the flinging of Bodge. A total of 15 assists and 21 put-outs was turned in by the Roosevelt infielders. First Baseman Thomas being the busiest on the squad, with 14 chances, muffing only one.

Smallest Type Motors Entered At Indianapolis

INDIANAPOLIS.—Great as was the speed of the eight-cylinder motor cars which competed last year in the 500-mile automobile race here, the velocity of the pistons and superchargers of the new "vest-pocket" engines which will be used in the Memorial Day race will be greater.

Motors in cars which compete May 31 must have a piston displacement not greater than 91½ cubic inches. The first race in 1911 was for motors of 631 cubic inches or under. Engines built for the approaching race will be only about two-thirds as large as the smallest engine in use in America in commercial or passenger automobiles.

Engineers of these machines say the crank shafts will revolve at a maximum of 7000 times a minute, as against 5800 revolutions for the engines used last year. The supercharges are expected to attain 20,000 revolutions while the crank shaft is revolving 7000 times.

Some officials predict there is a chance for the record average of 101.13 miles an hour for 500 miles being bettered. The record was established by Pete DePaolo in an Indianapolis-made car.

Derby Winner to Race In Europe, Owner States

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., May 15.

FROM one end of the Blue Grass State to the other tonight people chanted the victory of a horse that was bred in Old Kentucky. The great chorus continued from the afternoon, when a beautiful chestnut colt, bearing the colors of E. R. Bradley, thundered down the stretch to victory in the Derby. The colt was Bubbling Over and he was a Kentuckian through and through.

Tonight Bradley predicted that Bubbling Over would go on to equal, if not eclipse, the record made by Man O'War as a 3-year-old and further said the colt would be sent to Europe to carry the Stars and Stripes to further international renown.

The East sent its best colts to race against Kentucky's pride, but at the end of the fifty-second running of the renowned Kentucky Derby, the cracks of Maryland and New York were trailing in the dust. Not only did Bubbling Over win away off by himself, but in the closing moments of the race his stable companion, Bagenbaggage, appeared from nowhere and took second money. Thus Bradley repeated his famous victory in the Derby of five years ago, when his two colts, Behave Yourself and Black Servant, finished first and second. Bradley is the only owner twice to have horses run one-two in America's turf classic.

In the Realm Of Bird Dogs

By A. F. Hochwalt.

ANOTHER great field trial winning pointer has changed hands. The dog in question is Undaunted Rap formerly owned by Doyle Henderson of Alamo, Tenn., but now the property of Charles F. Hartmetz of Evansville, Ind.

The price paid by Hartmetz has not been made public, but a year ago Henderson was asking $5000 for Undaunted Rap, and it is not likely that this figure has been greatly shaded, for since that time, the dog made a very good win in the all-age stake of the all-America trials down in Grand Junction, Tenn.

In 1924 Undaunted Rap was the leading bird dog Derby winner on the major circuit. He won twice on the prairies of Canada, and then came down and captured some of the most important stakes for two-year-olds on the quail circuit.

The dog proved very forcibly that he is as good working prairie chicken as he is quail. That is the strong forte of Undaunted Rap; he is a real bird dog and judges of the present day are placing more stress on high-class performance in this direction than they are on speed and range.

Style and Intensity.

It has been a very wholesome reaction for during the past 15 years there has been a tendency to place speed and range above everything else. In the final analysis, it is the dog that can go out and make the picturesque points, with style and intensity, that wins the gallery —and the judges, too, for that matter.

Hartmetz, the new owner of Undaunted Rap will campaign the dog in the all-age stakes during the coming season and it is more than likely that Trainer George Gray will have charge of him. It was Gray who blew the whistle over Rap during his entire campaign as a Derby and he probably knows him better than any one else.

Those bird-dog breeders and fanciers round about St. Louis are making active preparations for their annual fall trials, which will take place in the vicinity of St. Louis in October. The St. Louis Pointer and Setter Club was organized less than three months ago, but the membership is already well past the 300 mark. Practically all of the members are looking for good prospects in both pointers and setters, to run in the trials next fall.

It is more than likely that some good Derby prospects will emanate from Atlanta, Ga., next fall also. J. K. Ottley, well-known bankers in the metropolis of the Cracker State, has a litter of puppies, all of which are pronounced unusual prospects.

Puppies' Promising Showing.

The puppies are from a litter by Scott Hudson's good dog, Dr. John Cromwell, out of Ottley's Belle of Joyeuse, the little setter that won the American Field Futurity at Vinita, Ok., so handily a few years ago.

These puppies were started in the nursery stake of the Georgia trials at Waynesboro, that State, last November, and while only one of them was placed, the others showed enough form to warrant giving them further training.

No doubt more of the litter would have gotten into the money at Georgia last fall, but at the time the trials were run they were coming down with distemper, and, as a consequence, they were not at their best.

They are now over that dread disease which all dogs, and especially highly bred ones, must have at some period in their lives. Latest reports indicate that at least three of this litter will be seen in field trials next season.

Mike Milligan Popular.

Another good dog hailing from Atlanta, and which will be seen in the principal trials of next season, is the pointer, Mike Milligan, owned by Trammel Scott. As a Derby, Mike Milligan attracted a world of attention when he won the two Derby stakes of the Georgia Club in 1924.

It was in the long heat races of the season just closed that Mike proved conclusively what a real bird dog he is. He was a first-year all-age dog last year and he was not quite well enough finished for the championships, but in the National stake at Grand Junction, last February, he caused many a spectator to sit up more closely to watch his work. Mike Milligan was developed by Henry Banks of Guerryton, Ala., and he will probably handle him again next season.

Paddock Sets New Record in Century Dash

Fastest Human, With Wind Against Him, Is Timed in 9 5-10 Seconds.

By the Associated Press.

LOS ANGELES, May 15.—Charlie Paddock, spectacular sprinter, climaxed his season's comeback here today when he ran the 100-yard dash in 9.5 seconds, lopping a tenth of a second off the world's record for the century held by himself and several others. The race was part of the Southern Pacific A. A. U. meet.

With every precaution taken to clock Paddock in his try at the world's record, three watches caught him at 9.5 seconds, while the fourth made it 9.6 seconds. A slight wind was blowing across the track into the faces of the runners. Otherwise track conditions were favorable.

Some of the honors of Paddock's race go to Charley Borah, University of Southern California freshman, who led the record smashing sprinter almost to Paddock's spectacular finishing leap.

At the 90-yard mark, Borah was leading by eight inches and Paddock was running desperately, with his legs churning the cinders in their usual style. Paddock's advantage at the tape was a scant four inches, the timers said. Pinney of Los Angeles Athletic Club, under whose colors Paddock also ran was third and Schults of California Institute of Technology was fourth.

Schulte Signs New Contract

SIX RECORDS FALL IN MEET CAPTURED BY OHIO STATE TEAM

By the Associated Press.

COLUMBUS, O., May 15. — Winning six first places and scoring in all but two of the 16 events, Ohio State today unseated Wisconsin as traditional winner of the annual quadrangular meet involving Buckeyes, the Badgers, Northwestern and Chicago. Ohio scored 64 5-6 points to 53 5-6 for Wisconsin, 44 1-3 for Northwestern and 13 for Chicago.

Six meet records were broken and another tied.

Capt. Guthrie of Ohio State was individual high scorer, winning firsts in the high and low hurdle races, and third in the broad jump. He set a new meet record of 14 9-10 seconds in the high hurdles.

Burd of Chicago and Anson of Ohio State staged the prettiest duel of the afternoon in the high jump. The Chicagoan finally won at 6 feet 6 inches, tying his Big Ten mark set last year by his teammate, Justin Russell. Ansen went out at 6 feet 5 inches.

Capt. Kennedy of Wisconsin shaved a tenth of a second off the quarter-mile mark to 50 5-10 seconds. McGinnis, his teammate, raised the pole vault record to 12 feet 4 inches and Kreuse, also of the Badgers, increased the javelin throw record of the meet to 197 feet 7 inches. Martin of Northwestern lowered the half-mile mark to 1m 56 7-10s, and Irwin, Ohio State, tied the century dash record of 10s.

Von Elm Is Tied For Second in British Tourney

Major Hezlet Victor in St. George's Vase With a 159 Score.

By the Associated Press.

SANDWICH, England, May 15.—British linksmen today successfully turned back the first threat of America's invading Walker cup golf team with a victory by Major C. O. Hezlet, in the St. George's vase tournament.

With a card of 158 for the 36-hole competition, the sturdy British veteran staved off the threat of George von Elm, California member of the American team, who finished in a tie for second place at 161 with Robert Harris, the British amateur champion.

For a time it appeared that Von Elm might duplicate Francis Ouimet's feat of 1923 in winning the cup, but Hezlet saved the day for Great Britain after her strongest hopes in the event had been outstroked by the invader.

Ouimet also made a sensational closing bid for the prize with a brilliant 79 in the afternoon, but an 85 for the morning round earned him no better than a tie for fifth place with Cyril Tolley.

Jones Gets 167 Total.

Cross winds which harrassed the players produced plenty of high scores, Jesse Guilford and Watts Gunn being almost undone by the conditions. Bobby Jones, American amateur champion and ace of the visiting team, likewise was affected, turning in a card of 167.

Douglas Grant, American player living in England, was fourth in the field with a card of 162, topping the score of Tolley and Guilford by two strokes. Next in order came Capt. Robert Gardner of Chicago and E. F. Storey, English player, tied at 166; Jones, 167; Roland Mackenzie and T. A. Torrence, 168. Jess Sweetser of the American team required three more strokes than the latter pair, while Guilford and Gunn tried with 173 and 174, respectively.

Some of the best British amateurs finished with still higher scores in the field of 69 starters, however.

Von Elm Is Real Star.

Under conditions which made any score in the low eighties a difficult achievement, Von Elm's stroking stood out as one of the most noteworthy accomplishments of an American player in this country. Invading England for the first time, and playing over a course which he never saw until yesterday, the Los Angeles man displayed a brand of golf which experts declared was at least six strokes better than his mark. His consistency in the face of trying conditions stamped him as one of the most formidable members of the Walker team, in the estimation of English experts.

Scores of the five leaders and of American Walker Cup players follow: Maj. O. C. Hezlet, 80-79—159; George von Elm, 82-79—161; Robert Harris, 81-80—161; Douglas Grant, 82-79—162; Francis Ouimet, 85-79—164; Cyril Tolley, 82-82—164; Robert Gardner, 86-80—166; Bobby Jones, 81-86—167; Roland MacKenzie, 87-81—168; Jess Sweetser, 90-81—171; James Guilford, 91-82—173; Watts Gunn, 93-83—176.

By DENT McSKIMMING.

St. Louis took another soccer lesson yesterday when the Hakoah Club of Vienna, Austria, defeated a local picked team, 4 goals to 2, at St. Louis University Field. The largest crowd of the local season, estimated at 9000, witnessed a pleasing exhibition of soccer by the well-trained Europeans.

Those St. Louis soccer followers who had no opportunity to witness the defeat of the Ben Millers by Bethlehem in the National Cup final at Brooklyn a month ago, might have obtained some notion of how the trick was performed had they attended yesterday's match. The visitors outplayed the home-bred lads at almost every angle of the game and had it been necessary to count goals in the second half to strengthen their grip on a victory, they might conceivably have added two or three more.

As the contest went, Hakoah, an all-Jewish aggregation, scored all its goals in the first half. St. Louis registered one in the first half on Jim Dunn's shot, and counted once in the second period on a penalty kick by Erbe.

Locals Seldom Prominent.

St. Louis was seldom prominent in the first period, possibly because of the glare of a low-hanging sun, but more probably because of the excellence of the game played by the visitors. In the second period, both teams made substitutions and St. Louis appeared to have greater portence in its attack than was the case earlier, although Brengel did not play a better game than the man he replaced, Bollam.

There were some peculiar features to Hakoah's play. Especially were they adroit in coming up to a defender and then eluding him, carrying the ball on and on until some fleet-footed back broke up the play. The halfbacks figured strongly in the attack, coming up to take a back pass from a harassed forward and giving the ball quickly to some man who was wide open. The inside forwards maneuvered with the ball in such a manner as to bring the defending half-back or full-back off the wing man or off the center forward in order that a pass might be placed where it would work most harm for St. Louis.

Defenders Out of Position.

They really coaxed defenders out of position. If there was a weakness in the club, it was in the inability of the forwards to register quickly, when scoring openings presented themselves. They had the ball in perfect position for a drive at goal innumerable times in the second half, but failed to make good on a single occasion. The worst offender in this respect was Outside Right Neufeld, who apparently was regarded by his teammates as the strongest spot of all. They fed him throughout the game.

On the St. Louis side there were no "duds." Every man played better football than he is usually capable of but they were confronted with what was apparently an impenetrable defense. They did well to hold the score to 4-2 for on general skill, the visitors were superior to a greater degree than the score seems to indicate.

The opening goal of the game was a remarkable bit of handiwork by Captain Hauster. He weaved his way through the center of the St. Louis defense, bluffed a pass to his center forward and with the same movement of his foot banged a low drive into the corner of the goal. He was a yard outside the penalty line, when he hit the ball.

A Spectacular Goal.

The second by Neufeld, was not so neatly executed, but it was more spectacular. He came fast from the line, caught a pass from Hausler in mid-air and drove the ball into the near goal corner, too fast for LaBeaume, who could only rush the ball with his hand.

The third was a masterpiece of perfect timing and generalship by Inside Left Gruenwald, who managed to step lightly around two defenders to get inside the penalty zone. Here he feinted so skillfully that he created a vast opening in the center between the two fullbacks. Then, with only the lone guardian of the goal before him, he slipped the ball into the corner of the net as deftly as though he were brushing a bit of dust off his coat front. Le Beaume was beaten only by inches, but Gruenwald had purposely cut the ball just so.

Jimmy Dunn's goal, coming shortly after that of Gruenwald, was made possible by his own clever effort near midfield. He advanced the ball and lifted it over the head of a halfback to Nash. The latter was covered immediately by the goaltender, who blocked Nash's shot. The ball rebounded to Dunn's toe, and he made no mistake. Jimmy also came close in the second half, when he hit the goal upright. McHenry and Nash had two of the other St. Louis shots which missed the mark. The opportunities were extremely rare.

Play at Chicago Today.

Playing conditions were not ideal because the day was a bit too warm for the robust sort of game played by St. Louisans. But the field was smooth and true and the big crowd appeared to enjoy the exhibition.

Hakoah departed last night for Chicago, where today they face a picked team of the Chicago league.

Oklahoma Easily Captures Meet From Bears, 94 to 36

Washington U. Athletes Win First in 440 and 880 Yards Runs and Mile Relay; Ties for Honors in Pole Vault.

University of Oklahoma defeated Washington University track team 94½ to 36½ here yesterday afternoon on Francis Field in a Missouri Valley Conference dual meet. The visitors smothered the locals in the dashes and field events, yielding but three first places and one tie to the Washington athletes.

Willmann, Washington, took the half-mile from Stephens and Heald, Oklahoma, in the cleanest victory which the Washington track men scored in the meet. Willman came into the home stretch with 15 yards to spare. Harding, Washington, finished strong to snatch the 440-yard run from Mayberry and Haller of Oklahoma in the fast time of 51.2.

The Bear mile relay quartet scored a decisive victory in the feature event of the meet when Eckert and Willmann opened a 10-yard gap after Harding and Carroll had carried the baton to them on even terms. In the high jump, Hageman and Ledbetter of Washington tied with Anderson and Price of Oklahoma for places.

Loren Murchison attempted to break his own record in the 250-yard dash, but failed, negotiating the distance in 25.3. In a specialty 100-yard dash, the sprint ace covered the distance in 9.9. Harold Osborn, world high jump champion, reached a height of 6 feet 3¼ inches in competition with the university high jumpers. Osborn also ran a flight of 120-yard high hurdles with McDonough, Washington freshman, in 16.3.

STARS DROP FIRST CONTEST OF SERIES TO DETROIT TEAM, 9-8

The Detroit Stars of the Negro National Baseball League scored a victory here yesterday over the St. Louis Stars at the Stars' park by a score of 9 to 8.

The visitors rallied in the eighth inning to collect five runs, taking the lead. Suttles, first baseman for the locals, had a perfect day, collecting four hits in four times at the plate, including a homer.

The bright light of the game was a catch made by Bell in deep center off Westly's drive in the fourth inning. The second game of the series will be played today. Game starting at 3 o'clock.

Reds Win and Go Into Lead In N. L. Race

Lindstrom Gets Five Safeties, but Giants Are Defeated, 11 to 6.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CINCINNATI, May 15.—Cincinnati took first place in the National League marathon today by beating New York, 11 to 6, in a slugging match in which Southworth, Roush and Lindstrom were the batting heroes.

Southworth hit a homer inside the park following two singles in the first, but the Reds put on an uprising later on that was effective against three of the four pitchers used by John McGraw.

Roush and Southworth each drove in four runs, while Lindstrom poked out five straight singles.

After Lucas had been lifted in the sixth with two on and none out, Donohue retired the side on two pitched balls.

EVANS PLAYS OVER BRITISH TITLE LINKS

By the Associated Press.

MUIRFIELD, Scotland, May 15.—Chick Evans of Chicago, former American amateur and open golf champion, is the first American to report at the links of the Honorable Company of Edinburgh Golfers for practice in connection with the coming British amateur tournament.

He played a practice round yesterday and announced the championship course is the severest test he has experienced in all his trips to England or Scotland.

Andy Cohen, Waco Shortstop, Will Join the Giants

By the Associated Press.

WACO, Tex., May 15.

ANDY COHEN, shortstop with the Waco, Texas League club, leaves tomorrow for Cincinnati to join the New York Giants. The Giants today exercised an option they held on Cohen.

The deal involves $20,000 cash and New York is to turn over to the Waco club shortstop Novak at present with the Norfolk, South Atlantic club, the local management said.

WRAY'S COLUMN

Not So Strenuous.

CLARENCE DEMAR of Melrose, nearing 40 years of age, won another marathon race yesterday, this time the national championship. By way of making it plain that Father Time is not interfering with his functioning, Demar won by one and one-quarter miles from his nearest rival, in a total distance of 26 miles 385 yards.

Demar for 15 or more years has specialized in winning marathons and is still at the nefarious business.

We do not mean to cast aspersions on the game of distance running first made famous by the "unknown" Greek Soldier of 2000 or more years ago. There are, however, some who think marathon running is little short of self-destruction and that addicts ought to be incarcerated, and guarded against themselves.

But facts speak louder than critics. And the facts show that marathon running has caused no major accidents whatever; that athletes who have taken up this sport not only are not harmed by it, but carry on far later into life than sprinters and middle distance men.

'Lives of Great Men."

WE MIGHT cite from known public figures:

Demar, who won the American marathon three times and other notable events.

Sidney Hatch, who for 12 years ran annually in Missouri A. C. marathons and in events of international importance.

Joe Forshaw of St. Louis, who is still an active athlete despite 15 years of distance running as a marathon man.

Bill Kennedy, one of the contestants in yesterday's race, who is now still running after more than 15 years of competition.

And it's in the sprints that the greatest stress arises.

No. 12 for Ruth.

THE dead ball seems to be pretty lively, to Babe Ruth, who yesterday hit out his twelfth homer of the year. That's at the rate of over 60 a season. It means a new world's record if maintained.

Perhaps the ball IS dead, as asserted. If so, it means that Babe has come to life, stronger than ever he was.

Too Much Boosting.

LEFTY GROVE won his fourth victory in 13 days for the Athletics yesterday afternoon. Those fans who remember the failure last year of Connie Mack's $106,000 southpaw will marvel.

The fact is Grove is just regaining his poise. His failure last year was a psychological one and resulted from the terrific strain of trying to live up to the over-boosting lavished on him before the season.

This year hardly a word was sent out from the training camp about Grove and as a result he started without any Old Man of the Sea about his neck. He has regained normalcy and his psychologic regeneration is complete.

If the Browns could only pull one of those regenerative somersaults the fans in St. Louis would surely be appreciative. Like Lefty Grove, it is said they are suffering from too much boosting.

Overpraise is sometimes too heavy a handicap to overcome.

Life in the Old Boy.

LOREN MURCHISON, not extended by talent of national consequence, stretched his remarkable sprinting legs over the 100-yard straightaway at Francis Field yesterday in the fine time of 9.9-10 seconds. This is very good speed, track and lack of competition considered.

It seems to meah that the injured leg Murchison suffered at the height of his indoor season has regained full strength and that Loren will be a formidable contender at the national championships at Philadelphia July 5.

A Great Field.

THAT leg will HAVE to be all right then. It will face the greatest test of its career—and that goes for Olympic games as well as national ones.

In the sprints with Murchison at the sesquicentennial meet will be Locke, the Nebraska comet; Paddock, called the "fastest human;" Jack Schoiz, Olympic champion and world's record holder; Frank Hussey, national champion, and Al Leconey, Chet Bowman, Al Miller, De Hart Hubbard and other runners, all better than 10-second men for the 100 yards.

Picking a Derby winner in January is a soft snap compared to naming the winner of the national final this year.

Michigan Wins From Illinois

By the Associated Press.

URBANA, Ill., May 15.—Michigan went into the undisputed baseball lead of the Big Ten this afternoon by beating Illinois 9 to 4, after a first inning of blunders on the part of the Illini had given the Wolverines a five run lead.

Several Illinois errors in the opening inning were responsible for Bud Stewart being knocked out of the box after four runs had been scored and the insertion on the mound of John Ludlam, who was unable to hold the Michigan boys. Illinois was almost helpless against the clever pitching of Miller.

Score:

Michigan	5	0	1	0	3	0	0	0	0	—	9	8	1

Kuck Establishes New World Record For Javelin Throw

By the Associated Press.

PITTSBURG, Kan., May 15.

JOHN KUCK, Emporia Teachers' College weight heaver, today surpassed the standing world's intercollegiate record for the javelin throw when he sent the spear 214 feet, 2 1-8 inches, in the Kansas Conference track meet here.

The world mark has stood at 212 feet, 11 inches. Kuck's feat smashed the former meet record of 199 feet, 4 inches made by him last year.

Cooney to Box Peterolle.

FARGO, N. D., May 15.—Danny Cooney, Trenton lightweight, today agreed to meet Billy Peterolle of Fargo in a 10-round bout here Saturday night. Cooney will substitute for Tommy "Kid" Murphy, also of Trenton, who was forced to cancel his contract on account of

Concordia Is Victor Over Ancient Rival

Concordia of Springfield, Ill., Defeated by Local Sluggers, 16 to 3.

Concordia Seminary slugged out a 16 to 3 victory over its ancient rival, Concordia Seminary of Springfield (Ill.) yesterday at Lemp's Park. Every regular on the home squad got at least one hit and these, added with Springfield errors, gave the locals a wide margin.

The locals started the bombardment in the first inning, scoring two runs, and drove Hilgendorf from the mound in the second by scoring four runs on two triples, an error and two singles. Lanzhoff, who succeeded Hilgendorf, fared little better, the South Siders running their total to 16 on two homers, one by Rein in the third and one by Scheer in the eighth, and two more triples, one double and four singles.

Lang, captain and star hurler of the locals, pitched an airtight game, allowing but seven hits and striking out 11 Springfield batsmen. Langhoff, former Gustavus Adolphus star, pitched good ball for the visitors, but his team mates gave him ragged support, which made the game listless at times.

Kellermann, veteran Concordia centerfielder, was hit on the head in the first inning and knocked unconscious. He was rushed to a hospital, but his injury is not considered serious.

Clarence Demar Wins National Marathon Run

Veteran Star Has Long Lead Over Nearest Rival at Finish.

By the Associated Press.

BALTIMORE, Md., May 15.—Running one of the most brilliant races of his long career, Clarence H. De Mar, veteran New Englander, captured the national marathon championship of the Amateur Athletic Union today over the winding hill and dale course from Laurel to Baltimore.

Wearing the colors of the Melrose (Mass.) Post of the American Legion, the 38-year-old typesetter spread-eagled a field of 54 starters with an unfaltering, machine-like pace that killed off all opposition. De Mar, smiling and almost as fresh as at the start, broke the tape at the finish fully a mile and a quarter in front of his nearest rival, Albert (Whitey) Michelson of East Port Chester, Conn., with Bill Agee, 20-year-old Baltimore youngster, in third place, approximately another mile to the rear.

De Mar Increases Lead.

It was a close battle for the first 15 miles of the hilly grind between Michelson, victor in the 1923 and 1925 Baltimore marathons, and De Mar, with Agee a fairly close third, but after that point De Mar set out at a gait that quickly left all rivals far behind. Entering the city limits at the 20-mile mark, De Mar had lengthened his margin to a half mile and in the race through the city's streets to the finish in front of the city hall, the winner more than doubled his advantage.

De Mar's time of 2 hours 45 minutes 5 1-5 seconds was nearly four minutes behind the course record, made in 1924 by Frank Zuna of Newark, N. J., although a re-measurement had shortened it by 1274 feet to make it the exact marathon distance of 26 miles, 385 yards. It was nearly 20 minutes slower than the world's record set by Johnny Miles, young Nova Scotian, in winning the Boston marathon a few weeks ago, but it was faster than the recognized marathon record of 2:48:23 3-5, held by Michelson.

Michelson Slows to Walk.

Michelson, apparently fatigued and slowing at times to a walk, lost ground rapidly over the last half of the race, but had no trouble saving his second place margin over Agee. The latter was competing in his first full-distance marathon and earned his spurs by leading home such veterans as Harvey Frick of the Millrose A. A., New York; Frank Zuna and gray-haired Bill Kennedy of East Portchester, Conn. The later three finished fourth, fifth and sixth respectively.

CARDINALS BAT GENEWICH HARD AND DEFEAT BRAVES, 12 TO 7

SEVEN ERRORS ARE MADE BY BOSTON TEAM

Keen Gains Easy Victory—Bottomley's Double and Homer by Mueller Start Fireworks in First Inning.

By J. Roy Stockton

Davie Bancroft's Braves did everything wrong yesterday afternoon and the Cardinals blasted their way to an easy victory in the opening game of the series, 12 to 7.

Bancroft permitted Joe Genewich to remain in the box long after he should have been in the showers. The Braves turned seven errors in the field, got only eight hits off Victor Keen and played listlessly.

It was a surprise to St. Louis fans, who have been accustomed to seeing Bancroft's teams play with a fire and dash, even though they are usually in the lower strata.

The Cardinals did not waste any time putting the game on ice. After Blades had walked to start the first inning and Douthit had hit into a double play, Andy High gave Hornsby's men an opening by mussing up a grounder from Hornsby.

Runs and More Runs.

Even though the runs were unearned, Genewich was being hit so soundly that it would have been good judgment for Bancroft to have taken him out for anybody else. However, Davie permitted Joe to tarry and in the third the Cardinals removed all doubt about the outcome of the contest. Bottomley opened this attack with a triple to right, Mueller was hit by a pitched ball and after Bell had sent a short fly to Welsh, Genewich packed the bases by walking O'Farrell. Thevenow also waited and walked and Bottomley was forced over the plate.

Keen followed with an easy tap to High. Andy fielded the ball cleanly and had a chance for a double play, second base to first. Instead, he chose to cut off the run at the plate. Mueller, however, was very much on his toes. He can run and will run at the slightest provocation and he easily beat High's throw to the plate, scoring another run and leaving the base paths still congested.

Ray Blades took a called third strike, but Douthit had his swings and singled to center, scoring O'Farrell and Thevenow.

Hornsby then clicked a double to center, scoring Keen and Douthit. Bottomley, batting the second time, flied to left for the final out.

Keen Has It Easy.

Keen was a brilliant pitcher for five innings, holding the Braves to two hits, but in the sixth he relaxed and the Boston crew put three runs over the plate.

Bancroft became disgusted after four and a half innings and withdrew from the game, sending Jimmy Johnston to third and shifting E. Taylor to short. With one out in the sixth, Johnston drew a pass and Welsh singled to center. Burrus smashed a double to left, scoring Johnston, Welsh stopping at third. Brown's sacrifice fly to Douthit scored Welsh and High's double to right sent Burrus home. Hornsby then went to the rescue of the weakening Keen and made a fine stop and throw to retire E. Taylor and end the rally.

In the last half the Cardinals increased their total to the final dozen by scoring two runs, aided by the worst fielding exhibition that has been seen here all year. Bottomley was called out on strikes but Mueller hit to High and Andy fumbled, his third error of the game. Bell singled to left and Wilson's throw to third got away from Johnston and Mueller went to third and Bell to second. O'Farrell hit to Johnston and when Jimmy threw high to the plate, Mueller scored and Bell went to third. Thevenow scored Bell with a sacrifice fly to Brown.

That was all the Cardinals scored but it proved enough. The Braves put on a rally in the eighth but their four additional runs still left them five short of a tie.

Johnston drew a walk to start this rally and was forced by Welsh. Burrus walked and when Brown singled to left, Johnston scored. Now it was the Cardinals' turn to do some ragged fielding. High hit to Hornsby and it looked like a double play. Thevenow, however, dropped a throw from Rogers and all hands were safe and the bases well filled. E. Taylor drew the third pass of the inning, forcing Burrus over the plate, and Siemer singled to left, scoring Brown and High.

With one down and two on the bases, Jack Smith, former Cardinal, was called in to bat for Genewich. He flied to Douthit, who threw to third to head off E. Taylor. Siemer tried to make second on the throw in and was doubled, Douthit to Bell to Hornsby.

Cooney southpawed against the Cardinals in the eighth inning and held them scoreless, giving them one hit, walking one and fanning a batter.

Cardinal Notes

Bancroft took a shower and watched the last few innings in his street clothes.

The Braves were unfortunate trying to retire Mueller. Five errors were turned trying to get Heinie. High missed two grounders from him, he advanced two bases on Johnston's two errors and took an extra base on a single when Wilson fumbled.

Zach Taylor kicked at a ball called on O'Farrell in the sixth. When he was still complaining after Thevenow's sacrifice fly, Umpire Hart gave the catcher the gate.

Benton or Smith will pitch the second game of the series today for the Braves, with Rhem due for the Cardinals. Rhem has won five of his six starts.

Summers Stars In Pin Tourney

Scores 1950 for Second Place of All-Events in City Handicap.

Spectacular bowling by Henry Summers featured in yesterday's rolling in the City Handicap tournament. Summers rolled games of 218, 246, 210 for a total of 674, in the doubles and 180, 248, 268 a 676 total. Having scored 600 previously in the five-men event his grand total of 1950 gave him second place in the all-events, while his grand total of 712 pins in the singles, which included 26 pins handicap, gave him third place in that event.

In the doubles event, Summers and Tavener took eleventh place with a total of 1301, aided by a handicap of 62 pins. Tavener's total was 564.

A special squad will be scheduled tonight at 8:30 o'clock to accommodate those who have been unable to appear when scheduled.

Leaders are as follows:

Two-man event: Arthur J. Spelter and Mike Stock, 1367; O. Steel and Charles Meek, 1359; W. Heichelbeck and E. Tiegraver, 1329; Lee Bolin and Walter Kuhnert, 1316; C. W. Witzke and J. Winning, 1313.

Sample Wins Three Firsts To Give Webster Groves Interscholastic Victory

County Star Sets New Record in Shotput and Discus—Soldan Is Runner Up—Benld, Ill., Captures Division 2; Fifteen Records Set.

Webster Groves High School won its second leg on the three-time trophy in Division 1 of the Washington U. interscholastic track meet yesterday afternoon by totaling 34½ points, 6½ better than Soldan High School, runnerup. Peoria Central High School and Staunton, tied for third place with 20 points each. Staunton in 1925 was tied with Webster for first.

Benld High School swept through Division 2 to an easy win with 42 points, 12 more than the total of Jackson High School. Third place in Division 2 schools having an enrollment of less than 250 students, went to Whitehall High School with 12½ points. Fifteen new records were set in the meet, ten of them in Division 2, and two records in Division 1 were equaled.

"Bud" Sample, who took three firsts for Webster Groves in the field events, setting new records in two of them was the outstanding athlete of the championship team giving the winners a heavy advantage early in the meet. The Benld quintet, Blevins, Finley, Grabner, Novotny, and Saracco, accounted for the majority of the points which the Division 2 winners piled up. Schuette, Jackson High School, featured the showing of the runner-up in this division setting new records in the mile and half-mile.

In Division 1, new records were set in the 220-yard low hurdles, shotput, 880-yard relay, discus, and pole vault, and the 220-yard dash and the 440-yard records were equaled. The 10 new records in Division 2 will hold in the following events: one-mile run, 220-yard dash, 120 high hurdles, 440-yard run, 220-yard low hurdles, 880-yard run, 880-yard relay, discus throw, pole vault, and running high jump.

Yankees Capture Fifth Straight; No. 12 for Ruth

Pennock Baffles White Sox, Gaining 10 to 1 Victory—Combs Is Star.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, May 15. — The Yankees scored their fifth straight victory when they defeated the White Sox in the opening game of the series here today before a 25,000 crowd. The score was 10 to 1.

After the first inning Pennock was a mystery to the Sox, allowing but one hit.

The Yankees drove Faber out in the third with five straight singles and continued to hit Thomas, who succeeded him.

Ruth made his twelfth home run of the year and his fourth in three days in the eighth, scoring Combs ahead of him.

Combs made four hits in five times at bat. A wonderful running catch by Mostil robbed him of a fifth.

Senn High School Of Chicago Wins Meet at Urbana

Three State Records Set and Two National Marks Tied.

By the Associated Press.

URBANA, Ill., May 15.—Three State interscholastic meet records were smashed, one was tied and two national interscholastic marks were equaled this morning in the thirty-second annual State high-school championship track and field meet of the University of Illinois held in Memorial Stadium.

Bob Rodgers of Senn High School, Chicago, by setting a new State mark of 15 4-5 seconds in the 120-yard high hurdles and tying the State and national record of 24 2-5 seconds in the 220-yard low hurdles, pushed his team into the lead and helped them to win the meet with 17⅛ points. Tilden of Chicago, aided by the victories of Patterson in the 100 and 220 yard dashes and by winning the half-mile relay, banner event of the day, and picking up two stray points, came second.

Besides the new record hung up by Rodgers, Beckmeier of Carlyle set a new mark of :51 1-5 seconds in the quarter-mile run, breaking the old record of :51 3-5 registered last year by Orlovich of Joliet, now a freshman star at the University of Illinois. Wiggin of Eldorado and Miller of Elmwood shared honors in establishing a new high-jump mark, each clearing the bar at 6 feet 3 inches, which ties the national interscholastic record. Their performance was better than that made in the Illinois-Iowa dual meet run off immediately after the interscholastic.

Scores of Other Schools.

None of the other schools made such remarkabl showings as did Senn and Tilden. Trailing the two leaders were: Eldorado, 9½; Elmwood, 8½; Herrin, 8; Hillsboro, 8; Urbana, 8; Galesburg 7; Macomb 6; Waller, (Chicago), 6 and many others with 5 points and less.

Points scored by the remaining schools in the meet were distributed as follows: La Salle Peru, 5; University High (normal), 5; Evanston, 5; Lebanon, 5; DeKalb, 5; Carlyle, 5; Elgin, 5; Kewanee, 5; Hyde Park (Chicago), 4½; Bellefiower, 4; Virginia, 4; La Grange 4; Christopher, 4; Olney, 4; Oak Park, 4; Springfield, 4; Auburn, 4; Carbondale, 4; Milford, 4; Lostant, 4; Englewood (Chicago), 2½; Rockford, 2½; Rock Falls 2; Granville, 2; Knoxville, 2; Jacksonville, 2; Harvey, 2½; Pana, 2; Tuscola, 2; Waukegan, 2; Teachers College, Charleston, 2; Crane, 2; Proviso, 2; Decatur, 2; Centralia, 2; Shannon 2; Chrisman, 2; Naponset, 2; Fairbury, 1; Ridge Farm, 1; Arthur, 1; Mattoon, 1; Wennona, 1; Farmer City, 1.

MICHIGAN WINS AND GOES INTO BIG 10 LEAD

By the Associated Press.

URBANA, Ill., May 15.—Michigan went into the undisputed baseball lead of the Big Ten Conference this afternoon by defeating Illinois, 9 to 4, after a first inning of blunders on the part of the Illini had given the Wolverines a five-run lead.

Gopher Net Stars Lose.

By the Associated Press.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., May 15.—The Michigan tennis team, led by Capt. Krickbaum, defeated the inexperienced Minnesota squad, 4 to 2, in a Big Ten tennis engagement here today. The Gophers broke even in the singles, Bob Shay pulling a surprise by defeating Crane in straight sets and Westman turning in a victory over Olean of the Wolverine squad.

Locke Again Beats World Record Time For 220-Yard Run

By the Associated Press.

LINCOLN, Neb., May 15. ROLAND LOCKE, University of Nebraska sprinter, again bettered Charlie Paddock's world record in the 220-yard dash by running the distance in 20 7-10 seconds in an exhibition race at the Nebraska State College track meet here this afternoon.

Locke was paced by Wyatt and Dailey of the Cornhusker track squad.

Locke ran the 220 yards in 20 5-10 seconds at the Missouri-Nebraska dual meet here recently, faster by 3-10 of a second than the world's record of 20 8-10 seconds held by Paddock.

Manager Sisler Latest Brownie On Injured List

Is Suffering From a Bad Ankle—Opener With Red Sox Is Postponed.

BOSTON, Mass., May 15.—Just when the Browns were going up for their batting practice this afternoon, rain came and the game with the Red Sox was called off.

Manager George Sisler was not in uniform. His ankle, hurt in Washington yesterday, was bothering him and he would not have played had there been a contest. He does not intend to play Monday, but will use Harry Rice on first and will have Robertson back at third base.

The Sox have won only two games in the last two weeks and the funny part of it is that Lefty Wiltse, last year with Mobile, pitched both contests.

Manager Lee Fohl of the Sox took his men out of town early tonight, in order to get in a single game in Detroit tomorrow afternoon.

"Not much difference in the hitting so far as I have noticed," declared Sisler today. "The ball may not be so lively, but whatever difference there is, is very slight. I feel the league is better balanced this year than last, because the Chicago and the Yankee teams are stronger.

"Injuries have bothered the Browns tremendously. We never have had the same combination in there for more than three or four days."

Illinois Wins Meet From Iowa

Two Big Ten Records Broken as Illini Defeats Hawkeyes 75½ to 59½.

By the Associated Press.

URBANA, Ill., May 15.—Illinois defeated Iowa, 75½ to 59½, in a Big Ten track meet here today.

Two new Big Ten marks were established, Cuhel of Iowa bettering the mark by Brookins, Iowa, of 22.8 in the 220-yard low hurdles by topping the barriers in 22 1-5 seconds. EIGHT ERRORS DEFEAT ZION PITCHER, 6-2

Polish Alliance League Enters Second Week of Play This Afternoon; Schenbergs Face Southerns.

Bearing down hard on the batters, two Evangelical Intermediate League pitchers allowed only three hits apiece yesterday in the Zion-Independent game at O'Fallon Park. Doak, hurler for the Independents, got the better support and won, 6 to 2.

Eight errors caused the downfall of Feith, Zion moundsman.

Salem trounced St. Peters, 18 to 7, in the other intermediate contest, the game being called after the fourth because of expiration of the time limit.

The Schenbergs, 1925 champions, meet the Southerns in the feature contest in the South Side League.

Strikes Out 21 Batters.

Garthoffer, pitching for Cote Brilliante in the Sunday School League, gained a 17 to 1 victory, yielding but one safety and striking out 21 batters. He walked one man. Pat McCreedy, playing for Immanuel Baptist, hit four home runs in as many trips to the plate.

Longhoffer, Third Baptist hurler, has now struck out six hits in three games. He pitched his nine to a 5-2 conquest over Centenary, giving three safeties. In previous tilts he allowed two hits and one safety.

TURF IDOL, SHOWING REVERSAL OF FORM, WINS EXCELSIOR STAKES

WILDERNESS BEATEN OFF FIVE LENGTHS

Cherry Pie Closes Fast to Land Third Place — Race Is Valued at $6400 to Victor — Draconis Beaten in Youthful.

By G. F. T. Ryall,
Of the New York World Sport Staff

JAMAICA, N. Y., May 15.—James Butler's Turf Idol, beaten by Blondin in the Wood Stakes and then down the course to Mirador in the Kings County Handicap a week ago, made a runaway race of the twentieth running of the Excelsior Handicap at one mile and a sixteenth at Jamaica this afternoon.

It was only a procession for the New York bred son of Pebbles-Turf Star, for making the track at the rise of the barrier, he led by five lengths. His form reversal was not unanticipated for he was backed from 8 to 1 to 13 to 5. The form reversal was quite as glaring as that of Pique on Monday.

Wilderness from the R. T. Wilson Stable vainly chased the pace all the way, while Cherry Pie, not partial to heavy going, closed fast at the end to be third. The time was 1:45 3-5.

Only Five Starters.

Only five runners faced the starter for the most important race on the Metropolitan Jockey Club's program, the Greentree Stable adding Hedgefence shortly before post time. Turf Idol was one of the lightweights of the race, carrying 108 pounds, dropping four off his weight in the King's County.

It was said that Turf Idol does not like heavy going, and in his last race he showed speed for only half a mile, but in the race today he broke on top and stepped the first quarter in :23 2-5, the mile in 1:39 2-5 and the full route in 1:45 3-5.

The winner's share was $6400.

Weight Beats Draconis.

Gifford A. Cochran's Draconis, which galloped to his company in the Colorado Stakes a fortnight ago, apparently is not the horse he was thought to be on that race. He met the test that tries them all—carrying top weight—and failed in the Youthful Stakes, at six furlongs, the secondary feature of the card.

Draconis, although he showed a high turn of early speed, was beaten by Thrace, a colt from the Greentree stable, which raced at the Fairgrounds and Miami last winter. Breaking slowly from an outside post position, Richards rushed him into a three lengths lead but he tired at head of stretch and Thrace, well up in the early running, closed fast on the rail to win going away. The time was 1:00 2-5. The winner's share was $5350.

Takes Shortest Way.

Fisher took the shortest way home with Rusovia in the fifth event for platers at one mile and a sixteenth and closing fast in the rail, won by two lengths. Indian Trail also closed fast for the place, beating Futuro, which chased the pace.

Sande started the backers of favorites off on the right foot in the opening race, bringing Olive Dexter home a length in front of Black Agate after a mild drive through the stretch. Cridmus and the other three starters were beaten off.

Old Leatherwood, always at his best in heavy going, had foot enough to keep out of trouble in the second event, for platers at six furlongs, and won off from Donnavideo and Bombardier.

KLEIBER ROLLS INTO LEAD IN SINGLES OF INTERSTATE TOURNEY

W. Kleiber with a total of 701, which included games of 237, 268 and 196, rolled into first place in the singles of the Interstate Bowling tournament on the Delmar Recreation alleys, last night. Kleiber did not have an open frame.

In the doubles, Andy Leicht and Hugo Murrey went to fourth place with 1216, while Leicht took third position in the all-events with 1836. Kaubs No. 2, 2764, had the best team count.

Rexinger Wins Title.

By the Associated Press.

URBANA, Ill., May 15.—Rexinger of Hyde Park High School, Chicago, defeated his teammate, Dudd, 7—5, 7—5, this afternoon to win the singles championship of the annual interscholastic meet held at the University of Illinois. Rexinger came through to the final match from a field of 88 aspirants for the State title.

Retains Foils Title.

NEW YORK, May 15.—Lieut. George Calnan of the U. S. Navy retained his title as national foils champion here last night, winning four consecutive victories. P. G. Doyne of Great Britain was among his unsuccessful opponents. Leo Nunes of the New York Athletic Club annexed the épee championship.

Illinois Net Stars Win.

By the Associated Press.

URBANA, Ill., May 15. — Illinois kept its 1926 Western Conference tennis record clean this afternoon by whitewashing Purdue in a scheduled Big Ten match, 6—0. The Illini net men captured all four singles matches and repeated the performance in the two doubles contests.

*Mutuel field.

Prince of Wales, displaying high speed and hustled into long lead, forced a stiff pace for the entire trip and held the others safe all the way. Dolly Boy raced closest in pursuit throughout and showed a good effort. Ballot Brush closed a good gap and was going strong at the end. Huntsman had to race wide for most of the trip, and closed a big gap. Banter also had to race wide. Fifteen started.

Mutuels paid: Prince of Wales, $11.20, $7.40, $4.40; Dolly Boy, $7.60, $3.60; Mom's Boy, $3.

SECOND RACE—$1200, allowances, 2-year-old maidens, five furlongs—Start good, won easily, place driving. Went to post at 2:45, at post 2 minutes. Winner, R. McLean's b c 2, The Porter—Sepoia. Trained by J. F. Schorr. Value to winners, $900, $234, $136. Time, :23 1-5, :46 4-5, 1:00 3-5.

Woodlore	116	6	6	6	6	6	6	L. Canfield	26.60

Port Star, slightly favored at the start, quickly raced into safe command, and continuing gamely to the end was never in danger. He raced like a good colt. King Basil had to be hustled hard first part, came fast final quarter and outgeneraled Candy Rock, latter forced early pace. Wooldridge showed better last quarter. Wooldridge made up some ground. Others were always outraced. Six starters.

Mutuels paid: Port Star, $6.60, $4.40, $2.40; King Basil, $6.80, $2.40; Candy Rock, $2.60.

THIRD RACE—$1400, claiming, 3-year-olds and up, one mile and one-eighth: Start good, won easily, place driving. Went to post at 3:21, off at 3:22. Winner Long Ridge Stable b g 3, Harry Shaw-Miss Patty. Trained by W. H. Buchanan. Value to winners—$1100, $200, $100. Time, :24 3-5, :49 1-5, 1:15 1-5, 1:41, 1:53 3-5.

Queen Agnes	100	4	1	5h	8	7h	8	D. Neal	69.60

Pat Calhoun raced as if best, was restrained for half a mile and moved into lead thereafter to win as his rider pleased. Flames began slowly and was rushed into contention in first quarter, held on well and outstayed Belzoni. Latter was given a weak ride and stronger handling, would have been closer up. Lady Inez raced well, though losing ground. Firetona quit badly. Fantoche was always far out of it.

Mutuels paid: Pat Calhoun, $8.60, $4.80, $3.80; Flames, $5.60, $3.80; Belzoni, $4.20.

FOURTH RACE—$1500, allowances, 2-year-olds, colts and geldings, four and one-half furlongs—Start good, won easily, place driving. Went to post at 4:14, at post 1 minute. Winner, Leo J. Marks ch c 2, Hourless-La Chanaleene. Trained by T. H. Hughes. Value to winner—$1150, $259.50, $148. Time, :23 4-5, :47 3-5, :54.

Finn Guard	108	7	6	7	7	7	J. McTaggart	26.30

Canaan saved much ground for entire trip and drew out in last 70 yards. Torchilla, given an overconfident ride and raced extremely wide for the entire route, faltered when pressed hard, but might have won had she ridden more alert. Padona showed a good effort. Dr. Street raced well for half a mile. Royal Rally was always outrun.

Scratched: Exess.

Mutuels paid: Canaan, $26.40, $3.80, $3; Torchilla, $2.60, $2.40; Padona, $3.

Pikeway Netsters Defeat Drake, 2-1

Win Both Singles Matches but Are Outgeneraled in Doubles by Visitors.

Washington University yesterday defeated the Drake University team on the Pikeway courts, 2 to 1, in a Valley engagement. The Bear players took both the singles matches but were defeated in the doubles by superior teamwork.

Herbert Weinstock outplaced C. J. Everett of Drake to win, 6—3, 6—2. Charles Sigoloff was in his top form and had a runaway in beating Clarence Conklin, 6—0, 6—1.

Everett and Conklin defeated Sigoloff and Capt. John Gustafson of Washington, 5—7, 6—2, 9—7.

BROWN AND KAMMANN WILL PLAY EXHIBITION SETS AT JOPLIN TODAY

Wray D. Brown and Karp P. Kammann, local tennis stars, will play an exhibition match on the courts of the Joplin Tennis Club in Joplin, Mo., this afternoon. They will be joined there by Carl J. Meyer, No. 1 ranking tennis player of Kansas City. In addition to a singles exhibition between Brown and Kammann, there will be doubles matches against Joplin players. Meyer will also take part in several of the matches during the afternoon.

The Joplin exhibition is under the auspices of the Missouri Valley Tennis Association, which organization is affiliated with the United States Lawn Tennis Association, the national governing body of the game. Davison Obear, secretary of the Missouri Valley Association, accompanied the players to Joplin for the purpose of attending a meeting of tennis officials in that city today.

Argentine Boxing Team Is Victor Over Americans

South American Amateurs Gain Victories in Fly and Welter Classes.

By the Associated Press.

BUENOS AIRES, May 15.—By winning the fifth and sixth bouts of the international series, South American amateur boxers tonight clinched victory over the United States team in the second Pan-American boxing tournament.

The South American team won three of the opening four matches Wednesday.

Uber of Argentina outpointed Lawrence Lyons of Pittsburg in a flyweight match of three rounds, the first of the final four contests to be held tonight.

Following up a triumph of Uber, Mendez of Argentina outpointed Charles Halloran of Pittsburg in the welterweight class.

This gave the South Americans five points in six contests.

OREGON U. BASKETBALL COURT TO SEAT 10,000

PORTLAND, Ore., May 15. — The University of Oregon has sanctioned the construction of the largest basketball pavilion in that section of the country. Oregon's new court will be 178 by 230 feet and will afford seating accommodations for 7200. A balcony will be added later, bringing the seating capacity to 10,500. In addition there will be standing room for 2000.

Newark Ties Indiana.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, May 15. — Playing for 85 minutes with 10 men, the New York Soccer Club held the Indiana Flooring Co. soccer representatives to a one-goal draw this afternoon in an American Soccer League fixture.

Kirby was forced to leave the field shortly after the commencement of the match with a fractured collar bone, but instead of faltering, the Newarkers fought back desperately and had the Floorlayers' goal in danger on several occasions.

VEACH WITH AVERAGE OF .452 TOPS AMERICAN ASSOCIATION HITTERS

By the Associated Press.

TOLEDO, O., May 15.—Veach of Toledo still sets the pace in the American Association hitting, spurting last week to finish the first month of the season with an average of .452.

His bid for batting honors in the circuit is most seriously threatened by Lebourveau, also of Toledo, who came to the end of the first four weeks in the pennant race with a rating of .410 and prominent representation in every department of the game. He leads the base stealers with a total of 13 to his credit.

Pat Duncan of Minneapolis leads the field in home runs, acquiring a total of eight during the opening weeks, while Nicholson of the Blues finished second with six.

St. Paul came through the first month of games with an average of .326, Toledo ranking second with .323 and Louisville, previously at the top, third with a club percentage of .321. The Colonels, however, continue to show as the best fielding club in the association.

Minneapolis provides something to think about in the line of batting averages. The team has more home runs to date and more doubles than any other club in the circuit, is surpassed by but one team in total bases hit for and by but one in total runs, and yet is next to last in team hitting.

Leading Association hitters in 15 or more games: Veach of Toledo, .452; Brief of Milwaukee, .420; Pick, Kansas City, .413; Koehler, Toledo, .410; Lebourveau, Toledo, .410; Murray of Kansas City, .403; Nicholson of the Blues, .395.

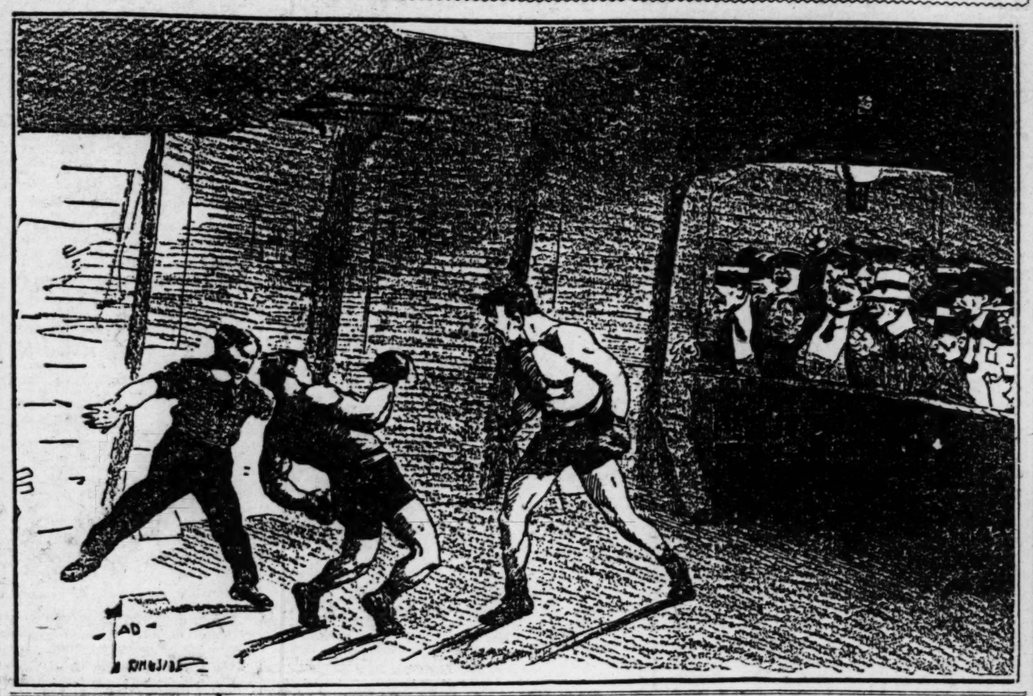
FAMOUS BATTLES OF THE RING

By T. A. "Tad" Dorgan

The Hosey-Dorman Bout



WHEN HOSEY BEAT DORMAN ON A BARGE

Scrap Near Albany, N. Y., in 1905 Was Second Between Pair and Went to Nineteenth Round.

No. VI.

Willie Hosey of Albany knocked out Jack Dorman of New York, on Monday, July 16, 1905, at Albany, in 19 rounds, after one of the most appalling battles ever seen in pristic.

For gameness and staying power there are probably few boys who mixed with these two, and the way they fought, round after round, is enough to stir the blood of any one who has the least bit of sport in his makeup. This was the second battle between that pair. It was for revenge, money and class in the pugilistic sphere.

Their previous meeting, which was held out Harlem way, also on a barge, ended in 14 rounds with Dorman the winner by a knockout. He battered Hosey to a pulp and in the fourteenth round put him away for good. That fight was held at midnight and much money changed hands.

Side Bets Galore.

On the afternoon of the Albany bout friends of both boys were on hand with the emerald stuff, and at least $2000 was bet on the result. There were sports from Brooklyn who had heard of the great battle, men from New York and a few hundred from Hosey's town of Albany, on the barge. At 5 o'clock in bunches of threes and fours, we walked to the foot of State street and took a launch out to the old barge which had been fitted up with bunting and refreshments. It took an hour to get the 400 aboard and then the big tug alongside towed us 15 miles down the river where the big anchor was dropped and all coats cast off.

Inside of 15 minutes both the principals were stripped and ready for battle. The referee declared it was to be a 20-round fight, with a side bet of $500. The boys had trained for weeks for this go, and both showed up well.

Dorman, who was a chunky lad, was a bit shorter than Hosey and was finely drawn, having worked harder than ever for what he thought was to have been the battle of his career. Hosey was also drawn, but had a better color than he had shown in former battles, and wore a confident smile. The gloves were adjusted, the bell tested and then the referee sent them at it.

Dorman Does Some Hugging.

After six fierce rounds Hosey in the seventh almost knocked Dorman out of the ring with a right on the chin, but Jack fell on the ropes, spaced himself and met the next rush with an even break, although he was staggering. The bell was a great help to him, coming as soon as it did. He showed up better in the next few rounds, but was very cautious, listening to every word of advice that Billy Elmer hooped to him.

In the tenth, after a fierce mix, Hosey got over his right and Dorman fell to the floor like a log. He rolled over on his side, pulled himself up on the rope and just got to his feet as the referee yelled "nine." Hosey rushed at him and Jack, weak as he was, grabbed the first thing he saw and held on like grim death. He caught Hosey around the waist and hung there until his head cleared. "Run away," yelled Referee Elmer, and Jack did his best to keep out of range.

It was a fierce affair and rather even until the fifteenth, when the finish looked to be on tap once more. Dorman was hammering his man unmercifully on the body when he suddenly pulled away and let fly a right which caught Willie flush on the jaw. Hosey fell forward on his face and looked to be a dead one. At the count of five he showed signs of life, at seven was on his knees and nine was up again, stalling and covering, doing his best to stick the round out. Dorman welted fiercely about the ribs, but the Albany boy stood the gaff well and held out until the bell rounded.

Condition Wins for Hosey.

It looked like Dorman's fight now and he was made favorite in more bets which were made. Hosey was very weak, but his grand condition stood him well. In the sixteenth he came back like an express train. Both walloped like demons, first one staggering, then the other. Dorman was getting the worst of the in-fighting, but fought on gamely. There was give and take this way, both being punished severely, until the nineteenth round.

Hosey walked out of his corner and met Dorman a few feet from the chair. With all his remaining strength he shot a right into the short ribs, and, as Jack doubled over from pain, Willie crossed a right and then a left to the jaw and Dorman fell as if shot. He never moved after hitting the floor and was counted out in the same position in which he fell. Billy Elmer carried the defeated boy out of the ring, and it was fully 15 minutes before he came to. His face was cut and swollen and he was pretty badly used up. Hosey was carried around the barge on shoulders of his friends, who were wild with joy over his hard-earned victory.

Muny Net Champ To Be Sent East

Funds to Enter National Tournament to Be Raised by Boat Excursion.

The winner of the St. Louis municipal tennis championship this season will be sent to the National Public Parks tournament to be held in Philadelphia during the week of Aug. 9, according to an announcement made yesterday by Martin Telle, president of the Municipal Tennis Association. If funds permit a doubles team will also be sent East.

In order to raise funds for sending the champions to the National tournament the association will give a boat excursion on the steamer St. Paul on Wednesday night, June 9. All public court enthusiasts are urged to attend and tickets may be purchased from the various club officers.

The association voted to continue interclub play this season. At least eight clubs are expected to enter teams in the tournament which will probably open May 23. The teams will compete for a new trophy presented by William Geller. This trophy is a three-time winner prize. The tournament will be a round robin affair and the final winner will meet the winner of the District Interclub tourney for the right to obtain possession of the Werner Trophy for one year.

There will also be an interclub tournament for women players. Each day's matches will consist of three singles and two doubles contests. No defaults will be issued in this tournament. Only those matches actually played will count as points in the competition.

ROBBINS VICTOR IN M. I. A. A. NET TOURNEY

SPRINGFIELD, Mo., May 15.—Clifford Robbins of Southwest Missouri State Teachers' College won the singles tennis championship of the Missouri Intercollegiate Athletic Association yesterday afternoon, defeating James Garrison, Central Missouri State Teachers' College, Warrensburg, in straight sets, 6—1, 6—0. The doubles championship was won by the local Teachers College, represented by Robbins and Paul Fredericks, who defeated the Warrensburg representatives, James Garrison and Harry Barron, 6—2, 6—2.

Hunter Billiken Basket Coach

Was Named Yesterday by Athletic Director Mathews to Physical Education Staff.

E. "Squinty" Hunter, well-known Pacific Coast athlete, will be the basketball coach at St. Louis University next fall. His appointment was announced yesterday by athletic director Mathews. Two more coaches will be added to the physical education staff within the next week.

Hunter starred on the basket floor at the University of Idaho and was for four years named on the all-Pacific Coast Conference mythical five. In 1922, after graduation, he took over the post of physical director at Lewis and Clark High School in Spokane, Wash.

His basketball squads have been champions of Spokane since he took over the post and every year have either been champions or runners-up in the state championships.

Fishing Season Is Near.

WE are very much pleased with the fact that our real sportsmen are observing various laws and very few are making any attempt to take any of our game fish except trout.

We are all looking forward to June first, and hoping that the weather and water will be right.

In the meantime, we talk about it and go over our tackle every few days to see that nothing is missing.

To the fly fisherman who can only spare a day at a time, we advise an early trip to the Joachim, taking the Missouri Pacific to Hematite and fishing down to Victoria. This is a wading proposition, and you will just have time to work easily before the up-train comes along.

Punkin seed will predominate your catch, but you'll also take a few bass.

The punkin seed belongs to the sunfish family, which includes about eight species, among them the bram and bluegill.

The name sunfish, to a great many of us, recalls our boyhood days, when we fished all the nearby fresh water ponds for "sun perch," as we called them. They all looked alike to us as we yanked them out of the water with our willow poles and home-made lines, using a large bottle cork for a float and any old string for a line. No doubt we took many a blue gill and pumpkin seed, for once in a while we would hook a big one, but to us they were just sun perch.

The pumpkin seed affords good sport, as he will rise readily to the fly, and when light tackle is used, the fight he puts up makes it interesting. Besides, he makes an excellent pan fish.

The bluegill grows larger than any of the other species, many being taken that weigh over a pound.

If you are making a special trip for ordinary sunfish, supply yourself with flies tied on No. 12 hook, nothing larger than No. 10; also take along a can of worms and a few small snelled hooks to be used in case the "sunnies" will not rise to the fly.

Springdale Lake on Natural Bridge road just west of Normandy will give you a good afternoon's sport, and you are quite apt to land a bass or two. A charge of $1 is made for the privilege of a day's fishing.

The Jack Salmon.

We are at a loss to know just why this name was applied to this fish, which in the North is called wall-eyed pike, for there is nothing salmon-like about him.

He really belongs to the perch family and the proper name is pike-perch.

He has a body shaped like a pike, but here the resemblance ends, for he has none of the other characteristics of any member of the pike family.

At one time this fish was plentiful in our Missouri streams, but they have been getting scarcer each year, till now there are very few taken.

As a table fish they rank close to or at the top of fresh-water fish, but they do not give the sport to the angler that is offered by the bass or trout.

They seldom rise to the fly, as they are bottom feeders, live minnows being the favorite bait, though they will, at most times, take the Foss Oriental Wiggler, which is a pork-rind bait.

In the Northern lakes the wall-eye grows to considerable size, some being taken that weigh 10 pounds, but in this section a four-pounder is a big fish.

We believe that the Game and Fish Department intends propagating and stocking this fish so that in a few years we will again have jack salmon in abundance.

The Bar Fish.

This is a member of the finny tribe we don't know much about in this part of the country, but in the South he is quite abundant; he is more like the bream than anything else though in the South he is sometimes called calico bass, which is one of the names of the crappie.

When on the road I happened to be in Monroe, La., the day the bar fish came up the Ouachita River.

I was calling on Mr. Richard Downs, buyer for a grocery company, and while at his desk talking business, a small darky rushed in and said in a very excited undertone, "Mr. Dick, they's comin' up."

Mr. Dick raised up from his chair hurriedly and said, "I'll see you tomorrow; I'm going fishing for the bar fish are here."

He told me to go down to the river in an hour or two and I would see something worth looking at.

I did go down later, and I believe that about half the population of Monroe was out on the water, in boats and some small boys on rafts, while the banks were lined with fishermen and fisherwomen.

TULSA TIED FOR LEAD IN WESTERN HITTING WITH OKLAHOMA CITY

By the Associated Press.

TULSA, Ok., May 15.—The hitting is becoming less strenuous in the Western League as the teams move into the second month of the season.

Tulsa clung to the lead in team hitting, with a percentage for the first month of .310, but was forced to share the honors with Oklahoma City. Omaha's .308 was good for third place in the club batting.

Brickell of Wichita tops the list with an average of .443, having sent Ginglardi, Denver outfielder, into second place with a percentage of .438.

Sturdy of Tulsa has driven more four-baggers out of the park, with a total of 10 at the end of the first four weeks. Hughes of Des Moines has collected more stolen sacks, acquiring 10 so far.

Blaeholder of Tulsa finished the opening series with the best pitching record, of six victories and one defeat.

Leading hitters in 15 or more league games: Brickell, Wichita, .443; Ginglardi, Denver, .438; Henry, Omaha, .413; Casey of Tulsa, .397; Sturdy of Tulsa, .391; A. Smith of St. Joseph, .389; Blakesley, Omaha, .384; Hollahan, Omaha, .373; Cozington, St. Joe, .371; Wetzel, Des Moines, .367; Fitzpatrick, Oklahoma City, .367.

PRO-AMATEUR TOURNEY TO BE PLANNED FRIDAY

Arrangements for a pro-amateur city golf tourney which is expected to attract a field of 50 players will be made at a meeting at the North Hills Country Club next Friday.

Co-operation of the chairman of the Greens Committee is expected to bring a large number of professionals into the play this year.

and in many other popular shapes

No wonder La Palinas have tickled the smoke taste of a nation. "Made good" in every sense of the word—that's the answer. Take choice, fragrant, rich tobaccos, blended with matchless skill, smoothed and made deliciously mild by the rarest and most expensive imported wrapper—there's a treat indeed. That's why La Palina is the most popular cigar in America today. You can't keep a secret like that.

LINE UP FOR FINAL FIGHT ON FARM BILLS

Coalition Against Haugen a Possibility — Vote Likely Thursday or Friday.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, May 18.—Hostilities over the farm relief legislation in the House ceased today for a week-end armistice, but the various factions took advantage of the lull to attempt to line up votes in preparation for a renewal of the battle Tuesday.

Leaders expect a final vote Thursday or Friday on the three bills under consideration—the Haugen price-stabilization measure, the Tincher credit plan and the Curtis-Aswell commodity marketing proposal. Farm relief will be in order Tuesday and Thursday, with the House occupied by other business Monday and Wednesday.

Possibility of a Coalition.

With the Capitol almost deserted today, the few lingering House members continued to discuss the agricultural situation. Interest was expressed in the possibility of a coalition between the forces backing the Tincher and Curtis-Aswell bills. Thus far they have been united openly only in their opposition to the Haugen bill, which they have assailed unceasingly on the floor. But conferences have been numerous in the last few days, and reports of a compromise bill, embodying the principal features of both measures, are persistent.

The Tincher bill calls for an appropriation of $100,000,000 for loans to farm organizations, while the Curtis-Aswell measure proposes to lend farmers $10,000,000 to set up the administration of national commodity marketing associations.

Can Offer Substitutes.

Chairman Haugen of the Agriculture Committee has agreed to cut the price maintenance fund in his bill from $375,000,000 to $175,000,000.

Reading of the Haugen bill for amendment will be resumed Tuesday, and when that is completed the other measures can be offered as substitutes.

Representative Jones (Dem.) of Texas announced today that he would offer an amendment to the Haugen bill to add meats in cold storage to the six basic agricultural commodities to which the proposed equalization fee would apply. He said it would be useless to make the fee applicable to cattle, one of the six commodities, and fail to make it apply to meats in cold storage at the time the proposed fee would become operative.

SUIT TERMINATED AFTER 14 YEARS IN THE COURTS

A suit which has been pending in the courts for 14 years was terminated yesterday when Dr. T. M. Sayman, of the T. M. Sayman Products Co., paid a judgment of $2077, together with court costs, in favor of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander H. Asadorian, dealers in rugs. The court costs amount to approximately $900. The suit arose from the sale of rugs in which Sayman and the Asadorians were involved and was filed March 15, 1912.

Originally the Asadorians, who had sued Sayman, obtained a verdict for $12,604.65. A new trial was ordered by the Supreme Court, which resulted in a verdict for the plaintiffs in the sum of $2077, based on alleged illegal removal of rugs by the defendant from a repair shop of the Asadorians at 386 North Euclid avenue. This time Sayman appealed to the Court of Appeals, which recently affirmed the verdict.

Records show that three Circuit Clerks and five Sheriffs who have successively held office are to share in the fees from the litigation now that it is concluded. The minutes reveal that 92 motions of various kinds were made in the case. Sayman paid off the litigation with two $1000 bills and the remainder with a check to Sheriff Schuler, who will make distribution.

VARIETY STORES PAY GOOD PROFITS

They supply the thousand-and-one every-day needs of a community. They carry the popular-priced items which "turn" quickly, earning a better than usual profit on the owner's investment.

There are very few established variety stores for sale. They pay too well to be sold except for urgent reasons. But there are locations that will liberally support a new variety store and we are in a position, through our Expert Service men, to put you in touch with such locations, and to give you the help and information necessary in a successful start.

We sold the opening stock to the first independent variety store in nearly 50 years ago and we have supplied merchandise for wholesale to most of the independent variety stores throughout the country since that time.

You will need from $2000 to $6000 as a working capital. Previous experience as a merchant is not required.

If you want to establish yourself as an independent retail merchant—the owner of one or more successful, well-paying stores—you may have full details by calling or writing

Why "The House" in Congress Has Become Dull, Clogged and Mere Clay in President's Hands

Dreary Reading of Bills by Clerks, Flimsy and Easily Violated Rules of Debate, and Unnecessary Roll Calls Shackle the Members and Leave Power in Hands of a Few.

By PAUL Y. ANDERSON,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, May 15.

The average Congressman consumes more time discussing a postoffice appropriation than Jesus Christ required to deliver the "Sermon on the Mount." —Congressman Luce.

REGARDLESS of the dust Vice President Dawes has raised with his campaign for a change in the Senate rules, it is the opinion of numerous observers that the howling need for rules reform really is in the House of Representatives, that huge and unwieldy assembly sometimes awesomely referred to as "the most tiresome body on earth." And among those who hold the opinion are the two foremost parliamentary authorities of the House, Representative Clarence Cannon (Dem.) of Missouri and Representative Robert Luce (Rep.) of Massachusetts.

Whatever their respective virtues, everybody who has attended sessions of the two houses of Congress in recent years is painfully aware that, while the Senate is the most interesting, colorful and informative public forum in the nation, the House of Representatives comes near being the dullest, dryest and least illuminating. An educating discussion of some important public question can be heard in the Senate almost any day. Even Frank Stearns, dozing in the President's gallery, often starts up and listens to the debate. When anything interesting happens in the House it is an event to be remembered. The recent impeachment proceeding against Judge English was one of these rare occasions.

How the House Dwindled to Boredom.

Representative Luce, who has written several books about procedure in the Parliaments of the earth, some time ago discharged the following blast:

"Because of its lost motion and tedious procedure, the House has become not only an inveterate time-killer but an insufferable bore. The public ignores it, the newspaper correspondents shun it, and its own members cannot endure it. Intended by the framers of the Constitution to be the great popular governing body of the nation, it has sunk in prestige far below the Senate, and its usefulness and influence have been seriously impaired. This result is due almost entirely to antiquated rules and customs which nobody defends, but which few will try to change."

Time-wasting is the charge most frequently made against the House. It is always pressed for time and always killing time. Lack of time prevents the consideration of more measures than any other single cause, and yet to see the House in action one would suppose, in the words of the life-termer, that it had from now on. It is always pressed and always dawdling, always hurried but never in haste.

There are three prime time-wasters, according to Representative Cannon, former parliamentarian of the House and recognized as its highest authority on procedure. They are: General debate, the oral reading of bills and quorum calls. About the last he believes little can be done, because of a provision in the Constitution. About the other two he thinks a good deal could, and should be done, without further delay.

Finding an Excuse to Waste Time.

It is true that general debate is limited as to time, but it is not limited as to subject. Hence the following custom, which goes on day after day, month after month, and year after year:

Three days have been set aside for general debate on a general appropriations bill. A member arises, ostensibly to discuss the merits and demerits of the bill. Actually he never mentions it once. For two hours he talks about subjects that have no more connection with the bill than hog-raising has with Yom Kippur. He tells stories, denounces the boll weevil, praises his constituents, reads poetry (bad, worse and terrible), notes the resemblance between himself and George Washington, and sits down amidst the applause of members who await only a similar opportunity. Nearly all this is for home consumption.

Unlike the members of the smaller Senate, a member of the House so seldom gets a chance to be heard that he nearly always utilizes it with an eye to the ever-impending election.

"It would not be necessary to limit general debate if we adopted a rule that speakers must speak on the subject," said Cannon. "The enforcement of such a rule would automatically shorten the debate.

"Very few of the members want to speak on the pending bill. It has been thoroughly threshed out in committee before coming to the floor of the House, and the vast majority of the members always accept either the majority or minority report. Virtually the only speeches worth hearing on bills are those of committee members who have studied them. There are exceptions, but they are few.

Four Days for Debate and Subject Ignored.

"I recall an instance where four days was allotted for general debate on an appropriations bill. The chairman of the committee began it with a 30-minute statement in which he succinctly explained what the committee had done. He sat down and for the remainder of that four days of debate the bill was not mentioned on the floor. Members discussed every subject from the foreign debts to the hoof and mouth epidemic then raging back in good old Flannel County.

"Understand, I think it perfectly right and just that members be enabled to make their views public for the information of the country, their constituents and their colleagues. But let them do it by extending their remarks in the Congressional Record. That practice, by which a Congressman obtains leave to print a speech he never delivered, has been widely criticised. As a matter of fact, it is the greatest time-saver we have, and a perfectly legitimate one. With 495 members in the House it is a physical impossibility for every one of them to make a speech during one session, but certainly a member and his constituents are entitled to a public hearing. The Record is the answer. Limit general debate to the pending question, and watch the debates grow shorter and the Record grow longer.

"The oral reading of bills is about the most needless, expensive and dreadful form of boredom yet devised. During the sixty-sixth Congress, for example, it consumed approximately 31 days.

KING COAL IN UNITED STATES NOW IN SORRY PLIGHT

200,000 More Miners Than Industry Needs; Oil and Electricity Powerful Competitors

Demand Steadily Decreasing as Production Methods Expand — Lack of Work in Many Mining Districts and Without Reduction of Wages—There Is Likely to Be Less Employment Than Ever.

By ARTHUR SHIELDS.

NEW YORK, May 15.

A NEAR-FAMINE condition prevails in many of the coal villages that dot the Alleghenies and the Ohio and Mississippi Valley. The soft coal mining industry that at its peak employed 500,000 workers is at half speed. And this condition, though it lacks the sensationalism of a general coal strike, is far more serious than a mere walkout, just as a disease plague may be more terrible than war.

The disease of the bituminous industry reached its most acute stage, to date, this spring. At an earlier stage it was diagnosed by the president of the miners' union and by experts on the United States Coal Commission in something like the following terms: "Too many mines and too many miners." Too many, but where to go? Most of them go nowhere, but stagnate in their own little, idle communities whose main street has become a muddy road and whose civic center is a disused coal tipple.

The writer has just returned from a six weeks' trip through mine fields of West Virginia, Eastern Ohio and Western and Central Pennsylvania. Especially in the latter two States the malady was more grievous than ever, though in West Virginia also, contrary to the popular opinion, the average mine is on part time only. In Ohio two-thirds of the 50,000 coal diggers have not touched pick or shovel for months. They say the trade on which their pits depended has gone South to the lower wage operators of West Virginia and Kentucky. Their employers are sighing for a lower wage scale than that provided in the 1924 pact with the union, and are wishing for higher freight rates for their West Virginia and Kentucky competitors so that they can get back some of the business they have lost. But what Ohio would gain in the way of work from such a readjustment, if it came, West Virginia and Kentucky would lose. If A works B is idle. There isn't enough work to go around in this overdeveloped industry.

Many Mines Sentenced to Close.

An economic sentence has been passed on many bituminous mines. Coal is no longer an unlimited monarch. He is sharing his dais with oil and water power, and even in his own furnaces he is finding that science has learned how to generate more horse power from less fuel. The coal market has contracted. At the same time the better mines are being mechanized by the engineer into highly organized underground factories, with the conveyor system installed. The old-fashioned pick miner, working alone in the dim light of his head lamp, has become a far more productive machine operator, with a consequent need for fewer mines and miners. And another cause for the same superfluity of mines and miners is one of which science may not be proud, the irresponsible opening of new mines while others are made idle. The new mines in Southern West Virginia, Tennessee and Kentucky are manned with the aid of the new and cheap labor forces migrating into the industry from the fecund Far South.

It is radiant spring in the mountains of North Central Pennsylvania. The bucks that cross the lonely roads toss their antlers in the joy of the season. The woodland is a carnival of green.

The little town of Tyler—that we will take for example—lies in the heart of this deer country, some thirty miles out of Du Bois, a city that hunters run out from in October and which lies prominently on the map. But the men of Tyler, fond of hunting as miners are, are shy of ammunition. The $3 a week the United Mine Workers allots each family is eaten up by their numerous children before the seven days are over.

Eleven Days' Work Every Month.

There is no strike here—just no work. And behind the present no work are years of little work. The records of Secretary Richard Gilbert of the district union show an average of ten and one-half days' work a month for the last five years. Not a tap was done in the Tyler mine last year, except maintenance work, till the anthracite strike acted like a shot in the arm to the bituminous industry. For the Tyler mine is what is known as a high cost mine. The coal runs thin there. In earlier days, before the industry had expanded to its present pitch, it had a steady place in the sun, but now its future looks about as dark as a mine mouth. And the company is filling its orders from its richer properties at Sykesville, not far away. In the mean time the Tyler workers have heard from somewhere the suggestion that if they will give up the Jacksonville wage agreement, continuing old wages till 1927, and adopt the 1917 scale, involving a 30 per cent reduction, the Tyler mine may start operations again. It is only a suggestion, informal and unofficial, for the company has taken no stand against the old wage agreement except the negative one of closing down.

But the suggestion, with its whisper of work, has set the miners' tongues debating and the debate got to the floor of the union the day I was in town. The men were putting the issue up to the president of their district union, John Brophy.

Unions Say No Lower Wage.

Picture a compact little village of almost uniform frame cottage architecture; the men sitting in the doors or standing in discouraged knots on the road. Shabby, disheartened men; some with pinched faces; Croatians, Slovenes, Poles, Italians, Hungarians, Scotch, Irish, Swedish, English once, now American miners, all asking the same question, "What hope is there for work?" The coming of the little car of their union leader through the mud ruts brought them all to the union hall in five minutes. A barnlike hall, with long benches against the wall and chairs stacked on the platform.

There was pointed challenge:

The union says: No reduction. But there is no work without a reduction. Shall I starve to death for the union?

Brophy met the issue without any perfervid appeal for loyalty. He gave them a lecture on economics that was almost comfortless in its tone.

That was not the conventional thing under the circumstances, but Brophy is not a conventional miners' leader. Not even in appearance. He is slight looking, intellectual, not the heavy, aggressive type. But he is thoughtful and persistent.

The lower wage scale might revive the Tyler mine for a moment, he agreed. It would be at the cost of desertion of the union they had given their lives to and that had stood by them—but that phase of it he would not stress. The question there was: What they stood to gain. They would lose the union that had helped them and get a little work, to lose this work when other mines met the reduction with a similar cut. For Tyler's was a high cost mine that worked only under abnormal conditions, as during the anthracite strike. It could not compete with more richly endowed mines in ordinary times at equal conditions. In a short time they would be jobless as before, but without the help the union could give. Little hope for Tyler at best—but less hope without the union.

Brophy stands pat with the official union policy that there shall be no modification of the 1924 Jacksonville agreement till its term runs out next April 1. The district operators' association assails this policy, says lower wages are necessary if they would compete with West Virginia and with Somerset County in their own State. Brophy's answer is, "What use in wage reductions when the nonunion fields will meet you by still further reductions themselves?" A vicious circle, he argues.

Way to Evade Wage Agreement.

But some operators have taken the bit in their teeth and broken from the union. In some cases the break has been indirect. After mines have laid idle for months or a year they have been leased out, and the party of the second part opens the mines with the assertion that not having signed the wage agreement it is not bound by it. Invariably the union has charged that the leases were not in good faith and has called strikes. The field is spotted with such coal strikes, as at Sagamore, Armstrong County, where the Presbyterian choir is singing on the picket line.

The Sagamore strikers are living on the $3 a week the union allots each family, coupled with what outside aid in clothes and money is coming in from the Emergency Committee for Strikers' Relief, organized by Dr. Norman Thomas, director of the League for Industrial Democracy and recent Socialist party candidate for Mayor of New York in behalf of the strikers in Sagamore and a dozen other soft coal towns and the worsted workers of Passaic. But it is accepted by the officers of the union that the $3 plus could hardly have kept the long struggle going without the emotional intangible that the Presbyterians have brought into the situation by their alliance with labor. For in this case an army does not live by bread alone.

The truth of this maxim is shown in towns where the strikers did not receive inspirational stiffening, and the battles in a number of cases have been lost. For an army that travels solely on its belly needs a full belly.

"Too many mines," and what of it? The situation has weakened the union and it has ruined some of the less favorably situated operators. For many of these poorer extra mines now idle while their owners hope for better days there seems no substance for hope. Some are closing, for good it is probable. But will the old ones close faster than new ones are opened, making again as many too many mines as before?

"Too many miners." Ah, here is a liquidation problem that is a poser. These 200,000 or more extra coal diggers and their families who are not needed in the industry—they are not mere statistical units to be rubbed off the slate. They are human beings with warm emotions, loving their women, and, as it appears in the singing Presbyterian choir picked at Sagamore, their song too. They have spent their lives in their little mountain valleys—at least their manhood since coming to America—and these homes are the America they have been naturalized into. Few know any other way of making a living but mining. For a miner is a miner before he is anything else. When he is out of a job mining he thinks of getting another—

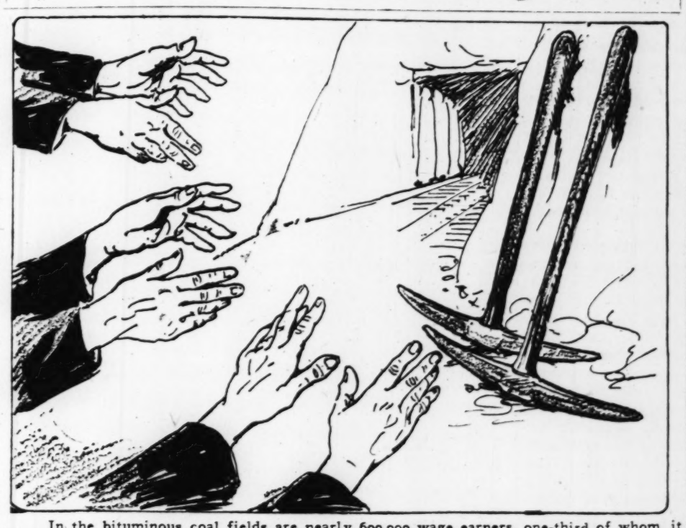
Only Two Jobs for Every Three Pairs of Hands in Coal Mining Industry



In the bituminous coal fields are nearly 600,000 wage earners, one-third of whom, it is shown by a survey, are not needed to supply the demand for that kind of fuel.

England's General Strike, Says Lloyd-George, Gives Warning To Capital and Labor Alike

Business Inefficiency Not to Be Made Up by Low Wages and Workers Cannot Coerce General Public—Nation Made Stronger by Contest Just Ended.

By DAVID LLOYD GEORGE,
Former Premier of England.

(Copyright, 1926.)

LONDON, May 15.—(By Cable).

THE great trades union "hold-up" is beaten—by the British people. They alone come out of it with enhanced prestige, credit and confidence. All the other parties are more or less damaged. The mine owners and mining leaders alike have been stubborn, narrow, unaccommodating and unresourceful. The Trades Union Council was guilty of an act of considerable recklessness and stupidity when they challenged and antagonized the nation at a time when, on the whole, sympathy was on the side of their clients.

There has been no more remarkable and significant scene in the strike than that which occurred at a well known London restaurant, popular with the well-to-do middle class, when the call-off was announced. All the lunchers stood up and sang "God save the King," and then gave three hearty cheers for the miners.

Miners Are Popular.

The British mines are, many of them, deep and dangerous to work, and the workers have not been earning on an average the wages of a street scavenger in this city. The miners are popular. They did exceptionally well in the war. No class volunteered more or even so readily when war was declared, and their battalions fought with great valor.

The precipitate action of the Trades Union Council obscured the merits of the miners' many claims to national sympathy. As to the Government, there is a feeling that they dawdled and delayed for months—that they bought time at great expense (the subsidy of £20,000,000) and then wasted it, and only began coming to grips during the last 48 hours of the subsidized period, and they threw away the last 24 hours even of that precious time.

The nation would have supported them in a refusal to negotiate after the threat of a general strike had been promulgated by the Trades Union delegates. It was unreasonable to ask any self-respecting government to continue discussions when one of the parties at the table had pulled out a pistol and leveled it at the chairman's head. Practiced gunmen keep their revolvers sheathed and out of sight until the moment arrives for firing them. But they never flourish them at a friendly parley.

Premier's Proper Course.

If the Prime Minister had immediately risen from the table and left the room until the lethal weapon had been put away the nation would have respected his action. That is not what he did. He kept negotiating after the general strike had been resolved upon, published, and fixed for Monday night. He went on proposing definite terms. These were accepted by the Trades Union Council, and they were actually pressing their acceptance on the miners when the Prime Minister sent in a message to their conference intimating that the cabinet had decided to break off negotiations because the printers of the Daily Mail had refused to set the leading article for that night.

The Trades Union Council had nothing to do with this act of insubordination on the part of a very troublesome body, and they repudiated it on the spot. Not even the Printers' Union were responsible. And that is the way Britain was thrown into all this turmoil and jeopardy from which we have been saved by British calm and common sense, and by a quiet but grim determination on the part of the British public that they would not be bullied into any course of action by a frame-up on the part of the Trades Unions or anybody else.

It has been a wonderful exhibition of restraint, discipline and good temper. Here was an intense struggle, in which millions were actually engaged and the livelihood of five times as many millions was directly or indirectly involved, and there has been no serious violence, no rioting of any dimensions, no blood spilt, the military were never called upon to intervene, not a shot has been fired, not even into the air, to terrify a mob.

The labor leaders preserved order at all their meetings and condemned law-breaking and rowdyism. Good humor prevailed everywhere. The windows of a "pirate" bus was smashed. Immediately the conductor chalked over the hole, "Emergency exit." That is only typical of the way it was all taken. But in spite of that outward gaiety of spirit there could be no doubt that underneath there was a resolve to see it through.

The general strike has had at least one good result—it will make it impossible for extremists to tempt the unions to try another for many a year to come. Within 24 hours after the strike had started the labor leaders knew it could not succeed, and that every day it was prolonged lessened its chances of success. The wisest of them never liked it. All the vaporing about revolution on all sides has vanished into the air. This is not a revolutionary people, and the general strike has demonstrated that fact with convincing force to both the rash and restrained alike.

Typically British Settlement.

Constitutionalism has been reinforced by the episode. Its roots have deepened their hold on the soil as a result of this hurricane. Incendiaries are visibly depressed. Those who are expecting a conflagration must look elsewhere. British timber does not easily catch fire. The settlement is also typically British. The "smash-the-unions" die-hards were swept aside. There was no humiliating surrender insisted upon.

In form, the peace was an unconditional withdrawal of the general strike. In fact, it was a calling-off on terms which satisfy the more reasonable amongst the workers. The Prime Minister signed nothing and bound himself by no document. He did not see the miners' union leaders. He did not see Sir Herbert Samuel, the conciliator. It was all informal, and there was nothing but a "gentleman's agreement." The labor leaders knew that would be as binding as any contract signed, sealed and delivered, and that it is always more liberally interpreted.

In essence they are the Archbishop of Canterbury's proposals, and better. The intervention of the Archbishop and other leaders of Christian churches had a great effect in moderating counsels. The smashers did not conceal their resentment at this interference by religious chieftains of the land in business which it was suggested was quite outside their jurisdiction and cognizance. I know that my retirement will make no difference in its cardinal principles, that it will always fight for progress and reform, never tolerate injustice or corruption, always fight demagogues of all parties, never belong to any party, always oppose privileged classes and public plunderers, never lack sympathy with the poor, always remain devoted to the public welfare, never be satisfied with merely printing news, always be drastically independent; never be afraid to attack wrong whether by predatory plutocracy or predatory poverty.

Subsidies Are Dangerous.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

THE farmer is trying to do what the manufacturer has always done, get the Government to guarantee him a profit. England made the same blunder when she guaranteed the coal operator a profit. The country driven to emergency legislation is in a dangerous position.

Where is all the prosperity the drys testified we had from prohibition? Why don't the Government pay the farmers' subsidy out of the $6,000,000,000 Prof. Fisher says we are ahead on prohibition? The fact is we have not got either and those gentlemen were talking through their hats. J. J. MORONY.

Pitch in Radio Receivers.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

HERE is something to think over: In trying to accompany music played by radio with piano, I find that the loud speaker reproduces the original music a semitone higher than it is played. By raising the keynote a semitone and keeping the same order of major mode, accompanying on the piano is possible. Other loud speakers may possibly reproduce either higher or lower than this. I would like to know what causes this and if due to transmitter or receiver. I would like comments on this in the column. F. E. MONSCH.

1344 Shawmut Place, City.

The slight change in pitch is due to the fact that the sound waves produced by the piano at the broadcasting station are changed into electric waves in transit, and then back into sound waves in the receiving instrument. In this last transformation the vibrating disk which reproduces the waves as sound may have a pitch of its own, slightly above or below that of the musical instrument at the sending station. In course of time, as receiving instruments are perfected, this trouble may be obviated.—Ed. P.-D.

Candidates in Southeast Missouri.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

I SELDOM say anything for publication, but having lived in Southeast Missouri for many years and during that time having been affiliated with the Democratic party and being in a position to know whereof I speak, I desire to answer Wayne Ely, as to his surprise and disappointment in the declaration of Harry Hawes in being opposed to the World Court and Mr. Ely's regret that he vouched for Mr. Hawes when he accompanied him on his brief trip through Southeast Missouri.

I assure Mr. Ely that he has no cause for regret; this declaration of Mr. Hawes' did not surprise anyone except Mr. Ely, if it did him. The more intelligent people of Southeast Missouri know Harry B. Hawes. When we insisted on his becoming a candidate for United States Senator we knew how he stood politically. We knew his ability, we knew him to be a true and tried Democrat, 100 per cent American, and a man that would stand by and fight for his honest convictions. Now Mr. Ely, you have no cause for regret.

As a further assurance to Mr. Ely, I desire to relate a little circumstance. When Mr. Ely was in this city with Mr. Hawes and just before I had seen Mr. Ely, I was on the opposite corner from where I met Mr. Ely, talking with one of the driest, most influential financial, political and religious men in Southeast Missouri. While we were talking, he touched my arm and said, "There is Harry B. Hawes. I am for him; he is the best man we can get. I believe he is as wet as a fish, but in my opinion, it is impossible for us to elect a dry Senator in the State of Missouri."

This man's say-so amounts to something in this neck of the woods, and I mention it just to show the general trend of the situation in this part of Missouri.

With regard to Jim Reed's friendship for Mr. Hawes, if Mr. Hawes has the true friendship of Jim Reed he is fortunate. Jim is 10 times more popular than he ever was, more than when he fought the whole forces of all the un-Democratic, un-American fanatics that opposed him and won out. The next most popular man in that race in this section is Judge Williams; the only thing that makes Harry Hawes a better man, is that he is a Democrat.

You have nothing to regret, Mr. Ely.

Against All Privilege.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

IN YOUR recent editorial, "England's Greatest Blunder," you stress the danger of granting subsidies and mention the tariff and the proposed farmers' subsidy, yet you never criticise the subsidy the railroads get in the form of guaranteed rates or returns. Why never mention that? Go back far enough and you will find another editorial you wrote against ALL SPECIAL PRIVILEGES. Don't that include the railroads? Am also inclined to believe there is some special privilege in the Federal Reserve Act for someone.

CITIZEN BUT NOT R. R. MAN.

AMUNDSEN INVICTUS.

Amundsen has again come through. Again the world has waited in suspense and growing anxiety only to have its fears and misgivings again turned to the tumult of acclaim.

For once it seemed as if Amundsen had accomplished a polar voyage unembellished by special hazard, mystery or thrill. From King's Bay, across the top of the world where flags of Norway, the United States and Italy had been ceremoniously masted, over the virgin area beyond the pole which man had never before looked upon—throughout this swift, unparalleled Odyssey perfunctory messages had come at reassuring intervals.

Early Thursday morning the Norge had been sighted off Point Barrow, and Nome, the terminus, was preparing its reception when, suddenly, the airship disappeared in the Arctic's cold, white silence. The men of that intrepid guild, Stefansson, Byrd and others, professed no alarm. They spoke with the authority of knowledge. They knew the abundance of destruction at the finger tips of that siren of the North, and they knew their man. He had left his plane in the everlasting grip of the ice in May of last year and forged his way back to safety. Long ago he had wandered in that wilderness for two years, after negotiating the Northwest Passage, and returned, as it were, from the grave.

But the world at large was worried. After all, the saga of the dirigible is an epic of disaster. The Norge, to be sure, had made a noble flight—an Illiad of the air from the eternal city to the eternal snows. But a fragile craft, after all, in which to meet the Arctic's wrath. How could the skill or courage or indomitable genius of an Amundsen avail in an airship ripped into shreds by furious polar gales? That question haunted.

What delayed the expedition with Nome but a few hours away has not been told at this writing. Sufficient for the present that the Norge is at Teller, Alaska, with no intimation of distress in the scant communications.

Curiosity now turns to what Amundsen may have found in this crowning achievement of polar exploration. In this flight the pole over which the Norge sailed majestically was hardly more than incident. From Spitzbergen to Nome is from East to West by a new route, which may or may not inaugurate a new and permanent era in the dominion of trade.

Has Amundsen found an "undiscovered continent" beyond the pole? At Hubbard, in 1906, so Byrd reminds us, Peary believed he saw "the faint, white summits of a distant land." Eight years later MacMillan, mushing a hundred miles farther, saw in the distance, "hills, valleys and snow-capped peaks." Then, too, there is the spoor of bears and foxes, the way of the birds in the air, the movements of the ice, all tending to confirm the impression that somewhere in the "million square miles of mystery" is land.

That land was "the lure of the Arctic" which beckoned Amundsen to his latest and probably greatest adventure. If he has found it he has made history—the history recorded in ledgers, in "the gold in the ingots, the silk in the bales." Whatever he has found he has enriched romance and contributed to the gallantry of pioneering.

ELECTRIC AID FOR FARMERS.

While Congress considers ways and means of aiding the farmer, which may result in nothing more than a scheme to placate the rural vote, others have ideas of improving agriculture that are quite removed from the realm of legislation. There are the electric power magnates, for example. America is rapidly becoming a network of transmission lines from ever-increasing centralized plants. The ramifications of these distribution systems place electric current in proximity to hundreds of thousands of farms. Transformers and short extension lines are all that is needed to electrify many farms.

There is a drawback to this rural expansion of the electrical industry in the present rates, but it has been demonstrated that an increased load and lower temperatures mean lower rates, and electrical engineers have no doubt that the "juice" will soon be able to compete and ultimately supplant other sources of light and power for the farm.

John Anderson, head of a Wisconsin electrical power company, announces that his firm will spend $250,000 this year on transformers and extensions to supply electricity to farmers, and he sees vast possibilities of further growth. The use of electricity, he predicts, will be more advantageous to the farmer than to the company that supplies it. Its increasing use will mean a lower cost of production on the farm, with less labor and larger profits. Once the farmer realizes the utility of this power, he will extend its uses to many farm operations, and the drudgery of rural life will end.

How good a profit Mr. Anderson may prove, only time can tell. He does seek to apply to agriculture the same system that has made many American industries profitable: greater production with less labor and larger leisure for enjoying the fruits of production. The reasonable assurance that electricity will be cheaper, both from wider use and greater economy of production, lends plausibility to his prophecy, and makes it far more hopeful than the panaceas of politics.

"SINGLE MEN IN BARRACKS."

Kipling's Tommy Atkins probably isn't the ideal soldier. He was no Galahad; no ideal happy warrior, but the British regular as Kipling knew him in his distant Indian days: a bit of a blackguard, who "took his fun where he found it," and found his fighting a less monotonous part of the day's work. But in the escapades of Mulvaney and companions in iniquity there is a lesson still for the religious leaders who met with Secretary of War Davis recently to discuss ways and means of uplifting the enlisted personnel of the service.

It may well be that the enlisted men do not wish to become the "virile, honest, God-fearing youth, as strong in moral courage as in physical makeup," which Secretary Davis says they must be, or the nation is doomed to early oblivion. Such a transition of the service man would be an improvement; we need not question the noble purposes of those who would elevate the soldier, even when they spill hokum all over the place. It is only the chance that they might make matters worse that warrants a word of warning about the manner of approach.

Tommy said that "single men in barracks don't grow into plaster saints." Probably the rule still holds good, despite the chances that standards of diversion have improved with the years. Still, there is army discipline, as ever irksome to exuberant youth. The discipline is generally accepted as essential to military efficiency. Sometimes it breaks bold spirits, and sometimes it strengthens character. Those who have watched its effects know it works both ways. But too much repression means explosion. Those who would arouse the spiritual thought and strengthen the moral fiber of the army cannot hope to achieve such ends by additional "thou shalt nots." Friendships, understanding and wholesome activities that divert from worse exploits are the hope and the means of those who are to have a helpful influence with the young men who wear their country's khaki.

FEDERAL AID.

Senator Reed of Pennsylvania recently submitted two tables, which were printed in the Congressional Record, showing the taxes paid by the states to the Federal Government and the Government's dispensation to the states under the arrangement designated as Federal Aid.

Those tables are illuminating. One of them, which shows the taxes and rebates of 1925, follows:

State	Amount paid in Federal taxes	Federal aid received from Government	Percentage of Federal tax payments returned to States as Federal aid
New Mexico	$ 854,312.91	$ 3,922,312.89	353.89

Total	$2,562,923,419.88	$110,250,420.50

A glance at this table reveals the fact that five of the states—New Mexico, Nevada, South Dakota, North Dakota and Wyoming—are getting more from the Government than they pay in. New Mexico may be called the pampered pet, receiving more than $3,000,000 for her $800,000 of taxes, but the other four are generously cared for wards.

Obviously, the people of 43 states are paying the bills of those five states. The payments are not voluntary. They are made under compulsion of law. The constitutionality of this practice is open to question. Its questionable feature is revealed in the different accounts through which Federal Aid is now disbursed.

Those accounts are: (1) Roads; (2) co-operative agricultural work; (3) vocational education; (4) vocational rehabilitation; (5) maternity and infancy. No objection can be raised to the apportionment of Federal aid for roads. That has the sanction of the Constitution. The other items have no such sanction.

The total distributed under Federal aid is, in round numbers, $110,000,000. Of this amount, $95,000,000 is apportioned on account of roads. We have, therefore, $15,000,000 bestowed by a paternalistic Government for purposes unauthorized by the Constitution. This sum, it may be granted, is not of itself forbidding. But the practice, apart from the question of its unconstitutionality, is ominous. If the custom is acquiesced in, who can undertake to place a limit on it? If in the few years of operation it can attain to such proportion, where is it going to end?

This practice, unhappily, is boldly in step with the times. The Federal Government has invaded and has already dangerously undermined the sovereignty of the states. With the states subjugated politically what is more logical and more inevitable than that their moral character shall be debased? That may be putting it harshly, but there is no pleasant term for pauperism or for plundering, and that is precisely what is happening under our macabre March of Federal Empire.

The indictment is returned in tendencies, in events, in acts, in cold, implacable figures.

ON THE UNFAIRWAY.

There is upon every golf course a fairway and an unfairway.
If you are right good at the game you play the fairway.
It is characterized by cropped grass and sandpits.
Low scores and disappointments.
However, you almost never see anybody on it.
It is not, indeed, where most golf is played.
It is a place comparable to Easy street, the celebrated primrose path of dalliance and what we all know as the straight and narrow way.
That is, an ideal.

But the unfairway—
That is entirely different.
It is characterized by difficulties, flowers, creeks, thickets, beauty, tall grass—and rewards.
In short, it is on the unfairway that you play golf.
It is the prototype of Uneasy street and the well-known line of greatest resistance.
It is the way of life.
You would no more care for golf if it were not for the unfairway than you would care for life if it were easy.
The grindstone is turned against the scythe.

Very well.
Since we are agreed upon that, let us turn back to a few days ago.
I was playing golf where I always play it—that is offside.
Knowing what was good for me and where the true charms of the game lie, my ball very soon darted into a thicket.
Let me describe that thicket.
It was powdery white with dogwood.
Here and there through the copse peeped the tender pink of wild crabapple bloom.
The ground was covered with sweetwilliam.
Now and then a little green colony of may-apple plants decoratively dotted the side-hill.

Nor was that all.
The woodthrushes were singing overhead.
A redbird was whistling up the hollow.
In a white oak tree, almost ethereal with the tenderness of spring leafing, were perhaps a hundred rollicking goldfinches.
"Good evening!" "Good evening!" "Good evening!" they said.

So that was why my ball had gone in there!
It wanted me to see all that.
It wanted me to understand why we have beauty everywhere.
Why the dogwood is white.
The crabapple pink.
The sweetwillian purple.
The mayapple green.
The finches golden.
It wanted me to see how beautiful the leaves are when the trees are just feathering.
To feel the loveliness of earth.

Meanwhile, some other people went past on the fairway.
They were good golf players.
They were straight up the course.
From flag to flag.
Hard-faced.
Scowling.
Cursing their luck.
Profaning the golf course with excellence.
Missing the very meaning of the game.
On over the hill—
On and still on—
Up the fairway.
On to the clubhouse.
Seventy-one. (Curses.)
Seventy-four. (Oaths.)
Seventy-five. (Damns.)
Seventy-six. (Groans.)

And here was I, emerging from the rough, my heart making a song, my game gone to hell, joyously shouting:
"Fore!"

A certain Fredonia woman, not long ago, had occasion to go to a neighboring town for a visit of a few days, and upon her arrival there discovered that she had lost her watch, a small affair, which she thought she had dropped on the dining room rug, so she wrote the hired girl at home as follows: "Let me know if you find anything on the dining room rug." A few days later she received a letter from the girl, saying: "Dear Madame: I was to let you know if I found anything on the rug in the dining room. This is what I found this morning: Thirteen empty beer bottles, 19 cigar butts, five cigaret ends, 14 blue and 21 red poker chips, 36 burned matches and one pink satin slipper." The wife hired an auto and was home in a few hours.—Altoona (Kan.) Tribune.

The MIRROR OF PUBLIC OPINION

A FARM AND BANK PROBLEM.

From the World's Work for May.

THERE was a farmer in the South who inherited a farm on which, up to that time, he had not been able to get a larger mortgage than $8000. In that year, however, with land values soaring and profits high, he got another $6000 mortgage, making $14,000 in all. By 1922 it was evident that he couldn't pay the interest on the $14,000 without more personal deprivation than he was willing to make. He explained this to the bank and told its officers that they could have the farm. They were confronted with changing their status from lender with little responsibility to owner with great responsibility. The bank itself could not run the farm. The officers doubted if they could find a better farmer to run it than the man then on it. Ownership was not only a right but a responsibility, and in this case a responsibility they were unable to take. They refinanced the farm by getting the Land Bank to take a $9000 first mortgage (at lower rates than they paid) and they took a second mortgage. The farmer went back to work. The bank has its satisfaction: The place would be kept up, the taxes and insurance paid without worry to them, the land bank mortgage would be amortized in 30 years, and in the meanwhile if the farmer had good luck he might pay them some or even all their interest. Otherwise they were out their interest and had a frozen asset of $7000.

A CHURCH CENSUS.

From the St. Joseph News-Press.

ACCORDING to a census of churches recently compiled in The Christian Herald, there was an increase of 800,000 in church membership in 1925, and a gain of 166 churches, as against a decrease of 6 in 1924. This is the largest gain for several years.

There are 24 denominations that have a membership of at least 200,000, but a full list has 52 independent denominations. These are subdivided into individual groups that bring the grand total to 147 religious bodies with individual names. The names of many of these are unfamiliar to most of us, such as the Two-Seed-in Spirit Predestinarians, the Church of God (Winebrenner), the General Six-Principle Church, the "Chs. God and Sts. Christ (Col.)," the Amanas, the Wilburites, the Jehovah Conference, the Old Order Amish, the Conservative Amish, the Old Order Wisler and Pilgrim Holiness. Twelve Buddhist-Japanese temples are included in the list. The smallest denomination or group division is the Primitive Friends, with one church and 20 members. The Roman Catholics have the largest number of members and the Methodists have shown the largest gain in membership. So, it appears that the age is not as Godless as some folks fear it to be.

HIGHER EDUCATION IN ILLINOIS.

From the Detroit News.

IN ILLINOIS the barbers are debating whether they want to be called chirotonsors or dermaticians. The one care-thing in their minds is, they don't want to be called barbers. The real estate dealers are now called realtors, if they belong, and undertakers have become morticians. Naturally, the barbers want to be up-to-date like the scofflaws and the pitilackers. It is now up to the rest of the community. A book agent can be known as a bibliogen and a butcher as a macellarius. The conditions of the Illinois barbers are at least evidence that the barber colleges teach Latin and Greek.

100,000 EXPECTED FOR FORMAL OP NEW CONCORDI

Visitors From All Over W Dedication of $3,000,0 Institution on Ju

More than 100,000 visitors are expected to come to St. Louis for the dedication of the new $3,000,000 Concordia Seminary at De Mun and San Bonita avenues on June 13. Thousands of homes here are to be made available to those who are unable to find hotel accommodations, it was announced yesterday by the committee in charge of arrangements.

The buildings to be dedicated are already virtually complete. They include an administration building, two lecture halls, an auditorium, library, service building, two dining halls, eight dormitory units, a power house and 12 faculty buildings.

The style of architecture is ecclesiastical, emphasizing the Tudor-Gothic mode. The material is a combiantion of local gray and brown limestone and Boulder, pink and Indiana limestone. Funds for construction of the buildings were raised by free-will subscriptions from the 3300 congregations of the Missouri Synod.

Coming of the Immigrants.

It was more than 87 years ago—the date was Jan. 16, 1839—that 700 Saxon immigrants arrived in St. Louis to become the nucleus of the Missouri Synod. They made the trip up from New Orleans in the steamer "Rienzi," having left their fatherland to find a home where they would have freedom of religious worship.

Many of the descendants of these first Lutheran pilgrims are still living in St. Louis. Included in the group were professional men, artisans, merchants and university students who exercised a direct influence on the life and thought of the region about St. Louis.

The pilgrims came without any definite plans for making a home for themselves. After much consideration they finally purchased 4400 acres of land in Perry County, taking $10,000 from their com-

Mr. Winston Churchill, suppressed the Archbishop's letter, and I have no doubt he was instrumental in preventing its being broadcast. The Government took complete control of all broadcasting of the news.

Probably Mussolini would have drawn the line at censoring a papal encyclical, but Mr. Churchill, as someone remarked, had gone "back to his Gallipoli mood." When he has a bad seizure of that epilepsy he is capable of any unwisdom. However, other sheets printed this impressive appeal and the debate in the House of Commons on the conduct of Mr. Churchill in suppressing it helped to give it wider publicity. It influenced public opinion outside and there can be no doubt that it contributed largely to a pacific settlement of this menacing situation.

The terms of peace are essentially those prepared by the Archbishop. Negotiations are to be resumed. The lockout in the mines is to be terminated, and the Government promises to extend the subsidy pending negotiations. The basis of negotiation is still to be the report of the Coal Commission, with its drastic recommendations for nationalizing the mines, reconstructing the whole industry, and closing down uneconomic pits.

But this time there are to be guarantees that the work of reconstruction will be taken in hand at once and prosecuted with energy. A committee is to be set up for that purpose, and on that body the miners will be represented.

One or two new features of considerable interest are imported into this settlement. A national wage board is to be set up, with an impartial chairman on the model of the National Railway Board, for the settlement of wage rates in the mining industry. It is stated that the Marquis of Reading, ex-Viceroy of India, has been asked to take the chairmanship of this important body. There is no man in these islands who could command such universal confidence in his fairness and capacity for this difficult post.

Other features are arrangements made for closing down unprofitable pits, provision for removing to other colliery areas, building houses for their accommodation there, and for providing unemployed pay on a special and generous scale for those who cannot find work.

It is too early yet to sum up the full effect of this unparalleled struggle. One thing, however, is clear—the country has emerged from this trial stronger and more sure of itself. On the other hand, organized labor has been taught a salutary lesson as to the limit of its power, and capital has also been warned that the public will no longer tolerate its claim that inefficiency must always be paid for out of the wages end.

100,000 EXPECTED HERE FOR FORMAL OPENING OF NEW CONCORDIA SEMINARY

Visitors From All Over World Will Attend Dedication of $3,000,000 Lutheran Institution on June 13.

More than 100,000 visitors are expected to come to St. Louis for the dedication of the new $3,000,000 Concordia Seminary at De Mun and San Bonita avenues on June 13. Many of the descendants of these first Lutheran pilgrims are still living in St. Louis. Included in the group were professional men, artisans, merchants and university students who exercised a direct influence on the life and thought of the region about St. Louis.

The pilgrims came without any definite plans for making a home for themselves. After much consideration they finally purchased 4400 acres of land in Perry County, taking $10,000 from their common treasury for the purchase, and there established the first seat of Lutheranism in Missouri.

The first years brought poverty, epidemics and all the hardships of pioneer existence, but despite their tribulations one of the first acts of the settlers was to erect a log house in which were held the first classes of Concordia Seminary.

Began With 11 Students.

Beginning with 11 students the seminary grew until in 1850 it was moved to St. Louis where there was already a large and substantial colony of German Lutherans. The rapid growth of the church compelled the synod to build additions to the seminary here in 1852, 1858 and 1875, and finally in 1883 the present buildings of the old seminary were built at 3635 South Jefferson avenue.

In 1907 the student body had outgrown its old quarters once more, and a large addition to the seminary was constructed. With the continued increase in missionary activity in the past two decades, however, it was finally decided to establish an entirely new plant in the De Mun tract. On this site of the new Concordia Seminary there is ample room for expansion.

Advance reports show that visitors will be here for the dedication from Canada, Latin-America, South America and several European countries. Special trains will bring others from Chicago, Detroit, Fort Wayne, Omaha, Milwaukee, Cleveland, Indianapolis, Des Moines and Kansas City.

The dedication services, which will be announced later, are to be broadcast over Radio Station KFUO, owned and operated by the Board of Control of the seminary. An airplane will be used to get photographs of the ceremony for the archives of the institution.

KING COAL IN UNITED STATES IS IN SORRY PLIGHT

at mining. Now who will help him adjust himself to a new life, and to what life? If there were a national employment office to allocate this surplus labor, where would it send it to? The development of the machine in other industries is creating a "too many" problem only different in degree from that so extremely in evidence with the miners.

What to do? Back to the land? So urges the Illinois Miner, most influential district paper in the union, with a circulation of 60,000 or 70,000. Let the idle coal diggers change from the pick to the plow and farm the idle acres of Arkansas and Louisiana, is the advice.

Six-Hour Day Not a Solution.

Nationalism was a remedy once popular in union circles and twice indorsed at Indianapolis conventions. It was calculated to halt overdevelopment by stern regulation. A committee headed by John Brophy, president of the Central Pennsylvania miners; Christ Golden, president of one of the anthracite districts, and William Mitch, secretary of the Indiana miners, a representative trio, was appointed to work out a program. The plan they drew up called for a tripartite control by union, management and Government. The union has allowed the proposal to lapse, but of late agitation for it is stirring a little again.

The six-hour day was another theory that ran strong some years ago as an employment solution. It was indorsed by a national convention at a time when the United Mine Workers was at the crest of its power. The idea was that the shortening of the workday would take up the slack of unemployment. But the six-hour movement had been officially scrapped, and today the surplus of labor in the mines is so great that even at six hours there would still be "too many."

Such drastic changes, it is obvious, could not be imposed on the industry without far more power than the union has at present, which means without winning the huge fields of the South, whose enormous nonunion production is the Titan foot on ambitious labor plans.

And meanwhile the "too many" miners are stagnating in their villages, caught in the ebb flow of industrial life, stranded like fish gasping for breath, till they pass away somewhere, to the land, to the city job or the park bench.

NEGRO JUSTICE TO RUN AGAIN

About 75 White Lawyers Back C. E. Clark for Re-election.

Crittenden E. Clark, Justice of the Peace in the Fourth (St. Louis) Justice District, and the first Negro to hold that office in Missouri, will file for re-election this week. Clark was elected in 1922, taking his seat in November of that year. A petition signed by about 75 white lawyers was recently presented to him, asking him to run for re-election.

The dockets in Clark's court are now about twice as large as they were when he took office.

Why the House Has Become Clay in President's Hands

It is a formality to which nobody pays the slightest attention. During that session more than 1,000,000 words were uttered from the desk by the reading clerks.

Time Was When Not All Could Read.

"The rule providing for the oral reading of bills had its origin in the House of Commons several centuries ago, and the reason for it—a very good one—was that many of the members couldn't read. It was abolished there long ago, but we retain it, although every member has a printed copy of every bill and resolution, and has read all those he is interested in."

"Can all the members of the present House read?" he was asked.

"Some of them probably don't read as much as they should, but I am sure they are all able. There is no Federal literacy test for members, although many of the states have them. Possibly in the Jackson period there were a few members from Tennessee and Kentucky who were unable to read or write, but there have been none in modern times.

"But who," he went on, "is willing to sit and listen to the endless droning of the reading clerks? Is it a wonder that the House galleries are usually empty?"

"What is the remedy?"

"Reading of bills by title only," was the prompt answer. "When a bill or resolution is read the first time, it is read by title only. The same is true of the third reading. It is on the second reading that the tremendous bore takes place. Reading of the title only would serve just as well on all three readings. As a matter of fact, this sometimes takes place by unanimous consent. Take the Little bill, providing for a recodification of the Federal statutes. Oral reading was dispensed with by consent. This bill is a book about the size of Webster's unabridged dictionary. It could not be read in less than a week. Consider that as high as 30,000 bills and resolutions are introduced at one session, and you will see what oral reading means.

"Another antique practice which kills its quota of time is that of paying respect to the original form of every bill. When a committee makes changes in a bill, as it nearly always does, the bill must be read in its reported form, together with the amendments. There is no excuse for reading the original text. Committees should be authorized to report bills just as they have amended or redrafted them. The author of the bill knows what changes have been made, and so does every other member who is interested in it."

"Amendments" a Trick to Get Ear of House.

Another minor squanderer of time occurs in the debate upon "pro forma amendments." To explain, when general debate is ended there ensues a debate under the "five-minute rule," in which members are permitted to offer amendments and speak not more than five minutes upon them. It may be that the gentleman from Kansas or Ohio either did not finish his denunciation of the boll weevil during the general debate, or never got the floor. He now arises.

"Mr. Speaker," he says, "I offer an amendment to strike out the last word in the bill." He then proceeds to lambast the boll weevil for all there is in it for five minutes, at the expiration of which the Speaker's gavel falls. "I withdraw my amendment," concludes the gentleman from Kansas or Ohio, and sits down.

"Mr. Speaker," shouts the gentleman from Texas, "I offer an amendment to strike out the last two words," whereupon he sails into the cow tick, the Italian debt settlement or Bolshevism in our universities, for five minutes, at the end of which he also withdraws his "amendment." Neither of the gentlemen, of course, wanted to strike out the last word or the last two words, and probably didn't know what the last words were.

"Under the five-minute rule," Cannon explained, "members are required to speak to the pending question. The rule simply isn't enforced, and the occasional attempts to have it enforced are brazenly evaded. I have heard members complain to the chair that the speaker was not discussing his amendment, whereupon the speaker would look at the bill, say, 'the last word is 'hereafter'; and go right on with his irrelevant remarks. The remedy in this case is to enforce the rule."

Tributes to the Dead Often Tragic.

The average member is somewhat advanced in years by the time he arrives in Congress. Consequently, one session sometimes witnesses the death of as many as two dozen members. The mortality rate is uniformly high. The House always sets aside one day in which to pay its respects to each departed member—not one day for all, but a day for each one. The consequences are often appalling for the dead member's family. Being apprised that there is to be a special memorial service, the family assumes that the capital is in mourning for the head of that family, and comes to Washington to attend the service. They find themselves alone in the gallery, with less than a dozen members on the floor, and two or three speakers droning out perfunctory eulogies, and frequently departing entirely from the subject. That family returns home completely crushed.

"Not only would it save many days, but it would be far more merciful to the families of the dead and would result in a genuinely impressive service if one day were set aside in which to pay respect to all the members who have died," said Cannon. "There is no heartlessness in this suggestion; it is the present practice which is heartless."

Almost Half Hour for One Roll Call.

Under the Constitution, a quorum must be present to transact business. A quorum is a majority. Consequently, whenever a member suggests the absence of a quorum, all business must instantly suspend while the bells are rung in the committee rooms and in the House office building, and the clerk calls the roll. It takes 25 minutes to call the roll in the House.

In the Congress of 1921-22, the irrepressible Tom Blanton, of Texas, singlehanded, almost brought business in the House to a standstill by repeated quorum calls. Himself an indefatigable worker and a faithful atendant at all sessions, Blanton took it into his head that he would make other members attend. In that session he was responsible for 126 quorum calls, the making of which occupied time equal to two weeks of the session. Hard-headed and unafraid, he was deaf to entreaties and adamant to threats. It became almost impossible to transact business. It looked like one man would succeed either in making the members attend or in wrecking the legislative program.

Finally a solution was found, in the rule which authorizes the Speaker to ignore points of order when they are purely "dilatory." It is a rule which can be enforced only with the solid backing of the House, because members are jealous of their rights, but in this case the House was solidly against Blanton, and Speaker Gillette was able to end the one-man filibuster.

However, most of the business of the House actually is performed in the Committee of the Whole, which is the House itself, sitting not as a legislative body but as a committee. Only 100 members are required to constitute a quorum in the Committee of the Whole. In the British House of Commons, where the same practice obtains, 40 constitute a quorum in the Committee of the Whole, although the total membership of the House is larger than our House of Representatives. Cannon thinks that the rule here could very well be changed to allow 50 members to constitute a quorum.

Can Be Remedied, but It Won't Be.

It has been advocated by Representative Luce that whenever the House proper finds itself without a quorum, it shall automatically resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole, and proceed with the transaction of business. Cannon does not believe this practicable, and believes that it would be a too transparent device to evade the Constitution.

"Pass a rule that general debate shall be confined to the subject," he said. "Enforce the five-minute rule. Take the political speeches and the self-advertising speeches and all the irrelevant speeches off the floor and put them in the Record. Stop the senseless oral reading of bills and the reporting of original forms of bills. Consolidate the memorial services, authorize the Committee of the Whole to function with 50 members, and enforce the rule against 'dilatory' points of order when they are obviously dilatory, and you will see the House regain its dignity, its popularity, its influence and its usefulness."

What chance is there of accomplishing this? Precious little, as things stand now. For the rules, in addition to the consequences which have been described here, have another and entirely different set of consequences. They give the leaders absolute control of legislation, and when one says the leaders, one means the administration. Whatever their other defects, the House rules are perfectly and designedly drafted for the benefit of a President who wants to jam through it legislation of the kind he wants, when he wants it.

It is this feeling of futility, this knowledge that the leaders (acting under instruction from the White House) can make the House jump through the hoop when they are ready, that undoubtedly is responsible for much of the idle, irrelevant and uninteresting stuff that goes on on the floor. When the time to vote comes, the majority will come swarming in from the House Office Building, obedient to the party whip, to "put it over." Meantime, those of them who are desirous of strutting their little hour upon the stage are permitted to do so, with the understanding that they will "uphold the hand of the President" on the day that the leaders have set for a vote.

Those leaders are satisfied with the situation. They do not propose to open the subject of rules' revision if they can help it. The Wisconsin insurgents made them do it in 1923; when they had the balance of power, but those bilious days are past, and a country that wanted to keep cool with Coolidge has since given them a safe and solid hand-picked working majority. As long as it remains the present rules will remain, and the House will remain "the most tiresome body on earth."

PARASKEVAPOULAS ACCEPTS PREMIERSHIP OF GREECE

Commanded Army Under Venizelos; Greece Granted Balance of $33,000,000 American Credit, Says Paper.

By the Associated Press.

ATHENS, Greece, May 15.—The Newspaper Eleftheron Vima states that General Paraskevapoulos, who was Commander-in-Chief of the Greek army under Venizelos, has telegraphed his acceptance of the premiership and will shortly arrive from Paris.

According to the same paper, the American Government has decided to grant Greece the balance of the credit of $33,000,000 which was placed at Greece's disposal in 1919, but which was withheld after the late King Constantine's return. Greece will undertake to refund the amount in 15 years.

JEWISH EDUCATION WEEK WILL BEGIN NEXT WEDNESDAY

Purpose Is to Popularize and Increase Enrollment of City's Hebrew Schools.

Jewish Education week, under the auspices of the Board of Education of Hebrew schools in St. Louis, will be held May 19-26. Its purpose is to popularize Jewish education and increase the enrollment of the city's Hebrew schools.

Addresses will be delivered in the leading synagogues of the city May 19 and 20, in which the importance of religious training will be stressed. In addition, there will be a mass meeting at the Hebrew School, West End avenue and Page boulevard, at 8 p. m. Wednesday, May 26.

In a proclamation issued yesterday, the board declares the absence of religious education among young Jews has "estranged children from their families, their communities, and their faith; has driven numbers of our youth into corrupting and degrading environments totally alien and repulsive to Jewish life, and has created untold tragedies in the homes of rich and poor alike."

72,753 SIGNATURES OBTAINED IN MILLER RECALL CANVASS

Work Entering Seventh Week With 12,000 More Than the Minimum Required.

The canvass for signatures to the petitions for the recall of Mayor Miller now is entering its seventh week with a total of 72,753 signatures gathered, as tabulated up to yesterday morning. While the minimum required is 60,456, a margin is being obtained to make the movement more impressive and to cover falty signatures which may be stricken off.

During the first week of the canvass the number of additional names announced daily averaged somewhat more than 1000. Thereafter the daily accretion was more than 2000, until last Tuesday, when it dropped a little. The number added yesterday was 1629. John J. Hell, chairman of the recall committee, declared this did not indicate a lack of interest in the recall. He is hopeful of reaching the goal of 120,000, which is about the number of votes which were cast for Mayor Miller a year ago.

Washington U. Homecoming.

The Washington University Alumni Asscoaition is planning a summer homecoming celebration which will open June 5 with an open-air production, "The Romantic Age," and an informal dance and reception on the quadrangle. The homecoming will end June 8 with a banquet at Hotel Chase.

A FARM AND BANK PROBLEM.

From the World's Work for May.

THERE was a farmer in the South who inherited a farm on which, up to 1919, he had not been able to get a larger mortgage than $8000. In that year, however, with land values soaring and profits high, he got another $6000 mortgage, making $14,000 in all. By 1923 it was evident that he couldn't pay the interest on the $14,000 without more personal deprivation than he was willing to make. He explained this to the bank and told its officers that they could have the farm. They were confronted with changing their status from lender with little responsibility to owner with great responsibility. The bank itself could not run the farm. The officers doubted if they could find a better farmer to run it than the man then on it. Ownership was not only a right but a responsibility, and in this case a responsibility they were unable to take. They refinanced the farm by getting the Land Bank to take a $7000 first mortgage (at lower rates than they gave) and they took a second mortage. The farmer went back to work. The bank had this satisfaction: The place would be kept up, the taxes and insurance paid without worry to them, the land bank mortgage would be amortized in 30 years, and in the meanwhile if the farmer had good luck he might pay them some or even all their interest. Otherwise they were out their interest and had a frozen asset of $7000.

A CHURCH CENSUS.

From the St. Joseph News-Press.

ACCORDING to a census of churches recently compiled in The Christian Herald, there was an increase of 800,000 in all church membership in 1925, and a gain of 166 churches, as against a decrease of 12 in 1924. This is the largest gain for several years.

There are 24 denominations that have a membership of at least 200,000, but a fuller list has 52 independent denominations. These are subdivided into individual groups that bring the grand total to 147 religious bodies with individual names. The names of many of these are unfamiliar to most of us, such as the Two-Seed-in Spirit Predestinarians, the Church of God (Winebrenner), the General Six-Principle Church, the "Chs. God and Sts. Christ (Col.)," the Amanas, the Wilburites, the Jehovah Conference, the Old Order Amish, the Conservative Amish, the Old Order Wisler and Pilgrim Holiness. Twelve Buddhist-Japanese temples are included in the list. The smallest denomination or group division is the Primitive Friends, with one church and 20 members. The Roman Catholics have the largest number of members and the Methodists have shown the largest gain in membership. So, it appears that the age is not as Godless as some folks fear it to be.

CITY'S PROGRESS IN 50 YEARS OF IMPROVEMENTS

INFORMATION FROM TWO 13-YEAR CYCLES

$12,599,128 Spent From 1877 to 1890 and From 1913 to 1926 Total Has Been $55,602,950.

Progress made by St. Louis in public improvements during the last 50 years is shown in data prepared by President Kinsey of the Board of Public Service.

Two bridges crossed the Mill Creek Valley in 1877. There are now eight.

Mileage of sewers in 1877 was 179; it is now 934.

With a population of 340,000 in 1877, the average daily water consumption was 22,250,000 gallons. Last year it was 115,000,000 gallons for a population of 820,000, which indicates that St. Louisans are using more than twice as much water per capita today as they did 50 years ago. It may be their thirst, or their lawns or their baths, but it's true. Another waterworks is being constructed to take care of the increasing consumption. Miles of distributing mains have increased from 176 to 1069.

Expenditures Then and Now.

Expenditures for all municipal purposes amounted to $5,800,941.12 in 1877-78; the budget for 1926-27 totals $26,819,475.50.

"Way back then there were 291 miles of paved streets, of which 280 miles were of macadam, 10 miles of wooden blocks and one mile of stone blocks. Today there are 1008 miles of streets paved as follows: Hard paved, 643; soft paved, 224, and unpaved, 241.

St. Louis has today 451 miles of alleys, 301 miles of which are hard paved.

Park and playground area has not increased in proportion. There were 2197 acres in 1877, and there are 2918 today. Suggestions have been made recently that additional tracks be acquired in and around the city.

Organized in 1877.

Data for 1877 is of importance because that was the first year of existence for the Board of Public Improvements, known since 1914 as the Board of Public Service. Col. Henry Flad, the noted engineer, was the first president of the board and served continuously in that office for 13 years. None of his successors served so long, with the exception of Kinsey, who completed 13 years and one month's service last Friday. Edward Flad, son of Col. Flad, was at one time Water Commissioner of St. Louis and later a member of the Board of Freeholders which drafted the Charter of 1914.

Kinsey has found much of interest in Col. Flad's official reports. Kinsey has for several years advocated the establishment of a fund from which contractors might be paid in cash for special assessment work, the tax bills to be made payable to and collected by the city instead of the contractor, as has always been the practice. Kinsey recently discovered a similar suggestion in a report by Col. Flad in 1878. It was estimated that contractors would reduce their bids 20 per cent under the new system, as they could be contractors exclusively and not bill collectors on the side.

Evidence of Growth.

Striking evidence of St. Louis' growth is contained in the following statement of sums expended annually by the city for public improvements during the respective 13-year tenures of Presidents Flad

Winter Garden Sued for $25,000. Suit for $25,000 for injuries alleged to have been suffered in the Winter Garden ice skating rink at 520 De Balliviere avenue on March 3, was filed in Circuit Court yesterday by Miss Theresa Baur, 23, of 4729 Farlin avenue, against the Winter Garden and Ice Co. She alleges she was knocked down there by a skater and suffered a fracture of the skull and other injuries. Thomas L. Anderson, [illegible] said he would contend it was the duty of the management to protect patrons from speeding skaters.

CONROYS

Grand Piano Headquarters

Apartment Size Lindeman Grand Piano, $745, F. O. B.
The Second Oldest Piano in America

—the supreme gift to the June Bride

Having been offered virtually every American piano, we have chosen the following manufacturers along with our own trade names as the best values in their respective class.—The phrase "Conroys alone give Conroy values" is more than a slogan—it is an absolute fact.

CONROY
Hazelton — A. B. Chase
Autopiano — Lester
Avalon — Lindeman
Starr — Navarre
Emerson — Kohler & Campbell
Etc.

IN securing an instrument from Conroys the fond parents are afforded the opportunity of choosing from a beautiful and complete array of modern new grand pianos unequaled elsewhere in Saint Louis—

—The bride-to-be may select her bridal gift unhampered by the thought that the piano of her dreams must be chosen from a mere handful or that the price is above or below her daddy's means.

—In Conroys one may wander and still find additional and different models of piano craftsmanship—authentic period reproductions—special art cases—inexpensive yet sturdy instruments—as low as $383; or on up through the different grades to the magnificent Conroy. If the piano of your dreams can be found anywhere, Conroys is the most likely spot.

Unusually pleasant terms if desired. Conroy's unusual financial strength eliminates brokerage, carrying charges, and all forms of a similar nature. A liberal allowance for your present instrument.

Your Wrinkles Take Wings—in 15 Minutes

Want to have those unwelcome marks of age, illness or fatigue disappear in a few minutes, before your very eyes? Just dissolve a spoonful of Powdered Tarkroot in a spoonful of lemon juice, smooth this soothing emulsion over your face—then go to your mirror and see what happens! You will certainly have the surprise of your life. You will readily concede you have never seen or heard of anything that could cause so remarkable and so quick a rejuvenation of face and features.

While this simple home treatment has such a wonderful effect upon a wrinkled or saggy skin, it is altogether harmless. Its influence upon the facial tissues is decidedly beneficial. Tarkroot is not to be confused with any cosmetic or make-up, for it is to be washed off, leaving no trace of itself. A package from the druggist contains enough to make the cost less than 3 cents a treatment!

NEW SANITY TEST FOR RUSSELL SCOTT

State's Action Follows Discovery of Attempt to Escape From Criminal Asylum.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, May 15.—The gallows again loom for Russell Scott, who three times was saved from the death walk in last-minute legal maneuvers.

The erstwhile Canadian financier, who once handled million-dollar deals and ended as a petty stickup man seeking a few dollars in drug store holdups, soon will be examined as to his sanity at Chester Hospital for the Criminal Insane and if found mentally sound he will be returned to Cook County to be sentenced to death.

A commission to make the test will be named by Judge C. H. Jenkins, State Director of Public Welfare. The date has not yet been set.

Saws Mailed With Candy.

Scott was sentenced to be hanged for the murder of Joseph Maurer, drug clerk, but a few hours before the time set for the execution the morning of Jury 25, 1925, a petition for an insanity hearing was granted by Judge David who was roused out of bed by Scott's attorneys. The hearing was held a week later and despite the testimony of many State experts that Scott was sane, the jury found otherwise and he was sent to the Chester asylum to "die insane or await recovery and die on the gallows."

Coincident with the sanity test announcement, an apparent attempt to aid Scott in escaping from Chester was revealed by asylum officials. Recently a large box of candy addressed to Scott reached the prison and in opening it, Dr. Stubblefield, superintendent at Chester, found two large saws in a false bottom.

Previous to the sanity trial, Scott made a desperate fight, aided by relatives and club women of his former home city, Detroit, to stave off execution until a search could be made for his brother, Robert, upon whom he shouldered all the blame for the killing of Maurer. Robert later was found in a California prison and returned to Chicago.

A fake telegram, signed with Robert's name and stating that he was returning to help his brother, caused Gov. Small to issue one reprieve. After it was shown the telegram was a hoax, sent by a Detroit telegraph operator because of sympathy for the condemned man, Gov. Small declined to further intervene. It was than that Scott's lawyers successfully employed the sanity plea.

RIOT AT BURIAL OF ITALIAN SOCIALIST

Milan Police Try to Bury Him Secretly ,but Thousands Go to Cemetery.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and New York World.

CHIASSO, Switzerland, May 15. —Workers and police fought yesterday over the body of Giacinto Minotti Serrati, the veteran Socialist leader whom the police tried to bury secretly to prevent a Socialist demonstration.

The workers, discovering the ruse, went in crowds to Milan's famous cemetery, one of the beauty spots of the city.

Serrati's eldest son threw a red flag over the coffin. The police knocked him down, and the riot started inside and outside the cemetery.

When Serrati died the police ordered that there be no funeral procession. Public manifestations of the grief of the workers for the death of their leader would have given the lie to the Fascist claim that Italian workers gladly have accepted the Fascist yoke. Hundreds of labor delegations went to Milan from all parts of Italy to attend the funeral, which had been announced in two labor papers. The prefect ordered the police to confiscate the issues of the two papers, and to prevent the funeral.

In the meantime the body of Serrati had been carried in secret under heavy ponce escort to the cemetery. Despite the prefect's orders, the workers decided to honor their dead leader inside the cemetery, but when they marched in thousands to the burying ground they found it surrounded by police and Fascist militia.

Eventually deputations of workers were allowed to enter the cemetery and lay flowers on Serrati's coffin. But when the police saw Serrati unfurling a red flag over the coffin, they seized it and knocked the young man down. During the ensuing fight many police and workers were beaten.

STOPS DANDRUFF! A SMALL BOTTLE SAVES YOUR HAIR

Every bit of dandruff disappears and hair stops coming out.

Try this! Your hair appears abundant, wavy and beautiful.

Within ten minutes after an application of Danderine you cannot find a single trace of dandruff. One application dissolves every particle of dandruff, invigorates the scalp, stops itching and falling hair.

Furthermore, Danderine is to the hair what fresh showers of rain and sunshine are to vegetation. It goes right to the roots, invigorates and strengthens them. Its exhilarating, stimulating and life-producing properties cause the hair to grow strong and beautiful.

Bobbed hair has made the girls aware of the dangerous effects of unsightly dandruff, which is now more apparent than ever since the hair is short.

Danderine is a sure way to get rid of dandruff and immediately doubles the beauty of your hair. The effect is amazing—your hair will be light, fluffy and wavy, and have an appearance of abundance; an incomparable luster, softness and luxuriance.

Get a small bottle of Danderine from any drug store or toilet counter for a few cents and keep that dandruff out of your hair and off your shoulders.

NEW MEDICINE NOW SELLING AT RATE OF TWO BOTTLES PER MINUTE

In Thirty Cities Alone 1,165,000 Bottles of Herb Extract Called Herb Juice Were Sold During the Past Twelve Months

Seems almost impossible that any one medicine could attain such a remarkable sales record. But, when you realize how quickly it gives relief even in the most severe cases of chronic constipation, you will readily see why it has been proclaimed the greatest tonic laxative of all times.

SAINT LOUIS WOMAN REWARDED

Feels it Her Duty to Make a Public Statement in Behalf of the Remedy Which Has Given Her Back Her Health.

MRS. E. LEISE

"I have been greatly rewarded and feel that I owe my splendid health to the use of Herb Juice, and therefore feel it my duty to make this public statement in its behalf. Herb Juice has done me a world of good and I am now enjoying better health than I have in years," said Mrs. E. Leise, who resides at 4334 Minnesota Ave., St. Louis, Mo., in a recent conversation with the special demonstrator at Walgreen's Drug Store.

"I had gotten to the place where life was just a misery to me," continued Mrs. Leise. "I never felt like doing anything and as for energy, well, I just didn't have any. I had been bothered with a very bad case of stomach trouble for a long time. After my meals gas would form which caused me to be very miserable. I was always constipated and my liver troubled me continually. I had to be up and down so much at night that my sleep was badly broken and what little I did sleep didn't seem to do me much good. I was always tired and worn out. I had severe pains in my side at times. I became greatly interested in your testimonials which appeared in our papers here, and after reading the things Herb Juice had done for other people I made up my mind to try it and I want to say that I am more than pleased with the wonderful results, and Herb Juice is the most satisfactory remedy I have ever taken. I now have no need for the strong purgatives which I used to use, because my bowels are regular and I never know what it is to be constipated. I sleep fine and never have to be up at all during the night. I am very thankful to say that I am never bothered with those pains in my side from which I had suffered for two years or more. I have taken all kinds of medicines, but none of them ever seemed to do me any good. But since taking your Herb Juice I am never bothered with any pain whatsoever. I have only taken a few bottles, and it has done me a world of good, and I am pleased to be able to make this statement in its behalf. I gladly recommend Herb Juice to anyone because I know that it will do all that is claimed for it."

This great laxative medicine is an Herb Extract preparation, known as Herb Juice and is outselling any medicine where it has been introduced. Many are calling daily to see the special demonstrator at Walgreen Drug Company, 514 Washington avenue, giving statements for publication, praising this great remedy that their friends may be induced to try it.

Mother! It's Cruel to "Physic" Your Child

DR. W. B. CALDWELL AT THE AGE OF 83

To Dr. W. B. Caldwell, of Monticello, Ill., a practicing physician for 47 years, it seemed cruel that so many constipated infants and children had to be kept constantly "stirred up" and half sick by taking cathartic pills, tablets, salts, calomel and nasty oils.

While he knew that constipation was the cause of nearly all children's little ills, he did not believe that a sickening "purge" or "physic" was necessary.

In Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin he discovered a laxative which helps to establish natural bowel "regularity" even if the child is chronically constipated. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin not only causes a gentle, easy bowel movement, but, best of all, it never gripes, sickens or upsets the most delicate system. Besides, it is absolutely harmless, and so pleasant that even a cross, feverish, bilious, sick child gladly takes it.

Buy a large 60-cent bottle at any store that sells medicine and just see for yourself.

CRUSHED BY TRUCK

RICHARD FELTHAUS.

TRUCK KILLS BOY WHO FELL FROM SKIDDING BICYCLE

Richard Feldhaus, 10, Was Riding Handle Bars of Wheel Pedaled by Young Friend.

Taking his savings deposit box to a bank to have it opened in order to make some small purchase, Richard Feldhaus, 10 years old, of 3123 Cass avenue, was killed by a motor truck a few blocks from his home yesterday. He was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Feldhaus, his father, a saloonkeeper at 3142 Cass avenue, formerly having been a policeman.

As they were going north in Grand boulevard, just north of Montgomery street, the cycle skidded on freshly sprinkled asphalt and Richard fell in front of a southbound truck driven by Frank Schuettenberg, a brick hauler, of 4395 Donovan avenue. Application of the brakes by Schuettenberg failed to stop the truck, the left front wheel of which pased over the boy's head. At the nearby Mullanphy Hospital Richard was pronounced dead.

Schuettenberg furnished bond to appear before the Coroner. Witnesses said the accident seemed unavoidable.

Samuel Insull Jr. to Wed.

CHICAGO, May 15.—The engagement of Miss Adelaide Lyman Pierce and Samuel Insull Jr. was announced today by the parents of the bride-to-be, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Ingalls Pierce. Pierce is the president of the Saline County Coal Corporation. Insull is the son of Samuel Insull, head of many public utilities.

OFFICIAL FAIRY TALE TELLER

English Woman Has Told Stories to 12,926 Children.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, May 15.—The English town of Bradford has an official fairy story teller, who gathers the children about her and relates to them the tales of dwarfs and fairies that have entertained the young in all parts of the world for hundreds of years.

Mrs. Mary Bradford, the official story teller, believes that the fairy tales serve as a valuable introduction to sound literature in the children's later years. The dragon and ogre type of stories are avoided altogether. Since Mrs. Bradford began her work, 12,926 children have sat at her feet and listened to the stories.

USE RUSE TO GET SHAVES

Berliners Become Transients on Sunday to Evade Law.

Special Correspondence of the Post-Dispatch.

BERLIN, May 16.—Investigation into the reasons why large numbers of unshaved Berliners, suitcase in hand, jam the railroad stations on Sunday mornings has disclosed a unique method of getting around a blue law.

One cannot obtain a shave in Berlin on Sunday unless he is a transient or a bridegroom, according to police orders. So all the Berliners needing a Sunday shave grab an empty suitcase and make tracks for the railway station, which is much simpler than trying to act the part of a bridegroom.

Fox Hunt a Feature Of Horse Show at Jefferson Barracks

Exceptional Entertainment Planned for Lovers of Equine Aristocrats on Friday, Saturday and Sunday.

FOX hunting, behind a pack of famous hounds, and polo will be diversions for society this week as a part of the entertainment arranged for guests at the annual Military and Civilian Horse Show at Jefferson Barracks.

The show will be given Friday, Saturday and Sunday and promises to provide one of the best exhibits of mounts and horsemanship witnessed here in years. Many prominent St. Louisans will participate, some exhibiting horses famous in show circles.

Col. Moor N. Falls, commander of Jefferson Barracks, is giving his personal attention to the military features of the horse show program. In addition, he will draw on Battery C, Fourteenth Field Artillery with its field pieces and the Sixth Tank Company, with its huge tanks, to entertain visitors.

Among the Exhibitors.

In the regular horse show events Miss Marceline Reyburn will show her jumper, Persimmon, and will assist Edward L. Bakewell in showing the famous Bakewell hunters, Old Folks, Beaumont and Shylock. The Bakewell boys, Anderson, Alexander and Edward Jr., will have part with their Andy Jump, Grey Bird and Mike.

Mrs. James A. Corbett will show Pal O' Mine, and Miss Dorothea Nagel her mare, Sue. Mrs. Harrison Hoblizelle has entered her saddle horse, Mickey and Miss Bonnie Langenberg, her new pony, Lightning.

Little Jane Ambruster will show her pony pacer pony, Columbia Cole, and Margaret Holekamp make her first public appearance with her new horse, Crino. Mrs. Marion Corlis Bowman has entered her Dean George. Mrs. Walter W. Krenning's new saddle gelding, Peta Boy, will be seen for the first time in public.

A Last Year's Winner.

Paul Bakewell Jr. will show his gelding, Hunter's Chief, last year's winner of the Bowman Cup. George L. Davis' new mare, The Merry Widow, will make her first bow to St. Louis show spectators. Walter W. Krenning's show Maurine's Dare and Phil S. Medart will be represented with Leading Man and a new 3-year-old, Beau Gests. P. F. Cox, with Illinois Bell, Ray Bartholemew with Graham Lewis and Miss Frolich, Ottis M. Brown with Gypsy and Marry for the pony classes, Fred W. Holekamp and Robert W. Brown with the mare Clay Willis and A. N. Engle with Preston Peavine and Ethel King, also are entered.

Bernard Murphy will show Nellie Kelly, C. Woodruff, Meadow Lark; Adolphus Busch II, the hackneys Grand View and General Grant; C. P. DeLore the saddle horses, Rowdy and Royal Prince; Dr. S. B. Westlake, Alone Joe in the three-gaited saddle classes; R. Van Raalte, his famous Home Brew, and Stewart McDonald his Big Mack in the hunter classes. D. B. Smith will be a new exhibitor with several good horses to be shown. Dr. W. C. Calesby, Wade Childress will exhibit Lady Dare, and George G. Vest, Hillis.

From St. Louis Country Club.

From the St. Louis Country Club, O. L. Shapron, J. G. Williams, Alex T. Primm, Mahlon Wallace and others will bring their hunters and polo ponies. August A. Busch Jr. will have the jumper, Bootlegger, and others from his stables at Grant Farm. Entries from Jefferson Barracks will include the mounts of Schargers of Capt. George R. Middleton, Capt. Edw. W. McCaskey Jr., Capt. Nathan K. Neate, Lieut. G. M. Nelson, Lieut. R. R. Forrest, Lieut Dan H. Hundler and others.

The horse show classes will be judged by Charles W. Green of Moberly, Mo., one of the best known judges of saddle horses in America, and Capt. Francis H. Waters of the Fort Riley Army Cavalry School, an expert judge of hunters, jumpers and army mounts. The 6th Regiment band will furnish music for the horse show and the special entertainments planned. Col. Falls has ordered a dress parade for Saturday afternoon and the usual "retreats" with the evening gun will be observed in military formation.

Programs will include many contests in which the "hunters" and "jumpers" will be at over the hurdles.

Some Special Features.

In addition to the regular show contests there will be special features introduced each afternoon. Chief of these will be an exhibition of the famous Harrington Hounds trailing around the arena, followed by "hunters" in costume and mounted on horses of the required fox hunting type. Everything in the picture will be genuine except the fox. A drag-scented drag will provide the scent which the dogs will trail.

Many St. Louisians In Foreign Cities For Spring Season

Social World From California to Cairo is Assembling in Paris.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

PARIS, France, May 6.—From Palm Beach and Palermo, from California to Cairo, the international American social world is gathering in Paris to exchange pre-season greetings and prepare for the active days that lead up to the grand semaine. Each week-end dinner-dance at the Ritz is the scene of scores of reunions; Ciro's resounds with talk of the winter in Egypt, Sicily, on the Riviera and in Florida. All of the older favorite hotels and many of the score of new ones constructed during the winter are filling with regular spring guests and tourists from the States.

The social event of the past week was the opening of Maurice and Eleanora's Club, at the former Acacias, that drew not only most of the dining notabilities but nearly all of the entertainers. Maurice's new dancing partner, who, since the week before last, is also his wife, formerly Miss Eleanor Ambrose of Kansas City, Mo., won the assemblage. Maurice himself showed his old-time skill. With its new decorations, the club now has the air of an apple orchard in full bloom. Everybody was there from Frank O'Neill, the American jockey, to the Maharajah of Kapurthala, including Mr. and Mrs. "Bud" Fisher, Mr. and Mrs. Chauncey Olcott, Elsie Janis, the Dolly Sisters, Florence Walton and the Grand Duchess Marie of Russia. Mrs. Benjamin Thaw entertained a large party.

Walter H. Petring and his family of St. Louis, who have been making an extensive tour of the Continent, were recent visitors to Nuremberg, Germany, stopping at the Grand Hotel.

Miss Bluford Richardson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph R. Richardson of Chicago, underwent an operation for appendicitis last week at the American Hospital here. Miss Richardson and her mother, as well as her grandfather, Samuel A. Walker of St. Louis, recently arrived at the Hotel de Crillon after a tour which included, since January, Egypt and a large part of Europe.

Mrs. Atwell T. Lincoln and Mr. and Mrs. Martin Lammert and Miss Mary Elise Lammert of St. Louis are among the recent arrivals in the French capital, stopping at the Hotel Saint James et d'Albany.

Miss Florence J. Wade and her father, Festus J. Wade of St. Louis have been passing several days at the Hotel de Crillon.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph W. Bray of St. Louis have arrived from New York and are staying for the moment at the Hotel Wagram. Mr. Bray was a guest at the last luncheon meeting of the American Club of Paris.

MISS JANE ELIZABETH TREADWAY'S engagement to George Macdonald Parker, was announced Wednesday.
—Kandeler.

MRS. WARNE NIEDRINGHAUS, who, with Miss Claire Garneau, sailed Wednesday from New York for Europe.
—Philip de Woskin.

Frank G. Baum of San Francisco entertained at dinner last week at the Cafe de Paris for Miss Helen Wills, the American tennis champion. The guests included Miss Florence Heywood, American lecturer at the Louvre; Miss Ruth Younger of San Francisco; Harrison Hoyt and Roy Sheldon, a St. Louis sculptor.

Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Waters of Fredericktown, Mo., who have been passing some time on the French and Italian Rivieras, have arrived here from Nice and are registered at the Hotel Chatham.

Mr. and Mrs. Llewellyn R. Smith of St. Louis are visiting in Lausanne, Switzerland, where the spring season rapidly is getting under way. They are staying at the Alexandra Hotel.

Mme. Luise Wolff, who presides over the largest musical salon in Berlin, entertained last week to welcome Dr. Wilhelm Furtwangler, who had just arrived from America, where he was guest conductor of the New Annual Reunion Luncheon of Lindenwood College Club Tuesday — Garden Party to Be Given by Triangle Class of Church.

The annual reunion luncheon of the St. Louis Lindenwood College Club will be held at the Missouri Athletic Association Tuesday at 12:30 p. m. At this meeting officers will be elected for the coming year. Mrs. Joseph White will preside, and several guests from the college will be present, including President and Mrs. John Lincoln Roemer, and Dr. Alice E. Gipson.

The Triangle Class of St. John's Methodist Church, Kingshighway and Washington boulevard, will give its annual garden party and May festival in the church, Wednesday night, May 19. The parlors will be transformed by garlands of flowers, made by the members of the class. Strawberries, home-made candy and ice-cream will be sold. The officers of the class are Misses Cora Smith, Dick Rice, Mrs. J. Monroe and Miss Elizabeth Heim. G. A. Radford is the teacher.

A lawn fete and dance will be given for the benefit of the Alumnae Association of Lenox Hall, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Erwin W. Rawlings, 6270 Cornell, University City, Friday evening, May 21. Miss Marie Bopp of 156 Central avenue, Clayton, is president of the Alumnae Association.

The Get Acquainted Club will have its regular Sunday evening dance May 23, in the Rock Spring Turner Hall, Boyle and Chouteau avenues. The club is making preparations to hold the Sunday evening meetings out of doors during the summer months.

The St. Louis Outing Club will hold its regular monthly dance Saturday night in Recital Hall on the first floor of the Odeon Building, Grand boulevard and Finney avenue. The first summer outing will be at Creve Coeur Lake, May 23, and will be a reunion of the members of the club.

The Good-Fellowship Club will hold its regular meeting May 21 at Westminster Hall, 3806 Olive street. Those wishing to attend will be made acquainted by the hosts and hostesses with the members and guests. A hike for Sunday, May 23, will be announced at the meeting.

A miscellaneous shower and informal bridge party was given Saturday afternoon by Mrs. James E. McBurney of Alton, Ill., at the home of her aunt, Mrs. Jay Green, 7340 Shaftesbury, University City, in honor of Miss Frances Marie Simpson, whose marriage to Oliver Funsch will take place June 2, in the Holy Communion Episcopal Church. A luncheon was served to 25 guests. The surprise shower followed immediately after the lunch. Little Betty Ann Anger pulled each gift down from the huge lavender and pink umbrella suspended in the doorway and presented them to Miss Simpson. The guests included Mrs. Oliver J. Funsch of West Palm Beach, Fla., mother of the prospective groom.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph L. Kohner of 6124 Westminster place will be at home Wednesday evening from 8 to 11 o'clock in honor of the confirmation of their daughter, Melba.

Mr. and Mrs. Sol Kurlander of 6240 Delmar boulevard will be at home to their friends next Thursday evening in honor of the graduation of their daughter, Marion. Miss Kurlander is a member of the senior class of the St. Louis College of Pharmacy.

Miss Dorothy Williams of Vicksburg, Miss., and Miss Willa O'Bannon of Miami, Ok., students of the oratory department of Lindenwood College, will give a graduation recital tomorrow night at 7:30 o'clock in Roemer auditorium, assisted by Miss Lois Lawton of Alamosa, Colo., pianist. Miss Williams' reading will be "Happiness," by J. Hartley Manners, and Miss O'Bannon will present "The Boy Comes Home," by A. A. Milne. Miss Lawton's piano numbers will be from Brahms, Saint-Saens and Friedman-Gartner.

Engagements and Weddings of the Week

The engagement of Miss Virginia Gregory, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles J. Gregory, 5740 Kingsbury place, to Carl S. Hansman of 4458 Washington boulevard, was announced yesterday at a luncheon bridge given by the prospective bride's mother. Miss Gregory is a graduate of Washington University and a member of Kappa Alpha Theta Sorority. Mr. Hansman is a graduate of Northwestern University and a member of Phi Delta Theta Fraternity. The date for the wedding has not been set.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Turner Fauntleroy of 5716 Enright avenue have issued invitations for the marriage of their daughter, Miss Janet Rankin Fauntleroy, to Edward Hume Clendenin, to take place June 3, at 5:30 o'clock, in the Second Presbyterian Church. Mr. Clendenin and his bride will make their home in Casper, Wyo.

Mrs. E. J. Russell of 5814 Cabanne avenue gave a bridge party Tuesday afternoon at Bellerive Country Club to announce the engagement of her daughter, Miss Elizabeth B. Russell to W. Dinks Killion, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Killion of 4222 Washington boulevard. Miss Russell attended Stuart Hall, Staunton, Va. She made her debut informally four years ago. She was one of the maids at a recent Veiled Prophet's Ball. Mr. Killion is a graduate of The Principia. The wedding will take place the latter part of June.

The guests at the announcement party were: Mrs. W. A. Killion, Mrs. Vernon W. Cottam, Mrs. A. B. Seigfreid, Mrs. A. H. Gale, Mrs. J. J Hatfield of Ava, Ill., Mrs. J. Allen Harvey, Mrs. J. J. McElwee, Mrs. W. H. Reaves, Miss Charlotte Buckham, Miss Gertrude Hart, Miss Florence Hausen, Miss Georgia Dailey, Miss Elizabeth Oyler, Miss Jane Frees and Miss Mary Russell.

The marriage of Miss Lucille Goessling, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. W. Goessling, of 5923 Enright avenue, to Bennett J. Applegate took place Tuesday evening at First Presbyterian Church, the Rev. W. B. Lampe officiating. Miss Helen Standinger was maid of honor and the Misses Grace, Esther and Virginia Goessling, sisters of the bride were bridesmaids. Harold J. Bush was best man and Robert Abbot, Clarence Barkesdale and Fred Niemeyer were groomsmen.

The bride was gowned in ivory satin and lace with a court train of bridal satin. Her veil was caught with orange blossoms and she carried a shower bouquet of orchids and lilies of the valley. The attendants were bouffi frocks of rose taffeta with picture hats to match. They carried bouquets of pink roses and blue delphinium.

Mr. and Mrs. Applegate are spending their honeymoon in the East and will be at home at 797 Leman avenue, after July 1. Both the bride and groom are graduates of Washington University.

Miss Marie Rosalie Weissenborn, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Julius E. Weissenborn, of 2602 Arkansas avenue, announced her engagement to George Floyd Morrison, Thursday afternoon at a bridge luncheon at the Forest Park Hotel. The luncheon was given by Miss Weissenborn for Miss Babette Nies, whose marriage to Arthur S. Weissenborn will take place June 5.

Miss Weissenborn is a senior at Washington University and a former student at Missouri University, where she became a member of Alpha Gamma Delta Sorority. Mr. Morrison was educated at Washington University and is a member of Kappa Sigma Fraternity. No date has been set for the wedding.

Harmless Way To Reduce—

A large number of men and women today are overburdened with excess fat and want to know of a safe and harmless way to reduce—

For many years fat has been considered a dreaded enemy—it is unhealthy, cumbersome and not stylish to be overweight. Fat men and women as a rule are not wanted anywhere. Thousands of fat people have used SAN-GRI-NA to get back to a slender, normal figure—No startling over night reduction—no miracle. The reducing is generally from three to four pounds a week—it is a logical and safe way to be slender and well without having to resort to weakening diets or strenuous exercises. It is very likely that amongst your own acquaintances SAN-GRI-NA has been used—Why not ask them what they think of it?—Then try it yourself and see what it can do—if you know of an obstinate case of obesity mention SAN-GRI-NA to them, it is guaranteed to reduce or money refunded.

Why we do not send samples

NOTE: Many people ask for free samples, but experience has proven that it takes more than a sample to show results—WE DO BETTER. We guarantee results or your druggist will refund money so the trial does not cost you a cent. Sold at all good drug or dept. stores or you can send direct to the SANGRINA CO., 1841 Broadway, New York City. On sale at any of Wolff-Wilson Drug Stores, Enderle, Penn Drug Co., Walgreen Drug Co., Krauson Bros., Johnson Bros., or Speckart Bros. Drug Stores.

Catholic Women to Give Lawn Party

A lawn fete and card party will be given by the Catholic Woman's League tomorrow at 2:30 p. m. at "Green Acres," the country residence of Dr. and Mrs. Robert E. Wilson on the Berry road, Webster. Mrs. Wilson is an officer of the league.

Should the weather permit, the affair will be al fresco, with refreshments served on the piazza. If the weather continues chilly, the card tables will be set in the large lounge and in the billiard room, with the refreshments served in the dining room.

Arrangements have been made to have automobiles meet the Ferguson-Kirkwood car so that guests who arrive by that route will have no difficulty in reaching "Green Acres."

The hostesses will be Mrs. Theodore Benoist, Mrs. John C. Muckerman, Mrs. John A. Calnane, Mrs. W. J. Polk, Mrs. Edward J. Walsh, Mrs. J. F. Schlafly, Mrs. Leo Moser, Mrs. John J. Sale of Dresses in Two Special Groups

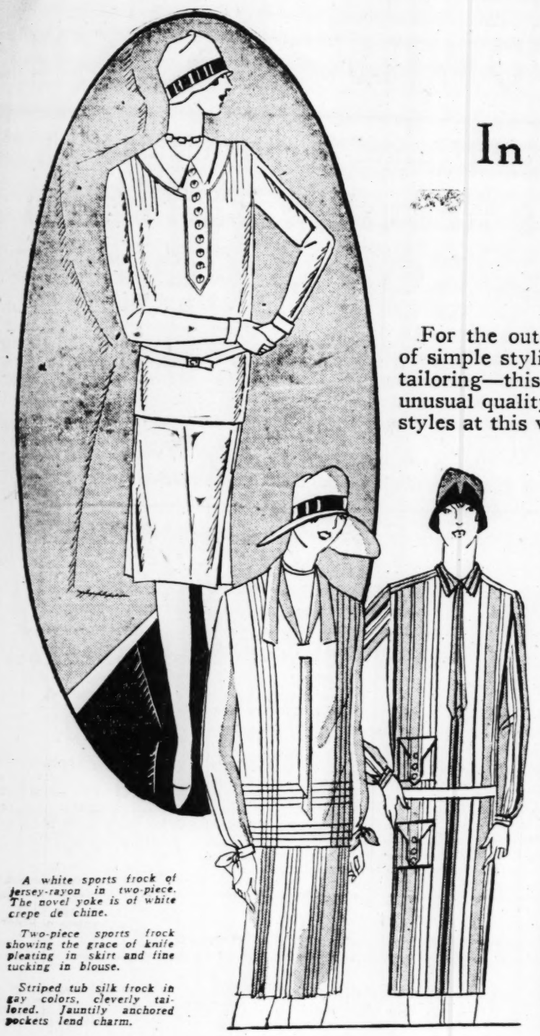
Hundreds of Lovely New Silk Frocks in Each Group Provide Wide Selection and Offer Very Exceptional Values



A white sports frock of jersey-rayon in two-piece. The novel yoke is of white crepe de chine.

Two-piece sports frock showing the grace of knife pleating in skirt and fine tucking in blouse.

In Sports Center

$10.00

For the outdoor season—when one requires a Frock of simple styling with cleverness achieved in details of tailoring—this group offers advantageous selection. The unusual quality of the materials and the many pleasing styles at this very low price suggest liberal choice.

The Frocks are tailored of materials suitable to active sports wear or for general service wear—striped and plain tub silk, silk broadcloth and radium, crepe de chine, Georgette, jersey, and flannel. Two-piece types are prominent. Straight-line Frocks show interesting diversity in styling. The bright high colors are dominant, fashioned with long sleeves and high or low necklines. Extraordinary are these values.

(Sport Center—Third Floor.)

In the Costume Salon

$31.00

The distinctive styling which one seeks in a costume Frock is assured in this group, for every Frock included was chosen on its individual charm. The extraordinary price does not measure the value of these Frocks—every one is exceptional in quality of material and in styling.

The informality of Summer is captured in the design and color of these Frocks. Two-piece and slip-over Frocks fashioned of light-weight materials depict new necklines, new sleeves and new color combinations. Sunni, June rose, coral sands, and other bright shades as well as navy and black are shown in flat crepes, georgettes, veiled prints, flowered chiffons, and polka dot prints. Sizes range from 34 to 46.

(Costume Salon—Third Floor.)

Crepe de chine frock in Coral Sands, trimmed in white silk and gold embroidery. A clever version of the two-piece mode.

Crepe de chine frock in tan, trimmed in a lighter shade of Georgette—cleverly pleated skirt.

The annual dinner of the alumnae of the Morse School of Expression was given last night at the Hotel Statler. The guests were the seniors of the 1926, who are Irma Gottschalk, Verona Haig, Marjorie Halliburton, Ella Hilgeman, Rose Hobelman, Ada Marie Kelly, Dorothy Vernon Meyers, John Sanford McCauley, Elizabeth McVey, Bessie Bissell Morse and Lydia Peterson.

The toastmistress was Mrs. Archie Garland, president of the alumnae association. Mrs. A. B. Mattingly gave the address of welcome to which Miss Dorothy Meyers, class president, responded. The school colors, gold and white, were used in decorations of vases and garlands of spring flowers. A program followed the dinner.

Mrs. C. B. Fall and Mrs. J. R. Sammous will be hostesses at a special luncheon Tuesday by the women of North Hills Country Club.

At Less Than Wholesale Cost!

1½ to 2 Yards Make a Dress

So simple to make a beautiful Summer dress. Soft and fluffy—just a fancy ornament, a twist of ribbon, a cluster of silk flowers and the dress is made. You will want quite a few for the Summer days.

$2.28 Yard

The Last Word in Summer Silks

The big floppy hats call for the flowery dresses of soft materials. Nothing more chic, more youthful or cooler looking for the Summer days. Cool as the very breezes themselves.

The manufacturers and importers little dreamed that these gorgeous silks would be offered for so little money.

It's another one of the big Silk scoops this popular department is putting over just when you want it.

-:- Club Notices and Activities -:-

The annual luncheon of the Press and Publicity Committee of the eighth district, Missouri Federation of Women's Clubs, was held Tuesday afternoon at the Forest Park Hotel. The luncheon tables were decorated in premier roses and the places were marked by telegrams for the guests. Small overturned ink bottles were given to the press chairmen as favors. Mrs. E. G. Lasor, chairman of the Luncheon Committee, presided. Mrs. F. H. Littlefield, president of the eighth district, and Mrs. Fred Armstrong, chairman of the Press and Publicity Committee, made brief talks.

Irvin Mattick, president of the Writers' Guild of St. Louis, writer of poems and short stories, was the speaker of the day and also read a number of his poems. Richard Halliburton, lecturer, traveler and author, was the guest speaker.

The Federation of Evangelical Women will meet at St. Paul's Church, Giles avenue and Potomac street, Thursday, at 2 p. m. There will be an election of officers.

The Clotho Club met May 7 at the home of Mrs. J. H. Lemp, 903 Belt avenue. The following officers were elected: Mrs. Victor Kern, president; Mrs. L. D. Le Gear, first vice president; Mrs. Lewis Balsom, second vice president; Miss Freida Werth Tarrant, secretary; Mrs. A. W. Lawson, treasurer, and Mrs. H. J. Symons, auditor.

Many of the costumes for the open-air performance of "As You Like It," to be given by the Shakspeare Association of Washington University on the evening of May 18, are being made by the co-eds of the university under the direction of Miss Margaret Ewing. Many of the costumes for "The Winter's Tale," the last play to be given by the association, were also made under the supervision of Miss Ewing. By making most of its costumes, the Shakspeare Association is gradually collecting a worth-while wardrobe.

St. Louis Tercentenary Shakspeare Society will have the final lesson on "The Tempest" Tuesday, May 18, at 2 p. m., in Vandervoort's music hall. Mrs. Donald MacDonald, class leader, will give special instruction to the students relative to judging Shakspeare plays and the necessary qualifications of good literature in general.

A called meeting of active members will be held Tuesday, May 25, at 2 p. m., in Vandervoort's hall. At 2:30 p. m. the Missouri Historical Society and the Authors' Society will join with the Tercentenary Society to hear Dr. A. N. Dementl lecture on "Poetry and Literature."

Dr. Arthur E. Bostwick was the speaker at the public program May 11. His subject was "Shakspeare and the Chinese Theater."

Members of the Morse School of Expression presented "The Taming of the Shrew," with Harry McClain directing. The cast included Therese Wittler, Kathryn Trautz, Margaret Ukely, Marjorie Halliburton, Mary Ann Jones, Christine Gray, Goldie Hultsch, Louisa Hudson, Rose Hobleman, Sanford McCauley and Dorothy Meyer.

The Webster Groves Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, met at the home of Mrs. Leroy Davis May 4. The meeting was called to order by the regent, Mrs. Frank C. Thompson. The chapter voted to place a bronze tablet on the Rock Hill Church, marking it as the first Protestant Church in the county. The chapter also presented an ex-regent's pin to Mrs. William Greenhalgh. Mrs. Frank Thompson and Mrs. Greenhalgh were elected delegates to the State D. A. R. Conference to be held at Joplin, Mo., next fall. The alternates are: Mrs. James Crawford, Mrs. Leroy Davis, Mrs. E. C. Barber, Mrs. H. P. Phillips, Mrs. C. M. Skinner, Mrs. Frank Below, Mrs. J. K. Stribling, Mrs. L. P. Wingert, Mrs. E. H. Muther and Mrs. Louis Wolf.

While at the Continental Congress the Missouri delegates voted to purchase a box in the new Constitution Hall and the Webster Groves Chapter voted to give its share, $26.70.

Mrs. James Crawford who attended the National Continental Congress in Washington, D. C. last month as delegate, gave a business report and Mrs. E. G. Curtiss gave an account of the social activities. Miss Ruth Rumsey gave two vocal selections accompanied at the piano by Miss Marguerite Reade. Miss Reade, who is accompanist at the studio of KSD, also played "On the Wing's Song."

Owing to the absence of Mrs. Leroy Davis, her mother, Mrs. E. D. Treadwell acted as hostess, assisted by Mrs. L. P. Wingert and Mrs. E. H. Muther.

The annual luncheon of the College Club of St. Louis, an event which marks the close of each year, was held at the John Burroughs School yesterday. This celebrated the twenty-fifth anniversary of the founding of the club.

The guests were welcomed by 10 of the club members dressed in the garb of 1901, and the luncheon was served in a room attractively decorated for the occasion. At the close of the luncheon, Mrs. Eugene R. McCarthy, out-going president in whose term the club paid off its quota of several thousand dollars toward the national headquarters at Washington, gave a brief talk. She was followed by the incoming president, Mrs. F. Ray Leimkuehler.

The College Club is a consolidation of the former College Club and the St. Louis Branch of the Association of Collegiate Alumnae. After the "Songs of 1901" followed by the "Songs of 1926" had been sung, Mrs. George Gellhorn, first president of the College Club, and other past presidents of that organization spoke. Mrs. Philip Moore and other past presidents representing the Association of Collegiate Alumnae, told of the activities of this organization. Mrs. Roscoe Anderson, first president of the consolidated club, gave a short address.

This idea of "union" was portrayed by a mock wedding in which Miss Gertrude Blodgett, last president of the Association of Collegiate Alumnae, took the part of the bride; Mrs. William Wittrig, last president of the College Club, that of the groom.

A play, such as was popular in 1901, was presented by a cast from the Little Theater of Washington University, under the direction of Mrs. Oliver Johnson.

It was announced that scholarships had been awarded for the coming year to the Misses Gladys Kammerer, Emily Carley, Esta Fleming, Berenice Clutz, Anne Nills, Mary Ledgerwood, June Nason, Claire Weller, Eva Kearly, Florence Roe.

The new officers of the College Club are: Mrs. F. Ray Leimkuehler, president; Mrs. R. H. B. Thompson, first vice president; Miss Alves Long, second vice president; Mrs. Royden McCormack, recording secretary; Mrs. Chester Kostrean, corresponding secretary; Mrs. William Shahan, treasurer; directors, Mrs. Roy C. Coffey, Mrs. M. Donovan Curran, Mrs. John B. Edwards, Miss Mildred James, Mrs. Walter Kirchner, Mrs. Franklin Miller, Miss E. Louise Stone, Mrs. W. Ridgely Young. Each director becomes, automatically, chairman of a committee. Other chairmen of committees were announced by the new president.

The commencement exercises of the educational department of the Young Women's Christian Association will be held Friday evening at 8 p. m. at 1411 Locust street. Certificates and diplomas will be given to 50 students in commercial work, practical nursing, dressmaking and domestic science. Mrs. W. B. Stephenson, chairman of the educational department, will preside. Dr. William B. Lampe of West Presbyterian Church will offer the invocation, and Mrs. J. J. Fisher, president of the board of the Y. W. C. A., will give the congratulatory greeting to the girls. Certificates and diplomas will be awarded by Miss Alice Barwise, director of the educational department. Music and expression students will give a short program. There will be an informal reception following exercises in honor of Dr. McClelland.

past week speakers were sent to the mothers' clubs and other women's organizations as part of the educational campaign. The following have been elected as officers for 1926 and 1927—President, Mrs. Adolph Neuville; first vice president, Mrs. J. E. Allen; recording secretary, Mrs. J. J. Jamison; treasurer, Mrs. J. A. Addison; auditor, Mrs. L. F. Wilcox. They will be installed at the regular monthly meeting in June.

The General Society of the War of 1812 has granted a charter for the formation of a society of the descendants of this war who live in Missouri. The charter membership list is being completed by George Gordon Collins, a member of the Maryland Society, who lives in St. Louis. The first meeting of the charter members will be held June 14. The charter membership list of the Missouri society is limited to those who are not only descendants of 1812 veterans, but are also descendants of revolutionary war veterans. Many of those who are already on the charter list are also members of the Society of Colonial Wars and two are Mayflower descendants.

Thirty-five members of the Friday Club motored to Kimmswick, Mo., May 7, for an all day meeting and luncheon with Mrs. Alfred E. Murphy, a member of the club. Three papers were presented, "American Artists," by Miss Hazel Howe, "American Sculptors," by Mrs. Lillie Wilcox, and "American Musicians," by Mrs. Maud C. Younglove. Two piano numbers were given by Mrs. Younglove. Greetings from the Women's Clubs of Pittsburg, Pa., were presented by Mrs. D. W. Haydock, a former president of the Friday Club, now living in Pittsburg.

Mrs. F. H. Littlefield, president of the Eighth District, was unanimously indorsed as a candidate for the State presidency of the General Federation of Women's Clubs.

The next meeting of the club will be held May 21, at "Red Gables," the home of Mrs. Joseph W. Jamison in Overland Park, St. Louis County. Mrs. Howard O. McCord will be assistant hostess.

The St. Louis Fine Arts Club met at the Artists' Guild May 7 and ended for the season its series of illustrated lectures on the fine arts with a program on "The Science of Dancing" by Miss Anne Fleming Bates. The program was as follows: Scarf Dance, Miss Mary Louise Thomas; A Sprite, Mary Lou Leinberger; A Study, Lucille Guhue; Devotional Dance, Irene Erickson; A Greek Hermes, Jeanne Elizabeth Scheller; A Waltz, Jack Parhm. The hostesses were Mrs. Donald MacDonald, president; Mrs. Charles H. Hoyle and Misses Martha Carter, Frances Thompson and Jessie Drescher.

The Woman's Missionary Society of the West Presbyterian Church will give a birthday party of the month, Tuesday, in the garden of Mrs. L. William Gerling's home, 3 St. Andrews Lane, St. Louis County. Birthday gifts for the benefit of the pledge for the furnishing fund of the new Y. M. C. A. building will be received at various booths representing the months of the year, each one depicting the spirit of the season.

The hostesses for the different booths and the subjects of their displays: January, Mrs. John T. Garrett, New Years day; February, Mrs. George H. Owen, Washington's birthday; March, Mrs. Harry Montgomery, St. Patrick's day; April, Mrs. Godfrey Anderson, April Fool and the Wishing Bar-

Reliable Glasses at Reasonable Prices

DR. F. J. GUILBAULT

For 25 years I have specialized exclusively in the relief and prevention of eyestrain headaches and other annoying conditions of defective vision solely by means of properly made Glasses.
No client has ever received any Glasses from me except after a thorough and scientific eye test had revealed the exact nature of his or her particular eye defect.
While the prices of Glasses cannot be standardized, owing to differences in prescriptions for lenses, nevertheless my prices have always been uniformly moderate and the lowest at which reliable and dependable Glasses are obtainable.
I have not sold, nor will I sell Glasses for $1, $2 or $3 as such prices, my experience has taught me, are indicative of a low standard in both quality of materials and professional skill alike.

I will sell you a thoroughly reliable pair of Glasses—complete—for distance or reading for $3.75

I will sell you a thoroughly reliable pair of Bifocal Lenses and Frame for $5.00

I know women who spend on beauty $2,000 per year. But I can tell them how to gain far more at a very modest price.

I have spent fortunes in my quest for beauty. I have consulted many great scientists, famous beauties, and made 34 trips to France. Thus I have gathered what I believe to be the greatest beauty helps in existance. They have brought me glory and perennial youth.

Now those same helps are at every woman's call. All drug and toilet counters supply Edna Wallace Hopper's beauty aids. At a little price you can get the best helps I have found in 40 years of world-search.

Let me send you a sample of one of them—my Youth Cream. That supplies many helps in one. It combines necessaries of both lemon and strawberry, plus all the best that science knows to foster, feed and preserve the skin. I want you

Trumpets, Not Hammers!

LOYALTY is neither demanded nor requested of us.

It springs full-blown from a heart full of admiration, appreciation and a desire to help, and it applies equally well to cities, business and individuals.

St. Louis has natural advantages few Cities in America are favored with, but whether or not they are being taken full advantage of is a matter of opinion.

Lack of civic pride and initiative naturally retard progress.

Don't Knock; Boost, You'll Be the Gainer!

AIR CIRCUS THIS AFTERNOON

An air circus and aeronautic exhibition at 3 o'clock this afternoon will mark the official beginning of Air Mail Week, which has been proclaimed by Mayor Miller to extend to next Saturday.

The air circus will be conducted at Bridgeton, the location of the St. Louis Flying Field, under auspices of the Robertson Aircraft Corporation, which is now carrying mail by air between St. Louis and Chicago. There will be no charge for admission to the field this afternoon and visitors will be shown the planes in the air mail service and will see stunt flying.

Yes, stop it. You know by your own experience it is only a makeshift, a false prop against a collapsing wall, and that it is undermining your health, because it tends to retard the circulation of the blood. Why, then, continue to wear it? Here is a better way, which you can now prove for yourself, free of charge.

STUART'S PLAPAO-PADS are entirely different—being medicine applicators made self-adhesive purposely to prevent slipping and to hold the distended muscles securely in place. No straps, buckles or springs attached. No "digging in" or grinding pressure. Soft as Velvet—Flexible—Easy to Apply—Inexpensive. Continuous day and night treatment. Not merely mechanical support. No delay from work. Hundreds of people, old and young, have gone before officers qualified to acknowledge oaths, and swore that the PLAPAO-PADS cured their Ruptures—some of them most aggravated cases—and of long standing.

Webster Groves

Social Activities of the Week and Items of Personal Interest.

Mrs. Earle P. Chittenden entertained with a tea in honor of her mother, Mrs. John Clarke, of Jefferson City, who is her guest. Mrs. Chittenden was assisted in receiving by Mrs. Lon V. Stephens, Mrs. Herbert S. Hadley, Mrs. Louis Hall, Mrs. C. P. Hutchinson, Mrs. James C. Morfit, Mrs. Walter Warren, Mrs. M. B. Lake, Mrs. David M. Skilling, Mrs. S. E. Norwine, Mrs. Walter Bowe, Mrs. C. B. Arnhrieter, Mrs. A. W. Kendrick, Mrs. Jesse Barrett, Mrs. Brent Murphy and Mrs. Theodore Roehm of Aurora, Ill. Miss Lucy Kendrick, Miss Faye Salisbury, Miss Gertrude Fisher and Miss Louise Jackson served in the dining room. Miss Virginia Skilling and Miss Margaret Milne served at the punch table.

Mr. and Mrs. Lawson Watts of 433 California avenue were weekend visitors at Louisville, Ky., where they attended the Derby.

Mrs. Charles R. Manter of 151 Helfenstein place entertained a large number of guests Tuesday afternoon with a bridge luncheon. Wednesday evening she gave a bridge to 10 tables of guests.

A building fund campaign for the Old Folks' Home of St. Louis County will be begun Tuesday, May 25. A tract of land at Woodbine and Rose Hill avenues was acquired a short time ago, and it is planned to raise a sufficient amount to build a much larger home on this ground. Mrs. George Alter of Kirkwood is president of the Board of Managers of the Old Folks' Home.

Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Downey, with their daughter and son, have returned from Miami, Fla., where they spent the last five months.

Mrs. L. W. Lacy of 40 Glen road entertained Friday afternoon with a tea in honor of her daughter, Mrs. Ronald Fouke of Philadelphia and Mrs. Theodore Rehm of Aurora, Ill., who is the guest of Mrs. Perley Hutchinson.

Mrs. David M. Flournoy entertained Wednesday afternoon with a two-table bridge luncheon for Mrs. Ronald Fouke. The guests were former classmates of Mrs. Fouke's.

Mrs. J. W. Payne of Northrop, Va., who has been the guest of Mrs. F. E. Ellis of Elm place for the last fortnight, leaves today for her home.

May day will be observed at Eden Theological Seminary, East Lockwood avenue, at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon, and will conclude with a twilight song service at 8:45 o'clock and a drama presented by the students commemorating the 400th anniversary of the first printing of the English Bible. The title of the play is "Wm. Tyndale." The services are public.

Mrs. C. L. Weber of 1041 Tuxedo boulevard, with her daughter, Mrs. W. M. McConnell, and her son, will leave next Wednesday on a visit to Los Angeles, Cal.

The Women's Republican Club of St. Louis County will hold its next meeting Firday, May 28, at Masonic Temple, Webster Groves. Former Mayor Kiel of St. Louis will deliver the principal address. Senator Richard Ralph and Fred E. Mueller, Prosecuting Attorney of St. Louis County, also will speak.

A silver tea is to be given Thursday at the home of Mrs. T. H. Heath, 251 S. Old Orchard avenue, for the benefit of the Webster Groves Baptist Church.

Rev. H. L. Reader, with his daughter, Helen, has returned from a ten days' visit to relatives in Memphis, Tenn.

Mrs. C. H. English, with her two small children, have returned from a short visit with relatives at Cincinnati.

Mrs. V. M. Lacy of Gray avenue entertained with a six-table bridge party May 8 in honor of Mr. Lacy's birthday.

Mrs. W. P. Johnson of 123 Selma avenue entertained Friday afternoon with a tea in honor of her niece, Miss Miriam Ganoway, whose engagement to Frederick L. Wilde has just been announced.

Mrs. Edward Townsley of Pasadena, Cal., has returned home after four weeks in Webster Groves and St. Louis, where she was the guest of friends.

The school children of Webster Groves are taking an active interest in the collection of clothing and canned goods to be sent to orphans and refugees of Armenia, Syria and Greece. Next Wednesday will be spent in getting together all that is possible to be sent in the car for the Near East Relief Organization. The schools participating in this benefit are the Holy Redeemer, Lockwood, Bristol, Avery and Mark Twain.

The ladies of the Christian Church of Webster Groves will give a manufacturers' dinner at the church Tuesday, May 25.

The season's last meeting of the Parent-Teachers' Association of the High School will be held tomorrow evening.

Miss Mildred Allen, who has been a teacher in the Webster Groves schools for a number of years, has just received the appointment as Dean of the High School Girls in recognition of her services.

STATE HOSPITAL ASSOCIATION TO MEET HERE TOMORROW

About 75 Delegates Expected at Fifth Annual Meeting at Hotel Chase.

The Missouri State Hospital Association will hold its fifth annual meeting at Hotel Chase tomorrow. Approximately 75 delegates representing all of the leading hospitals in the State are expected to attend.

Dr. J. W. Shankland, Hospital Commissioner of St. Louis, will welcome the delegates and a response will be made by Dr. B. A. Wilkes, president of the Hospital Association. The delegates will be guests at luncheon at the new Jewish Hospital, which will be followed by an inspection. This will be followed by a tour of the hospitals of the city.

The annual dinner will be held at 6 p. m. at which Dr. R. Emmet Kane, president of the St. Louis Hospital Association will be the principal speaker. Dr. E. P. Hayworth, superintendent of the Willows Sanatorium of Kansas City, will lead the round table discussion.

German Birth Rate Declining.
By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, May 15.—Jobless physicians and midwives are now on the lists of those receiving public doles in numerous villages of the Rhineland. A decline in the birth rate is attributed as the cause. In Untermassfeld, the town's sole midwife reported that she had not been able to make a living and registered herself as unemployed.

WILD BULL'S ESCAPE ENDS IN BARBECUE

Policemen Shoot Animal in Webster Groves, and Legion Post Buys Carcass.

Friday's wild bull of the suburbs, in St. Louis County, turned into the wherewithal for Saturday night's barbecue at Webster Groves.

He was no ordinary bull, to meet so ignoble a fate. No lord of the rural pastures, he, nor snorting, pawing delight of the toreador. His ancestry was of an ancient strain, coming from India. To distinguish him there was the hump of Indian cattle on his back.

A wealthy packer had kept him in a pen at Olive street road and Spring avenue. On Friday he broke out and a pursuit by his owner's employes was fruitless. He got to Webster Groves by yesterday morning, possessed of an urge to start a rumpus.

Instead of tackling a motor truck or a red brick wall, he spied Mrs. Josephine Lyons, 80 years old, in a back yard at 918 Bompart avenue. She got into a garage just in time to avoid his lunges. Then he ran to the corner of Bompart and Marshall avenues, where Norbert and Melba Jurgensmeyer of 358 Marshall avenue were riding in a child's toy express wagon. He ducked his head and made for them, but jumped over them, toppling the wagon without hurting the children.

By that time Patrolmen Piper, Smith and Niel were there. Instead of the glittering paraphernalia and light swords of the bull ring they had brass buttons, sawed-off shotguns and revolvers. Piper got in the bull's way and the animal charged toward him. At a distance of several yards Piper fired six loads of buckshot at the bull's head, which stunned him. The bull lumbered into a yard at 908 Bompart, where the policemen surrounded him. Twelve revolver shots in his head and one in the heart dispatched him.

The still form was promptly purchased by the Webster Groves American Legion post, which was conducting a carnival on the K. of C. grounds, and genuine East Indian barbecue was the order of the occasion last evening.

$10,000 IN AMITY FARM FUND

Association Seeking to Procure Total of $40,000.

More than $10,000 has been subscribed to the $40,000 fund which the Amity Association of St. Louis hopes to raise for its old men's farm and for its city work among the aged and homeless.

Because 16 of the old men themselves are supplying the labor necessary to fit for farming a portion of the 280 acres, situated two miles off the State Highway between St. Louis and Kansas City, between Foristel and Wright City, and because plans for the farm buildings have been submitted gatis by a St. Louis architect, the Amity Association expects to spend only $40,000 on the farm itself.

BIDS FOR MORE STATE HIGHWAY WORK ASKED FOR

Bids will be received by the State Highway Department May 26 for considerable road construction of interest to the St. Louis district and Southeastern Missouri.

Included in the work planned is the grading of about five miles of route No. 21 east from De Soto toward Festus, including four bridges, one with a span of 140 feet.

A mile and a quarter of concrete is to be laid on No. 32, between Elvins and Flat River. This work will include a special culvert and a bridge with 60-foot steel span.

Considerable work is to be done on No. 25. Nearly six miles of nine-foot concrete and seven-foot gravel will be laid on No. 25 between Delta and the Staddard County line. Nearly five miles of nine-foot concrete and seven-foot gravel will be laid on No. 25 north from Malden and about three and three-quarter miles of the same kind of road south from Malden.

Nearly four miles of grading is to be done on No. 34, west from Leeper, in Wayne County. No. 34 is the road from Jackson through Marble Hill, Piedmont and Leeper to a connection with No. 16, the cross-State route from the Cairo ferry to Springfield.

In addition, bids will be received for laying seven and three-fourths miles of 18-foot gravel road west from Ava, in Douglas County.

BIDS FOR MORE STATE HIGHWAY WORK ASKED FOR

Bids will be received by the State Highway Department May 26 for considerable road construction of interest to the St. Louis district and Southeastern Missouri.

Included in the work planned is the grading of about five miles of route No. 21 east from De Soto toward Festus, including four bridges, one with a span of 140 feet.

A mile and a quarter of concrete is to be laid on No. 32, between Elvins and Flat River. This work will include a special culvert and a bridge with 60-foot steel span.

Considerable work is to be done on No. 25. Nearly six miles of nine-foot concrete and seven-foot gravel will be laid on No. 25 between Delta and the Stoddard County line. Nearly five miles of nine-foot concrete and seven-foot gravel will be laid on No. 25 north from Malden and about three and three-quarter miles of the same kind of road south from Malden.

Nearly four miles of grading is to be done on No. 34, west from Leeper, in Wayne County. No. 34 is the road from Jackson through Marble Hill, Piedmont and Leeper to a connection with No. 16, the cross-State route from the Cairo ferry to Springfield.

In addition, bids will be received for laying seven and three-fourths miles of 18-foot gravel road west from Ava, in Douglas County.

Motor Tour of Great Scenic and Historic Interest

NO part of this country offers more of scenic and historic interest for a motor tour than the Shenandoah Valley of Virginia and the mountain ranges that hem it in. It is easily reached from St. Louis over the National Old Trails route via Indianapolis, Ind., Dayton, O., Wheeling, W. Va., Uniontown, Pa., and either Hagerstown or Frederick, Md. The highways are paved all the way to Winchester, Va., where the valley begins, and are hard surfaced virtually all the way from Winchester to Bristol, Tenn., whence there are excellent connections over a good road through Johnston City to Asheville and the mountains of the Carolinas.

Very Beautiful Scenery.

The scenery of the valley is very beautiful. One should approach it from Frederick so as to view the mighty gateway of Harper's Ferry, where the Potomac River, breaking through the Blue Ridge, joins the Shenandoah, and the road, dropping to the river level, climbs and climbs again, until from the top of the towering cliff it looks down upon the confluence of the two rivers.

The Valley Pike proper begins at Winchester and winds delightfully along the broad and fertile slopes of the valley. The serrated line of the Alleghanies, blue against the sky on the west, the Blue Ridge escarpment on the east, while about half-way down the valley the singular, short range called the Massanutten rises abruptly and parallel to the other ranges, its rugged masses and sharp precipices contrasting with the quiet sky line of the Blue Ridge.

Many clear springs and swift-running brooks and streams, hurrying to join the river, do their part for that fertility which has given the valley its so thrilling and tragical place in history.

Harper's Ferry is commonly associated with memories of John Brown. A monument marking the site of the old John Brown Fort, near the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad station, may be seen from the highway entering the valley.

It was in Charlestown, in the valley, that John Brown was tried, sentenced and hanged. The courthouse in which his trial took place is still standing, on Main street. Near this town is a cave where, it is said, George Washington and other prominent men, held Masonic meeting.

Berryville, notable for the number of beautiful residences, dating back to the beginning of the nineteenth century and close of the eighteenth. Second from the corner where the Harper's Ferry road turns at a right angle into the Winchester Pike, stands an interesting old stone house, built in 1810, which was used by Gen. Sheridan as a hospital during the Civil War. "Audley," the home of the Custis family and the scene of the marriage of Nellie Custis, favorite niece of George Washington, is a short distance outside of Berryville.

Winchester is the second oldest city in Virginia. It was here that George Washington, after Braddock's defeat, built Fort Loudoun and established his headquarters during the French and Indian War. The house which he occupied is still standing at the corner of Cork and Braddock streets. Gen. Daniel Morgan of Revolutionary fame is buried here.

Civil War Fort.

Just north of Winchester the tourist will see, on a high knoll among a clump of trees to the west, the remains of the old Star Fort, one of several fortifications near by that figured in many of the fiercest engagements of the Civil War.

At Strasburg begin the Massanutten Mountains, which, rising abruptly and extending parallel to the Blue Ridge as far south as Harrisonburg, divide the valley into two almost equal parts. Flowing through the two parts are the north Roads Followed Often Trace Trails Used by Spanish and French Settlers.

One who motors out from St. Louis in the direction of the Missouri River may do so along roads that were laid out in the days when Spanish Lieutenant-Governers still ruled in Upper Louisiana and French settlements on both sides of the mid-Mississippi still went by the name of the "Country of the Illinois." Gen. Victor Collot, emissary of the First French republic, who in 1796 came as a visitor to St. Louis, where he gave Spanish officials a case of nerves by stirring up a fever of Jacobin enthusiasm among the habitats of the staid old village, wrote up his travels, in the published edition of which appeared a map of the "Illinois Country."

Thereon St. Louisans of today may see tracings of not a few of the highways of travel that put him in ready touch with the delights of the pleasure-ground which lies at the door of the metropolis and which he knows as St. Louis County. On Collot's map the motorist may trace a winding road which connects such present-known places as Spanish Lake, Fort Bellefontaine and Florissant. This road, while no longer existing, was, in part, followed out in the surveying of the roads which now connect these villages. Thus, today, over the same country where once oxen teams were flayed over mud-rutted roads, the motorist may speed across highways of concrete, macadam and gravel.

The third of the series of touring stories which are being especially prepared for the Joint Touring Bureau of the Post-Dispatch and the Automobile Club of Missouri is over a route 39.5 miles in length by the speedometer of the official scout car of the club. It is through the county, north of St. Louis. This is a picturesque country teeming with historical events, and still smacking of that Franco-Spanish atmosphere which, years ago, hung over this area.

Visit Chain of Rocks.

St. Louis is left by way of Broadway, thence onto Riverview drive to Chain of Rocks. Riverview drive is in excellent condition due to the recent efforts of the City Street Department.

Chain of Rocks, on the Mississippi River, is the site of the waterworks system of the City of St. Louis, and is, incidentally, the largest of the kind in the United States. The buildings of this great plant, hard by the river, are surmounted by a park of trees, rising above a blanket of grass. A winding, undulating roadway meanders through every section of the park, from the level of the river bank to several hundred feet above the water. From the topmost points in the park one may view the country for miles around in Missouri and Illinois. In the park is ample provision for holding picnics. An hour can be spent profitably wandering through the waterworks.

Those intent upon taking the entire trip leave Chain of Rocks over the continuation of Riverview drive, passing the Riverview Country Club grounds to the right, and enter Larimore road. This road, as is the case with all other roads on the trip, is in first-class condition, having recently been resurfaced.

At 16.4 miles, Larimore road is intersected by Bellefontaine road. Two miles northward, one arrives at Spanish Lake. From this point one may continue north to old Fort Bellefontaine. The trip to Bellefontaine is not included in the long accompanying this article, but the making of the short trip is advisable and worth while.

An Old Spanish Fort.

Bellefontaine was the site of a fort when Spain controlled the Upper Louisiana territory, later becoming a Federal military post when the United States took possession of Missouri in 1804. Here, too, one can visit Bellefontaine Farms, a city-controlled institution for the correction of erring youth.

Returning to Spanish Lake, the motorist drives to Black Jack over Parker road, a macadam stretch in very good condition. Entering Black Jack, one should note Salem Lutheran Church on the left, one of the largest edifices of the kind in the county.

Florissant is the next point of interest. But for the ever-present motor car, one, looking at the quaint old structures, the century-old parish buildings of St. Ferdinand Church, might feel as if he had suddenly been thrust back through a century. The little village, history relates, was first settled by French settlers in 1763, during the Spanish regime. The Spanish influence, however, at no time was strong enough to stifle the French characteristics of the settlers.

Inspection of St. Ferdinand Parish buildings is of especial interest. The first of these was erected in 1818, the second in 1819 and the third, the church, in 1820. The first is the parish residence; the one erected in 1819 is the habitat of the Sisters of Loretto, formerly having domiciled the Sisters of the Sacred Heart. It is in these buildings that one senses the French influence. The architecture is that of the French eighteenth century.

Here many skirmishes were fought with the Shawnee Indians, who proved a real menace in the early days and massacred numbers of settlers over a period of years. The danger from Indians continued until well into the nineteenth century. It is likewise of interest that the first Indian school in the United States, St. Regis Seminary, was opened at Florissant, in May, 1824.

Country Day School.

After an hour or so at Florissant, one can leave the little village over Graham road and Brown road, passing St. Louis Country Day School on the left, and into Natural Bridge road, thence through Carsonville and over the Carson road to St. Charles road and back into St. Louis.

The log of the trip, as charted by George E. Drummond, head of the touring department, Automobile Club of Missouri, and R. H. Hall, of the club's press bureau, follows:

NEW ANTI-KNOCK COMPOUND

Increased mileage, elimination of knocking and other improvements in the running of automobiles are reported to follow use of a new compound for admixture with gasoline called "No-Mo-Nox." This product is made and distributed by the Frier-Sturges Co., 3321 Washington boulevard. It is said to remove carbon, to lessen crankcase dilution, and increase power. It also is said to have a very marked effect in decreasing the poisonous effects of automobile exhaust gases.

OIL FILM MOST IMPORTANT IN LUBRICATION OF ENGINE

Motor oils are exposed continuously to very high temperatures in an internal combustion engine. Especially is this true within the explosion chambers, upon the upper surfaces of the cylinder walls and upon the lower surfaces of the piston heads.

In action, motor oil is no longer the cool and clear liquid that is poured into a crankcase. Instead, only a thin film of that oil covers the vital parts of a motor and comes between the whirling metal surfaces. As long as that film remains unbroken the motor is protected. But the instant the film breaks the motor is the helpless prey of heat and friction.

Because the whole problem of correct lubrication lies in correct oil films, Tide Water Oil Co. technologists spent years in studying not oils alone but oil-films. They made hundreds and hundreds of laboratory experiments and road tests before they perfected Veedol.

OLDSMOBILE sets a new record

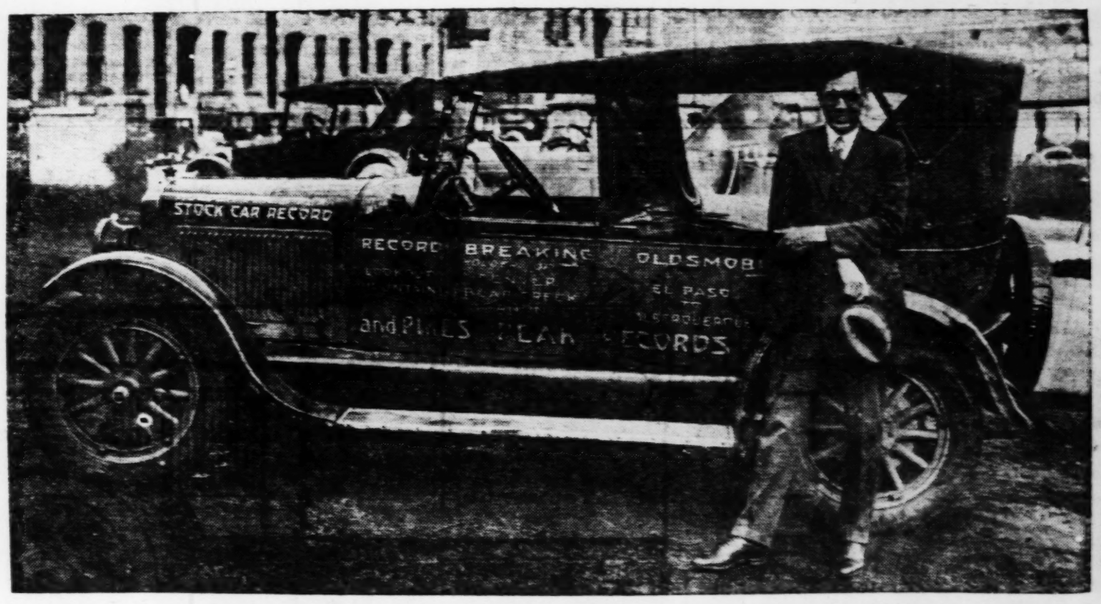
St. Louis to Denver

1024 Miles in 25 Hours and 51 Minutes

Average 40 Miles per Hour

With this remarkable time that the Oldsmobile made from St. Louis to Denver comes proof positive of the all-around performing ability of this wonderful car that has made phenomenal strides in popularity in the last ten months.

This cross-country run completes every conceivable test that a motor is subjected —these records speak for the car.



Mr. Clymer and his standard stock Oldsmobile on the De Luxe Automobile Co. service lot previous to his start. Mr. and Mrs. Clymer drove continuously from 5 p. m. Tuesday until 5:51 p. m. Wednesday. Making the 1024 miles in 25 hours and 51 minutes, averaging 40 miles per hour.

First it was the circle trip—from Denver, up Lookout mountain, through the mountains and down Bear Creek canon. A most spectacular trip consisting of 412 turns, sharp turns, hairpins and switchback, steep grades and winding descents. A 57-mile course in 1 hour 16 minutes and 9 seconds. Made nearly a year ago and still stands.

Then it was on Pikes Peak that this same car and driver made the fastest ascent ever made by any stock car; from 9150 feet elevation to 14,109 feet in 12½ miles, in 28 minutes and 49 seconds. This record has stood since last September.

Then from Chicago to Detroit, 301 miles in 5 hours and 58 minutes.

Now, from St. Louis to Denver, 1024 miles, in 25 hours and 51 minutes. A continuous run from 5 p. m. Tuesday, May 4th, to 5:51 p. m. Wednesday, May 5th, allowing for the change in time, makes a most astounding record for Oldsmobile and goes to prove the world's greatest value in motordom is now being offered in Oldsmobile.

When value is offered, the public responds.

Brockman Predicts Time When Used Cars Will Not Be Traded in on New Ones.

Philip H. Brockman, former head of the Police Board and president of the De Luxe Automobile Co., spoke before the Traffic Club at the Chamber of Commerce Monday noon. He told of the enormous proportions to which the automobile industry has grown, and then discussed the problems of car maintenance and trade-ins of used cars, emphasizing the fact that the net profit of an automobile dealer is far smaller than in other lines of business.

Brockman said he believed the demonstrating of automobiles would be done away with and that dealers would be forced to cease accepting used cars as down payments on new automobiles.

He predicted elimination of many automobile manufacturers within the next two years, saying that there are too many makes on the market.

He also predicted the introduction in the next few years of cars much smaller than those now in use, especially for collectors, salesmen and others, declaring that they would be necessitated by increasing street congestion.

Olds Six Sets St. Louis-Denver Record

Floyd Clymer Makes Run of 1024 Miles in 25 Hours, 51 Minutes in Same Stock Car That Made Pike's Peak and Chicago-Detroit Record.

The automobile speed record from St. Louis to Denver is now claimed by Floyd Clymer of Denver, who drove the distance in an Olds six last week in 25 hours and 51 minutes, elapsed time. Clymer was checked out of St. Louis by Western Union at 5:51 p. m., Tuesday, and was checked in by the telegraph company at Denver. His speedometer registered 1024 miles on the run, so his speed averaged 39.5 miles per hour.

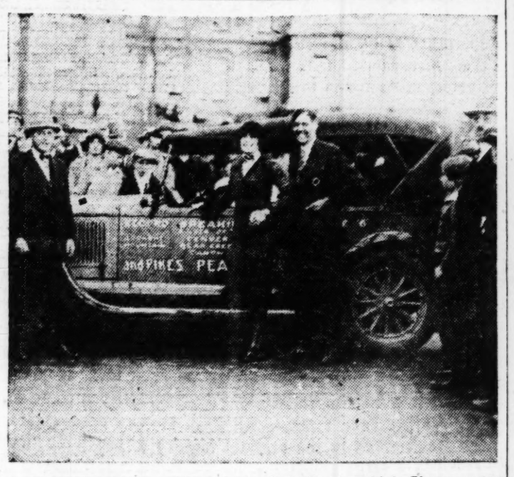
Clymer drove the 640 miles between St. Louis and Ellis, Kan., in exactly 16 hours, averaging 40 miles an hour on this part of the run.

Clymer, who has a number of inventions to his credit, including the Clymer spotlight, at one time was a champion motor cyclist. He was accompanied on the St. Louis-Denver run by his wife.

Uses Pike's Peak Record Car.

He used the same stock Olds six with which he established the stock car record for climbing Pike's Peak and Lookout Mountain, and drove from the Loop in Chicago to the center of Detroit in 5 hours 55 minutes. The car had gone 15,000 miles before he left St. Louis for Denver.

Clymer and his wife were guests in St. Louis of the De Luxe Automobile Co., Olds distributer, of which Philip H. Brockman is president. He made his plans for the record run with George H. Willett, general manager of the De Luxe company, arranging ahead for stops for gasoline, oil and food and for checking in at certain places on his route.



Floyd Clymer, his wife and the Olds Six in which Clymer set a record for the 1024-mile drive from St. Louis to Kansas City.

He drove over Missouri highway No. 2 via St. Charles, Fulton and Columbia to Kansas City. From Kansas City west he followed the Union Pacific highway.

Depends on High Average Speed.

He made no attempt to break any record between any of the cities en route, laying out a schedule that he figured would take him from St. Louis to Denver in 26 hours and adhering to it closely, as is evidenced by the fact that he drove the 1024 miles in 9 minutes less than his schedule. He drove across Missouri in 5 hours and a half.

Outside his schedule stops for gasoline, oil and food, he was obliged to halt only once—just east of the Colorado-Kansas line because of a tire puncture. He reported on arrival at Denver that the Olds behaved perfectly throughout the run. He was hindered somewhat west of Ellis, Kan., when he twice ran into dust storms which made driving difficult.

Clymer's speed driving dates back to 1916, he said when preparing in St. Louis for his run to Denver. In that year he rode a motorcycle to a record of 84 miles in an hour, and established a motorcycle record of 100 miles in 71 minutes which, he said, stood for four years, or until 1920. He holds the record for driving an automobile between Denver and Kansas City, having made this run in 16 hours.

Famous Natural Bridge.

About 14 miles south of Lexington, on the route to Roanoke and Bristol, is the famous Natural Bridge of Virginia, which overlooks the James River Valley, and is on the western slope of the Blue Ridge Mountains and near the center of Virginia. It ranks among the wonders of the world. It approaches Niagara in grandeur, and exceeds it in height.

The climate and scenery of the Roanoke Valley are among Roanoke's attractions. The undulating purple contours of the Blue Ridge and Allegheny Mountains mark its skylines in all directions, while Roanoke lies in a rolling hill country between, with the river curving around it, followed by a splendid macadam highway known as Riverside drive. Mill Mountain, rising steeply above the city to an altitude of 1800 feet, is accessible by an incline railway and a concrete road.

From Roanoke one can motor via Bristol to Asheville and its mountain country, which has a number of the highest peaks east of the Mississippi River, and can return home by way of Cumberland Gap, Lexington and Louisville, Ky. Or he can back track to Staunton and swing east over the mountains to Richmond and back by way of Washington and the National Old Trails, or continue north into New York and New England. It is around 1150 miles from St. Louis to Roanoke.

AIRCOOLED ENGINES IN PLANE THAT FLEW OVER NORTH POLE

The engines of the Fokker airplane in which Lieut. Commander Byrd and Petty Officer Bennett flew over the North Pole last week are air-cooled. This fact was emphasized yesterday by A. E. Spielberg, president of the Franklin Motor Car Co. of St. Louis, who recalled that the huge Barling bomber of the U. S. Army also has air-cooled engines. Air-cooled, too, were the engines of the plane which an English aviator recently flew over Africa through the intense heat waves rising from the Sahara Desert. The trend toward air cooling of airplane engines, said Spielberg, proves the efficiency of the type of motor which has been used in the Franklin automobile ever since it was first made.

INCREASE IN SALES OF WILLYS-KNIGHT GREAT SIX

The national sales report for Willys-Overland Inc., covering the month just past shows an increase of 71 per cent in the retail deliveries of the Great Six Willys-Knight Sedan over last year.

This percentage takes on an increased meaning when it is known that the sales of this car in its first year were third among all cars in the high price group in this country.

The great six sedan marked the first real presentation to the motor car buying public of a Willys-Knight equipped with a six-cylinder motor.

PONTIAC RUNS 14,536 MILES IN 30 DAYS ON TREADMILL

A total of 14,536.3 miles was registered on the speedometer of a Pontiac car which was run continuously under its own power for 30 days on a treadmill in the General Motors Building in Detroit. At the conclusion of the 30 days the car was started on another similar period of operation on the treadmill.

Carry Coals to Newcastle

REGISTRATIONS for April and the first four months of 1926 in Detroit and Wayne County, Michigan, proclaim a sales record for Buick that is unparalleled in motor car history.

Buick, although NOT BUILT IN DETROIT, has "carried coals to Newcastle"—not only outselling ALL COMPETITORS in their own home town, but all cars built anywhere else, the two low-priced fours excepted.

No Misleading Percentages

This record is based on actual deliveries—just the number of cars that people there purchased and registered with the Secretary of State.

Nowhere in the world is competition so keen, and the public so thoroughly posted on automobile values as in Detroit. Such emphatic approval of the Motor Dollar Value represented in The Better Buick is, therefore, doubly convincing when coming from the automobile manufacturing center of America.

Look at the Totals! Registrations of ALL MAKES in the first four months of 1926 showed an increase of 4,126 cars over the same period last year. . . . Of this number, BUICK GAINED 1,556—while 42 OTHER MAKES COMBINED gained 2,570.

And, mind you, this in the very city where many of these cars are made!

As in Detroit, so everywhere in America has come the conviction that a dollar invested in a Buick represents the highest value found in ANY motor car at ANY price! . . . Again, as always,

Star Six Shows High-Gear Climbing Power on Grades

Coach Model Easily Makes Seckman and Old State Road Hills From Standing Start in High.

By "SPENCE."

When a coach model of an automobile, carrying driver and passenger, can climb the big hill on the Old State road, and Frisco and Seckman hills on the Lemay Ferry road, in high gear, the feat is worth recording. When it climbs the Old State road hill and Seckman hill in high from a standing start in high at the bottom, the performance is out of the ordinary. When the same car on the same day swings in high gear out of the side road about a fifth of the way up Seckman hill and goes on over the top in high without once dropping below 17 miles an hour, the feat is extraordinary. The only time the writer has seen it done was last Saturday morning by a Star six. Judging by what that car showed Saturday on the worst grades around St. Louis, a Star six should be among the favorites in any hill-climbing contest anywhere any time.

E. W. Ferris, head of the Central Star Sales Co., who was driving the Star coach, went with the writer out the Manchester road and swung left into the Old State road. Dropping down the hill, he turned around and drove the car back across the railroad tracks at its foot. With the nose of the car at the beginning of the upgrade, he stopped, leaving the gears in high. Then he started in high. The car picked up speed immediately without a tremor, accelerated steadily in spite of the steep grade and loose rock, and went over the top at 28 miles an hour.

Turning again, the car was driven through Glencoe, Eureka and House Springs to Antonia, on the Lemay Ferry road. At the bottom of a long, steep hill on the House Springs-Antonia road, Ferris was forced to slow the Star virtually to a stop because of a cross ditch. The speed dropped so low that the speedometer registered "0." But the Star hung on in high without a shudder or shake, picked up steadily and went over the top at 30 miles per hour.

The Star held 30 miles an hour up the long grade out of Antonia, the speed at no time rising or falling more than a mile an hour above or below the 30.

It was running 20 miles per hour at the bottom of Frisco hill, and held steadily at 18 to 20 all the way to the top.

At the bottom of Seckman hill, where the upgrade begins, Ferris stopped the Star, left the gears in high, then started again. The Star was running 20 miles an hour as it passed the store, and made the entire climb in high at 17 to 20 miles per hour. It was as effortless a climb of Seckman as the writer has seen.

Ferris then turned around, drove down the hill and turned left opposite the store into the road leading south. A quarter of a mile down this road he turned, stopped and started in high back toward the store. From the point where he turned, the grade is steadily up hill, and the curve at the store into the road up Seckman hill is sharp and on a stiff rise. Ferris held the Star to 20 miles per hour on the side road and was slowed to 15 as he rounded the curve. The car picked up to 17 miles an hour and held that speed to the top.

Incidentally, the Star six is powered with a Red Seal Continental engine with a bore of only 2¾ inches and stroke of 4¾ inches. The coach model that was used in Saturday's test is delivered at $950.

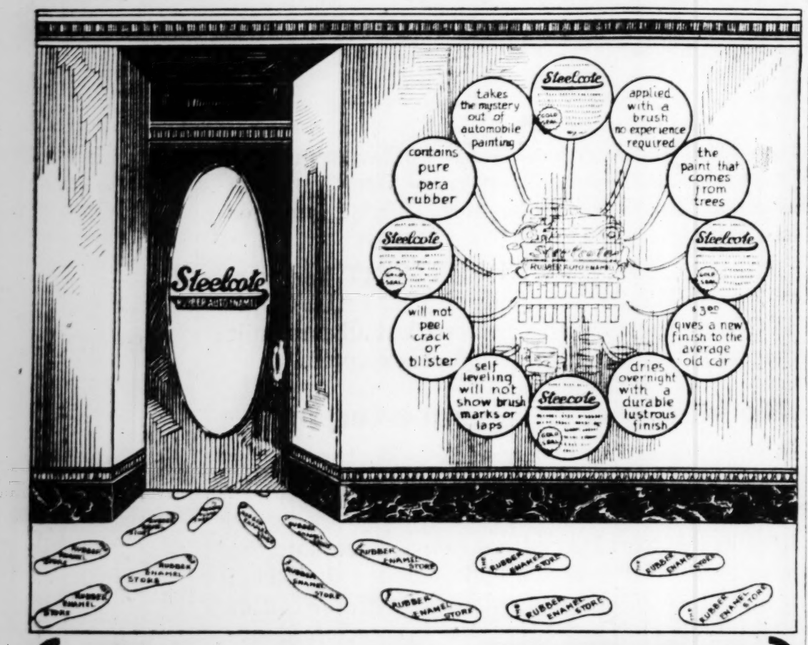
HUDSON-ESSEX OFFICIALS HERE

Advertising and Sales Promotion Managers Guests of Hudson-Frampton Co.

W. A. James, advertising manager of the Hudson Motor Car Co. of Detroit, and Harry G. Moock, promotion sales manager, were guests Saturday of the Hudson-Frampton Motor Car Co., Hudson-Essex distributer, at a luncheon meeting at the Coronado Hotel. R. C. Frampton, president of the Hudson-Frampton Co., presided at the luncheon, which was attended by A. S. Frampton, vice-president of the Hudson-Frampton Co.; J. N. Kallerman, sales manager; R. R. Andrews, assistant sales manager, department heads and salesmen of the firm and by 21 Hudson-Essex metropolitan dealers.

James emphasized the value of the written word, especially in daily newspapers, in promoting sales, and the Hudson-Essex factory's appreciation of the advertising strength of newspapers. The written word, as used in newspaper display advertising, he said, represented the highest type of salesmanship. He also outlined plans whereby Hudson-Sssex dealers could follow up newspaper advertising and increase their sales of cars.

Moock discussed merchandising and sales plans, and told how Hudson-Essex sales had been increasing all over the country. He referred especially to the increases sales in St. Louis and the county.



Steelcote RUBBER AUTO ENAMEL WEEK
MAY 17TH TO 22D

Look for the above window display—which will be shown by leading paint, hardware and accessory stores all this week.

REPAINT YOUR CAR
Do it yourself, easily, thoroughly and quickly with Steelcote Rubber Auto Enamel.

THE ONLY AUTO ENAMEL THAT CONTAINS REAL RUBBER

The beautiful luster is permanent. Even when exposed to all kinds of weather, snow and ice, or scorching sun, its finish never dulls. The surface never peels or cracks. The pure para rubber and imported gums blended into Steelcote make it elastic and enable it to withstand the constant vibration of a car. And it's economical—one quart covers a small or medium size car.

Milking a Rubber Tree
The pure para rubber used in Steelcote makes it elastic.

There is no excuse for driving a shabby car when it costs so little to transform it into a shining, new-looking automobile. Steelcote Rubber Auto Enamel is self-leveling and flows on smoothly, leaving no brush marks or streaks. One coat is sufficient. No finishing varnish is needed. Comes in sixteen attractive colors.

OUT-OF-TOWN DEALERS WRITE FOR PROPOSITION

Made by STEELCOTE MANUFACTURING CO. St. Louis, Mo.

HUDSON-ESSEX SALES AT RETAIL PEAK SAYS FRAMPTON

Retail sales of Hudson and Essex cars, both locally and nationally, are at the highest point in the history of these automobiles, it is declared by R. C. Frampton, head of the Hudson-Frampton Co., distributer. He based his statement on local sales of new cars and on official reports of total business from the Hudson Motor Car Co. In attaining its peak of sales locally, the Hudson-Frampton organization and associated dealers placed over 48 per cent more Hudson and Essex cars with buyers here in April than in April of 1925, which was itself a month of unusual activity, he said.

Hudson-Essex total sales throughout the world reported to Frampton from the Hudson plant were more than 35,000 cars, or around 20 per cent above the previous high record established in March.

CHRYSLER '60' BEING SHIPPED AT RATE OF 350 CARS A DAY

The Chrysler Corporation report for the first quarter shows a net profit before Federal taxes are paid of $4,112,089, an increase of $610,862.66 over the same period last year. Walter Chrysler stated that the new Chrysler "60," which went into production about two weeks ago, was being shipped at the rate of 350 cars a day. He said public response to this new model was so encouraging that many dealers had doubled their orders for it.

BRASHEAR JOINS GARDNER

Col. Dunwoody, vice president and general sales manager of the Gardner Motor Car Co., has appointed Rex Brashear as his personal assistant in maintaining relationship between the main office in St. Louis and the sectional sales managers throughout the United States. Brashear has been with the Moon Motor Car Co. for five years as chief of the parts and service departments, and lately as assistant sales manager.

OAKLAND SIX

—the One Car with HARMONIC BALANCER and 104 Improvements

$1295

Low prices of themselves mean little to motor car buyers. But low prices combined with 104 improvements mean value without parallel.

The Oakland Six—priced $1025 to $1295—is the one car with Fisher Body, Air Cleaner, Oil Filter, Full Pressure Oiling, Four-Wheel Brakes and the remarkable Harmonic Balancer, which imparts an unmatched freedom from vibration at all speeds.

This impressive combination of unequalled quality and rock-bottom prices explains why the Oakland Six is outselling the country over.

Pontiac Six, Companion to Oakland Six, $825 Coach or Coupe. All prices at factory. General Motors Time Payment Rates, heretofore the lowest, have been made still lower.

CHEVROLET PLANS 1,000,000 AUTOS YEARLY CAPACITY

St. Louis Chevrolet and Fisher Body Plants Included in $10,000,000 Expansion Program.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

DETROIT, Mich., May 15.—The largest expansion program in the history of the Chevrolet Motor Co., involving the expenditure of $10,000,000 and increasing the company's production facilities to a peak capacity of 1,000,000,000 cars a year, will be started June 1, according to an announcement just made by W. S. Knudsen, president and general manager of the Chevrolet Motor Co.

Building plans have been completed and machinery ordered, and by Jan. 1, 1927, the company will be fully prepared to build 1,000,000 Chevrolet cars in the ensuing year.

Under the new program, company employes, numbering 20,000 full-time operation, will be increased proportionately.

Closed body production facilities will be 750,000 annually, constituting 75 per cent of the production of Chevrolet cars.

Sixty per cent of the $10,000,000 will be spent in installing machinery and equipment of the most modern type. The remainder will be expended in erecting additions to various plants of the company in the United States.

With present equipment capable of producing 750,000 cars a year yet unable to meet the demand for Chevrolet cars, and with reports showing the factory production greatly oversold, the building program calls for additions to seven of the company's plants, located at Detroit, Flint, Bay City, Toledo, Cincinnati, Janesville, Wis., and St. Louis.

The additions will provide greatly increased facilities at the forge gear and axle plants at Detroit; to the motor plant at Flint; to the small parts plant at Bay City; to the transmission plant at Toledo and for expansion of the Fisher body plants adjoining Chevrolet plants at Cincinnati, Janesville and St. Louis, to meet the augmented demand for closed bodies.

The St. Louis Chevrolet plant occupies half of the huge General Motors plant at Union and Natural Bridge road, the other half being used by the Fisher Body Corp. to manufacture bodies for Chevrolet cars. The local Chevrolet plant has turned out as many as 800 cars in 12 hours and now is producing around 700 cars in a 10-hour working day. The local Fisher body plant has a peak capacity of around 400 cars a day, and now is turning out about 60 per cent of closed bodies and 40 per cent open. There is plenty of room on the site for building expansion.

AUBURN HAS 300 PER CENT INCREASE IN APRIL SHIPMENTS

Shipments by the Auburn Automobile Co. in April, according to word from E. L. Cord, president, to the Mound City Auto Co., were three times greater than shipments in April, 1925. This was in spite of the fact that production was delayed several times in the month, due to inability to get material in to the Auburn factory fast enough to keep the two production lines going.

"I predicted in January of 1926," said Cord, "that the Auburn company would ship as many cars in five months in 1926 as in the entire year of 1925. As the market value of the cars we shipped in the first four months of 1926 amounts to $7,549,000 as against $2,119,000 in the first four months of 1925, it looks as if my prediction would be borne out as we are still behind our orders and our retail sales throughout the country are keeping pace with our increased production."

3633 OAKLAND SPORT ROADSTERS MANUFACTURED

So successful has been the Oakland six sport roadster introduced early in January, that 15 per cent of Oakland production in the first four and one-half months of this year has been devoted to this style.

ANOTHER FAST RUN BY TRUCKS

Following the news last week that a Reo heavy-duty Speed Wagon, carrying a pay load of 4500 pounds of milling products, averaged 35 miles an hour on the 489-mile run from Los Angeles to Phoenix, Ariz., the Kardell Motor Car Co. has received word of an interesting weekly performance by another heavy-duty Reo Speed Wagon. This Speed Wagon was bought a while ago by Max Machnic of Sandoval, Ill., who uses it in his poultry business.

Mechanic reports picking up two tons of live poultry and one ton of crates in his Reo and making the run with this load from Sandoval to Detroit, a distance of 520 miles, in 22 hours. He reported also that the Reo's gasoline consumption averaged 16 miles to the gallon with that load, and expresed his astonishment because the gasoline mileage was the same on the return trip, which he made without a load.

Mahcnic is averaging a trip a week between Sandoval and Detroit with poultry. He is planning to use collapsible crates.

KNIGHT MOTOR CO. MOVES ITS NEW CAR HEADQUARTERS

The Knight Motor Co., Olds six dealer, has moved its new car showroom and service from 1512 Locust boulevard to 1651 South Grand boulevard. Its new quarters are near Lafayette avenue. The Locust boulevard place is being used by the firm for used cars and maintenance. A. A. Knight is president of the firm, and A. P. Wallace is manager.

Chrysler Quality and Value in a New Low-Priced Six

In this third great Chrysler Six, first presented only a week ago, are the same quality and value that have won such public acclaim in each of the other Chrysler Sixes.

Sixty miles, and more, per hour; unprecedented acceleration; gas economy of 22 miles per gallon; the striking beauty of Chrysler dynamic symmetry; astonishing riding ease and roadability; the safety of Chrysler four-wheel hydraulic brakes; oil-filter and air-cleaner; full pressure lubrication; seven-bearing crankshaft; road levelizers front and rear; roomy, luxurious bodies.

The lower price of the "60"—the lowest price at which a Chrysler Six has ever been sold—is merely a difference of size, of speed capacity, of special performance.

Changed in No Way—Except Lower Prices

With a production of over 800 cars per day, all of the best for which the name Chrysler stands is now offered you in the Chrysler "70" at sensationally new lower prices which make it the outstanding motor car value of all time.

In the accomplishment of these new lower prices there is absolutely no change in the performance, quality, comfort, style, equipment, design, materials or workmanship in body or chassis, which have won such universal preference and admiration among more than 110,000 owners.

Among these thousands and thousands of enthusiastic owners, the Chrysler "70" has an unrivalled record for durability, long life, performance and comfort.

At the new sensationally lower prices these features of supremacy are made even more outstanding—the results of inherent fineness of Chrysler quality of design, materials and craftsmanship.

You will find us eager to demonstrate to you the extraordinary Chrysler qualities which make the Chrysler "70" and the Chrysler "60" at these new low prices the most sensational values in all motor car history

How To Go.

Joint Touring Bureau: Kindly publish best all-weather route from St. Louis to Anthon, Woodbury County, Iowa, and from Anthon to Sioux Falls, Ia. S. R. L.

Follow Missouri highway No. 2 via St. Charles to Kansas City, No. 1 to St. Joseph, go west to Hiawatha, Kan., north to Omaha, north on Iowa No. 12 to Onawa, local road to Anthon, local road to No. 23 or No. 34 into Sioux City. All-weather road to St. Joseph, then 60 per cent gravel and the rest dirt to Omaha, then dirt to Anthon.

Joint Touring Bureau: Please publish best route to Ft. Worth, Tex., distance and condition of roads. M. R. H.

Missouri Highway No. 9 to Sikeston, west to Dexter, south no No. 25 to Leachville, Ark., east to Blytheville, south to Memphis-Little Rock highway, then west via Little Rock to Hot Springs, south to Texarkana, and southwest to Dallas and Ft. Worth. Distance about 985 miles. Roads all-weather to Hot Springs, and virtually all-weather from there to Ft. Worth.

Joint Touring Bureau: Please publish best route to Palm Beach, Fla. Can I go around and avoid the Kentucky mountains? I. H. P.

You can cross the Free Bridge and follow the National Old Trails via Indianapolis and Washington to Washington, then go south through Richmond, Va., Petersburg, Oxford, Camden, Augusta, Macon, Valdosta, Lake City, Jacksonville and St. Augustine to Palm Beach. Distance, 1862 miles. But it is only 1115 miles, or 747 miles shorter, from St. Louis to Palm Beach by way of Illinois highway No. 12 to Vincennes, then south through Evansville to Hopkinsville, Ky., then via Clarksville, Adams and Springfield to Nashville, then Murfreesboro, Mt. Eagle, Jasper, Chattanooga, Atlanta, Macon, Valdosta and Lake City. Also the Kentucky mountain grades are no worse, being mostly paved, than the Pennsylvania mountains on the route via Washington, and there is no more, if as much, sand clay road in Georgia on the Nashville-Atlanta route as on the 'round about way. A variation in the longer route would be to turn off the National Old Trails at Frederick, Md., and go via Winchester and the Shenandoah Valley pike to Roanoke, Bristol and Asheville, N. C., then cut down from Asheville into the Richmond-Palm Beach route. This would be a variation of great scenic and historic interest.

PLANS FOR POURING OF CONCRETE ON HIGHWAY 2

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

COLUMBIA, Mo., May 15.—The first pouring of concrete on Highway No. 2 in this section is to begin at More's Switch and proceed westward toward Sexon road. This section will be paved first, so contractors will have a good road on which to haul crushed rock from the Long farm to the "stockpile" which will be established near Paris road. The amount of dirt which must be moved across this county is estimated at 240,000 yards.

The power-driven elevating grader now used in excavation work plows and elevates a load of dirt into a wagon every 20 seconds. A hill that once took a month to level now only requires half a day.

The G-Boy

Scores a Genuine Triumph

The enthusiastic welcome given the G-BOY, Graham Brothers new one-ton truck, has established this fact:

It is recognized at once as a real—a major—contribution to commercial haulage.

So great was the need for a light truck to transport the average load swiftly, easily, safely—yet at lower cost than ever before—that Graham Brothers newest product has scored an immediate triumph.

The revolutionary improvement in balance effected by a new system of weight distribution profoundly impresses every man who has ever had experience with the haulage problem.

The compact wheel base, ease of handling, generous body capacity, the advantages of the ever-dependable and always economical Dodge Brothers engine—all these important factors enter into the G-BOY'S marked success.

And then the price! So low that only Graham Brothers, the largest exclusive truck makers, with huge buying and building capacity, could possibly achieve it.

For the average load there is nothing like the G-BOY. We are eager to show you this latest contribution to commercial haulage.

I Will Take Junior's Advice

Had an interesting talk with Junior yesterday . . . . . he was home over the week-end . . . . .

Wonderful how well-informed boys of that age are these days . . . . . Keen as steel . . . . . on almost any subject, they make dad feel like an ignoramus . . . . .

Junior is a sophomore . . . . . at the tech . . . . . always was a mechanical bug . . . . . is set on being an engineer . . . . . says it is the most honest profession of all . . . . . you can't lie in steel . . . . . nor sidestep facts . . . . . without being found out.

He tells me that, just now, his class is making comparative tests of automobiles . . . . . and he says, "Dad, that Rickenbacker is some wonderful automobile." . . . . . says they are testing all makes . . . . . foreign as well as American.

Junior tells me that the finest workmanship they have found in any car . . . . . is in the Rickenbacker.

Says they took fourteen piston pins . . . . . a complete set from a Six and a Vertical-8 . . . . . both Rickenbackers . . . . . and "miked" them.

"Waddayoumean miked," I asked . . . . and to my humiliation complete, his young brother . . . . . just a kid in first-year High . . . . . piped up . . . . . "miked means measured with a micrometer of course!"

These kids sure are fast these days . . . . . and not only at the Charleston either . . . . . Anyway, Junior says these fourteen piston pins didn't vary one ten-thousandth of an inch.

I did know this much . . . . . that the average human hair measures three thousandths of an inch.

Imagine splitting a hair into thirty slabs! . . . . . Yet, that, says Junior, is the limit of tolerance, allowed by Rickenbacker in the finish of this piston-pin.

I ventured the query . . . . . why be so fussy about this particular part?

"Because," said Junior . . . . . in that superior tone he uses to me . . . . . "the piston of a gas-engine has to sustain the full force of the initial power-impulse . . . . . and it is also in the hottest place . . . . . hardest to lubricate."

But Junior insists that the fine work . . . . . on this vital part . . . . . is only indicative of the wonderful accuracy to which Rickenbacker artisans work. He says the chassis throughout is a joy to the eye of an engineer.

Says that in no other car . . . . . of any class price . . . . . foreign-made or American . . . . . did the class find such uniformity of workmanship . . . . . or such excellent engineering practice.

Junior is an American . . . . . of course . . . . . belligerently so . . . . . and he says this Rickenbacker car is another reason he is proud of his country . . . . . for it embodies American ideals . . . . . is a perfect example of the American way of doing things . . . . . and is a challenge to the world's best engineering brains.

He says no hand-worker in Europe can hope to equal the fineness . . . . . and the absolute uniformity . . . . . of our automatic machine-tools.

Junior insists that . . . . . next week-end, when he is home again . . . . . we phone the Rickenbacker dealer . . . . . tell him we accept his invitation . . . . . to take a car for the day and drive it . . . . . ourselves.

Junior is nuts . . . . . to use his own words . . . . . over the Vertical-8 . . . . . I have been partial to a Six . . . . . He suggests we drive both of them . . . . . and learn the difference . . . . . for ourselves.

Junior is a persuasive fellow . . . . . always did have his way . . . . . except in that last car I bought . . . . . he warned me it was only an 'iron horse' . . . . . and . . . . . now I know he was right.

I am going to take Junior's advice . . . . . phone the dealer right now . . . . . tell him I want a car to drive.

Don't want any salesman along . . . . . no sleight-of-hand demonstrator either . . . . . been kidded by experts in that line.

We will do our own demonstrating . . . . . Junior himself at the wheel.

He says he will show me "phases of performance" I never sensed before . . . . . give me thrills that will be new to me . . . . . treat me to such a ride as I never experienced.

You'd think Rickenbacker had that kid subsidized . . . . . he talks like a high-pressure salesman . . . . . when he is on this Rickenbacker subject.

I am going to take Junior's advice . . . . . find out, first-hand, about that super-superiority . . . . . that luscious luxuriousness which . . . . . Junior tells me . . . . . are to be found only in a Rickenbacker.

Let's see . . . Rickenbacker St. Louis Company . . . handles the car in this territory . . . showroom is . . . 2218 Locust Street . . . and phone number is . . . CEntral 1852.

Rickenbackers are made in "Sixes" and "Vertical Eights"—all popular body types—prices range from $1695 to $2595—f. o. b. Detroit, plus tax

WORK BEING RUSHED ON HIGHWAY NO. 12

Route to Be Completed From Kansas City to Sedalia for State Fair Traffic.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

SEDALIA, Mo., May 15.—Road work in Central Missouri is being rushed by contractors and large forces of workmen and it is expected to have Highway No. 12 completed between Sedalia and Kansas City before the Missouri State Fair in August. A stretch of concrete connecting with a hard-surfaced road through Sedalia, completed two weeks ago, has been opened for traffic.

Highway work between Lamonte and Warrensburg is also being rushed on No. 12 and is expected to be complete and opened to traffic within 90 days. Two grade crossings are eliminated at and near Smithton by the road just opened, and near Knobnoster another will be done away with by a large overhead viaduct nearing completion.

On Route No. 3 progress is being made between Sedalia and Marshall and the connecting link soon will be laid with concrete.

CITY TEST OF HEADLIGHTS MAY PREVENT PAYING FINE

The municipal automobile headlight tester, Joseph Burns, is again calling attention to the fact that the city provides an official light-testing board in the City Hall basement, where automobiles may be inspected. Police in the city and Deputy Constables in the county are making periodic arrests which may be avoided by having the tester's "sticker" to signify proper focusing.

A white board, crossed with lateral lines, is placed 50 feet in front of the automobile. The lights should strike this below the marking indicating 36 inches from the ground. At a distance of 75 feet the lights should be under the 42-inch mark.

The inspection ticket holds good for a year and is generally respected by county police authorities and by those in other states.

Those whose lights fail to illumine the ground for a distance of 50 feet are also subject to arrest. The St. Louis traffic code provides that the shaft of light projected must not rise above the level of the top of the light glass within a distance of 75 feet.

"Recently hundreds of motorists have been arrested in St. Louis County for having improperly focused lights and the penalty in most cases has been the assessment of $7.60 court costs, with an occasional $10 fine tacked on. The city courts have released offenders on the payment of $3 costs," says Director of Streets Brooks.

WORK TO START SOON ON TWO PROJECTS ON NO. 19

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

EMINENCE, Mo., May 15.—Work on two projects on State Highway No. 19, notrh of this city, is expected to start soon, following the granting of rights-of-way.

The two projects under immediate consideration are the five-mile stretch north of the Current River bridge, including the two approaches, and about two miles immediately north of the bridge on Jack's Fork at Eminence.

Completion of Highway No. 19 north from Eminence toward Salem will be of decided importance to St. Louis motorists wishing to visit the Shannon County springs and State park region. It will open a direct route from St. Louis over No. 14 to Cuba, then southwest over No. 19 through Steelville and Salem to Eminence. At present it is necessary to follow a roundabout way south through Arcadia and Centerville to Van Buren, then north to Eminence, or to go south over Highways No. 9 and No. 25 to Poplar Bluff, then northwest via Van Buren.

PAVING OF HIGHWAY 8 FROM CALLAO TO MACON SOUGHT

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

MACON, Mo., May 15.—Committees from Macon, Bevier and Callao are asking the Highway Commission to allot to Macon County its pavement on highway No. 8 this year from Callao to Macon. This would connect these three cities by a 365-day road.

Macon will be connected with In Plata, Atlanta and Excello through highway No. 7.

The road is already graded between these cities and the bridges and culverts are in. If the pavement is given to this part of Macon County, the cities would not only be connected, but, by using highway No. 7, south, Callao and Bevier would be on a paved road to St. Louis and Kansas City.

Willys-Knight Great Six Sedan $2295

What Daimler-Knight, Minerva, Panhard, Mercedes, Voisin . . . . signify to European owners—Willys-Knight means to 300,000 owners in the United States

Link the Willys-Knight Great Six Sedan in your mind with the finest and most modernly engineered cars of Europe . . .

Consider it as the American-built chassis which ranks with European types costing upwards of $5,000 for the understructure and power-plant alone . . .

Then, and then only, do you get a true conception of its value.

The cars named here are but the European counterparts of the Willys-Knight Great Six Sedan—the one American-built motor-car about which leading engineers have said, "With its flexible, high-torque Knight sleeve-valve type of motor and modern chassis construction, it represents the greatest engineering advance of the age."

Then supplement this unique engine-efficiency and superb chassis achievement with the distinctive beauty of the Willys-Knight Great Six Sedan body, the richness and luxury of its fittings and equipment, its extra-measure of roominess and comfort. 25,000 sales in the past twelve months—an 86% gain so far this year over last year—in these tremendous terms the public has registered its preference, a sales record that has never before been equaled in the same length of time, we believe, by any luxury car.

The pronounced success of the Willys-Knight Great Six Sedan, in its first year and since, paved the way for the introduction this last Spring of the new "70" Willys-Knight Six—a car of 113¼ inch wheelbase, which outperforms anything that ever was built of its size or type or class. "70" Willys-Knight Six Sedan, $1495; touring, $1295.

The new WILLYS FINANCE PLAN means less money down, lower monthly payments; and the lowest credit-cost in the industry.

The super-efficient Knight sleeve-valve engine is patented. But two makers of privately-owned passenger-cars are entitled to use it. Willys-Knight is one of the two.

What's New in Cars

Marmon Adds Speedster Model

A STRIKING four-passenger speedster has been added to the Marmon six line, and is being displayed by the More Automobile Co., Marmon distributer in St. Louis. It is an extraordinarily good looking car, done throughout in custom built effects and swagger to a degree.

The body is of aluminum with molding and belt panel, and the paint finish is a two-tone combination that has become popular since its introduction by Marmon. The upholstery is of hand-buffed leather.

It seems that nothing has been omitted in the list of equipment to assure the convenience and pleasure of the owner and to add to the beauty of the speedster. Equipment includes fender mirrors, nickel-plated wind shield wings, double rear-view mirror, top boot, tonneau lights, three-way tail, stop and backing light, combination cigar lighter and handy lamp.

The car is fairly close coupled, permitting ample space between the tire carrier and the back of the body for a trunk of ample proportions. A metal panel in the left front door, with lock operated by the switch key, contains the essential and most used tools. Then there is a tool tray underneath the front seat which provides ample space for large tools and the jack. The side curtains are contained in three of the pockets.

Cadillac Town Car By Fleetwood

A LUXURIOUS town car now being displayed by the Oliver-Cadillac Co. has a body by Fleetwood.

Exterior finish is in a rich blue, with a black bead carrying a hair-line stripe in gold. This gold striping is also carried along the moulding and outlines each window, even the one in the rear, and the hood louvres are gold striped. The driver's compartment is done in black leather.

The interior is in imported gray broadcloth. Window sills are in walnut, while a vanity case and smoking set are in inlaid walnut. Fatigue pillow and footrests are done in broadcloth. Curtains are of gray silk, and the silken rope pulls are elaborately designed. Hardware and fittings throughout the rear compartment is in gray enamel with silver insets.

Sport Roadster Added by Dodge .

Beauty of line and color characterizes the new sport roadster which is being shown by the Tace Motor Co., Inc. Finish is in pheasant green lacquer, set off by a single stripe of partridge cream color; fenders and shields are black and radiator shell and lamp rims are of nickel.

Upholstery is of gray Spanish hand-buffed leather. Natural wood bows, trimmed in nickel, with nickeled stanchions of the one-piece, swinging windshield and a tan-colored top add to the smart appearance.

Space is provided for sporting equipment and baggage. Special equipment includes atuomatic windshield cleaner, front and rear bumpers, bullet-shaped head and cowl lamps with nickeled rims, rear-view mirror and scuff plates.

Willys-Knight 2-door Sedan Here

THE first of the six "70" new Willys-Knight two-door sedans are being shown in St. Louis at the Willys-Overland branch. This sedan has a body of the same length as that of the full four-door model. It is done in sage green Duco, with black bead with red stripe. Upholstery is of gray velour. It has sun visor, dome light and full equipment. Both front seats fold forward, and the doors are extra wide, so entrance and exit is easy through either door. The front seats are not hinged, but are set on pivots on a patented cradle, so that they tilt forward and back into position with a touch of a finger.

1927 Moon-Diana Models Announced.

NINETEEN twenty seven models of the Moon six and Diana eight lines are announced by the Moon Motor Car Co. of St. Louis. Improvements include patented composite steel and wood bodies on the "lancehead" brougham and four-door sedans of both lines, with slender steel front pillars, which do away with "blind spots." These pillars are only 53 per cent as wide as those in previous Moon and Diana cars. The bodies, of course, are stronger than ever.

Bodies are roomier, and approach a sound-proof condition, the composite construction deadening road and engine noises. Exterior finish of the brougham bodies is two-tone green highly polished, with the upper part and the lancehead on the top of hood and cowl in black.

RADIO EXPOSITION PLANS COMPLETED

Second Annual Show to Be Directed by St. Louis Radio Trades Association.

The second annual Southwest National Radio Exposition which will be held in the New Coliseum in St. Louis during the week beginning Oct. 18 promises to excel the success of the first show of this kind which was held last fall. The officials of the exposition, the board of directors and heads of the various committees have been elected, and plans have already been made for every detail of the coming show.

The St. Louis Radio Trades Association is sponsoring the exposition and has arranged for a general convention of all members of the radio industry to convene in St. Louis during the week of the show. This week has been designated radio week by the Chamber of Commerce. Programs of general interest to all branches of the industry are being prepared.

Special musical entertainments will be given at the Coliseum during the show. These will be broadcast by local radio stations for the benefit of the listening public. Announcers of national reputation will make their appearance in the crystal studio which will be visible to all who attend the exposition.

The officers of the St. Louis Radio Trades Association and the Southwest National Radio Exposition are as follows: Harold J. Wrape, president; Robert W. Bennett, George Niekamp, Loren M. Wood, Melville B. Hall, vice presidents; E. A. Reutner, secretary; William P. Mackie, executive secretary, and William Borghoff, treasurer.

After two years' use, have a reputable battery man clean out the sediment from the jars, renew the electrolyte, wipe off the box, and paint with black asphaltum paint.

'JEWISH POKER GAME' AT

ATWATER KENT RADIO

Bargains are only comparative —in Radio as in anything else

IT'S NOT what a radio set costs, but what it is worth that makes it a good or a bad bargain.

An Atwater Kent Receiving Set at a standard price is just as good a buy today as it was earlier in the winter.

Why? Because the same value is there today as was there two months ago.

Thoughtful buyers are buying Atwater Kent Radio today, feeling that they are getting full value for their money. Owners of Atwater Kent Radio feel sure they have their money's worth.

Bargains are only comparative—in Radio as in anything else. You get just about what you pay for—and sometimes a little more.

It's this "a little more" that makes an Atwater Kent Receiving Set and Atwater Kent Radio Speaker a good bargain today. Ask any Atwater Kent Radio owner how he feels about it.

EIGHT MIKES FOR ONE PROGRAM

Eight condenser microphones were used by engineers of WGY to pick up the morning and evening services of Grace Episcopal Church, New York, for broadcasting by the Schenectady station.

Successful broadcasting of the Episcopal service involves special difficulties for the technical staff of a radio station. The average church service can be "covered" by means of three microphones, one for the preacher's desk, another for the choir and a third for congregational singing. In the Episcopal church, however, the choir is placed on both sides of the chancel, requiring three microphones to pick up the music of choir and organ. The rector has parts of the service at the altar, at the lectern or reading desk and in the pulpit. The Grace Church installation requires three microphones in the chancel, one at the altar, one at the lectern, one in the auditorium or body of the church to pick up congregational singing and an eighth in the belfry to pick up the chime programs which will precede each service.

The field operator controlling the microphones must be constantly alert in picking up the church service, following the service in its every phase. Failure to bring the right microphone into the circuit results in low volume of sound for the listener, who generally thinks that something has happened to his receiving set.

RECEPTION AS YOU LIKE IT

Considerable discussion having been aroused through the recent publication of a case of real selectivity in receiving sets as displayed by the youth who was able to separate the four members of a male quartet. J. T. Woolford of Santa Ana now comes forward with what he terms an example of "selectivity and then some."

In a letter to KFI Mr. Woolford claims he tuned in a violin solo on a station that shall be nameless. The violin and piano were playing in different keys, so Mr. Woolford tuned the violin up a bit and so was able to enjoy the concert.

SOME DRAWBACKS TO HIGHER POWER

Expert Says Only Improved Receivers Can Pick Up Signals Near Super-Stations.

By WILLIAM H. PRIESS.

When super-power broadcast stations were only in the suggestion stage a few years ago, a superficial theory which found reasonably wide acceptance allowed the belief that a mediocre and consequently low-priced receiving set would give general satisfaction, once super-power broadcast came into general use.

The theory was plausible enough. It was based on an easily accepted, though faulty premise, that with the immense reach of super-power a proportionate load would be taken off the task of the receiving set. It sounded good, but it has not worked out and the chances are it never will.

The fact is that with the coming of super-power broadcast the receiving set needs to be better than ever. It demonstrates again the familiar truth that when you improve one phase of service you have to extend the improvement all along the line.

The fact that the man in Nebraska can now hear WJZ on his three-tube set, whereas a few years ago he could not get a peep out of New York, gives only one side of the picture. It's a case of being as broad as it's long.

What about the thousands of fans who live in the shadow of the station itself? Unless they are equipped with an exceptionally fine receiver, the chances are they will not be able to hear anything else.

Balance these two facts against each other and you can visualize fairly the question raised by super-power broadcast.

To my mind the interesting point is not whether or not super-power is desirable. The really interesting point is that you cannot thus 'improve' broadcasting over previous standards without also improving the average run of receiving sets.

If the radio user is going to depend on the average type of set which he has enjoyed during past years, super-power will annoy as many as it will aid; maybe more. The whole parade must move along together; the receiver must add qualities it hitherto has not had, except in a few instances, as fast as the broadcast staion adds power it hitherto has not had.

With super-power, a receiving set, unless it wants to limit its range to a single station, must be blessed with super-qualities; principally "selectivity." It has been one of the hardest problems engineers have been called on to solve. Only a few of use have so far been successful.

It would have been a radio tragedy, he said, if super-power had made reception so easy that manufacturing engineers would have lost all stimulus towards improving receivers.

NEW TRANSATLANTIC STATION

The radio station located in Chapultepec Park, Mexico City, has just completed the installation of a new 500-watt equipment for trans-oceanic wireless service, according to a report to the Department of Commerce from Assistant Trades Commissioner Brin, Mexico City. The station will operate on a short wave and the equipment will increase greatly the efficiency of radio communication between Mexico City and the rest of the world.

The new station will use reduced size antennae of about 45 feet in height, as tests of towers of that height have proved to be highly successful in the Mexican capital. The old wireless towers of the station are being dismantled rapidly and are being recut to reduced sizes after which they will be shipped to stations in other parts of Mexico.

At the Chapultepec Radio Laboratories in Mexico City, work is progressing rapidly on equipment similar to that described above which is to be used by a wireless station in the city of Campeche.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Q. Will it affect a 5-tube set in any way to have a fan setting on top of it? Would placing a rubber mat between set and fan do any good? C. H.

A. Why ask? Place the fan on top of the set and see what happens. The chances are that the vibration of the fan will interfere with reception to a considerable extent by causing the tubes to vibrate. If the fan interferes with reception, placing a rubber mat between the fan and the set will not help matters any. Why is it so necessary to have the fan on top of the set, anyway?

Q. What St. Louis station have I heard broadcasting recently in the German language? G. F. H.

A. Station KFUO, Concordia Seminary.

Q. I have a small crystal set and am able to get KSD at all hours, but am unable to get any other local stations when KSD is off. I am not well acquainted with the operation or construction of a radio, but it seems peculiar why we are able to get the one and not the other station. This radio is about three or four years old and was made when KSD was the only broadcasting station in St. Louis. E. E. H.

A. It is rather hard to tell you what to do to enable you to remedy your set without knowing exactly what kind of a set you are using. The chances are that your set has too much wire on it to enable it to tune to the lower wavelength stations. Remove about 20 turns of wire from the tuning coil and place a small fixed condenser (.005 mfd.) in series with the antenna.

Q. For the past month KSD and KYW have been interfering on my set and, as I still get KYW on their original setting and KSD comes in 2 points lower, I believe that the fault lies with KSD. H. J. H.

A. Stations KSD and KYW both are equipped with a frequency meter which is calibrated by the United States Bureau of Standards. A frequency meter is simply a wavemeter built to respond to only one definite wavelength and with an indicating needle that is deflected when the meter is placed near a broadcasting set that is broadcasting on the wavelength that the meter is built to respond to. KSD's meter is built to respond to 550 kilo-cycles and KYW's is built to respond to 560 kilo-cycles. If either station drops or goes up the least bit in wavelength the needle of the meter does not deflect. These meters are checked every month by the radio inspector with his wavemeter and at the same time he tunes the transmitting set and the tuning of the transmitter is then left unchanged until his next visit. Located as you are you are bound to have trouble with the two stations because the 10 kilo-cycle band, while usually wide enough to prevent interference, does not leave much leaway in case of changing atmospheric conditions that may effect the wavelength.

A. Any St. Louis radio firm can supply you with a crystal set hookup. Look over the back copies of the Post-Dispatch radio section, in which have been printed numerous crystal set hookups from time to time.

Q. I have noticed quite often that for the last year or so your station comes in much stronger in the day time than at night, which is not consistent with the general rules of radio. I find that this is true on all receivers around here. I might also say the KMOX comes in much stronger at night than in day time, in fact they are much stronger than KSD at night but you are from four to five times as strong as them in the day time. Can you explain this? J. M. W., Paducah, Ky.

A. The conditions regarding the daylight reception of KSD in your portion of the country has been reported several times from many different towns in Kentucky and vicinity. The power used at KSD is the same at all times. What happens after the radio waves leave the antenna is one of the things that radio engineers know the least about. The radio waves spread from the antenna in all directions, traveling along the surface of the earth until they are absorbed, through the earth, and into the upper limits of the atmosphere where they are absorbed and reflected. The amount of absorption and reflection that takes place depends upon the wavelength, the time of the day and the type of antenna used at the station. While we know enough of the rules to formulate certain conditions which must be adhered to transmit through space we are in the dark to a large extent. It probably just happens that conditions for daylight broadcasting are ideal for transmitting to your city and vicinity as this condition is reported from no other section of the country. Probably a change in wavelength or antenna design at KSD would make a change in your reception of KSD.

NEW ARRIVALS

A distinctly new note in variable condenser construction has been sounded in an instrument just placed on the market by the Bruno Radio Corporation, parts manufacturers of 40 Payntar avenue, Long Island City. The new condenser employs a shaft of special clear bakelite instead of the common brass or steel one, and is built onto a U-shaped frame in such a manner that the shaft itself furnishes the insulation between the rotary and stationary plates.

The design eliminates the usual side strips of insulating material and their attendant supporting ribs, and permits the use of an all-metal frame that makes the condenser extremely compact and rigid. The .0005 mfd. model, the largest one made, is only 3¼ inches wide, 1⅛ inches high and 2 inches deep behind a panel.

The rear end of the shaft rests on a ball bearing, while the forward part, where it turns against a brass bearing, is equipped with a small brass ring that supplies the actual contact surface. The bakelite itself is practically wear-proof, a diameter reduction of only two-thousandths of an inch being noted after a test of 250,000 revolutions made on a stock ¼-inch shaft. This severe test corresponds to about 100 years of normal service.

Electrically, the condenser is of the straight line frequency type, with brass plates, and is made in .00025, .00035 and .0005 mfd. maximum capacities. It is designed especially for broadcast reception, and gives a uniform separation of the American broadcasting stations operating on the present frequency division. Its small radio frequency resistance and general R. F. characteristics place it most decidedly in the "low-loss" class.

The instrument has a one-hole panel mounting stud. It also mounts flat against the back of a panel, and is made in right and left hand models so that two can be placed in line with each other and the two butting shafts controlled by one paddle-wheel type of thumb-actuated dial. The Bruno Radio Corporation will shortly bring out a special dial for this purpose.

The bakelite of which the shaft is made is a special translucent composition of unusual strength, resembling amber in color. It is so tough an ordinary man cannot break a rod of it ¼ inch in diameter and three inches long.

TUBES UNBALANCE RECEIVER

Some receivers of the older type, using tuned radio frequency of some kind, have a tendency to whistle and squeal, for no apparent reason, after new tubes have been put in. Sometimes it is almost impossible to tune stations in. The trouble lies in nothing else but the new tubes. The internal capacity of the older-type tubes, for which the receiver was originally designed, is much less than that of the tubes in use today. The consequence is that the tube is not neutralized or compensated enough to take care of this increased capacity, resulting in very pronounced squealing due to coupling between the radio frequency stages. Upon experimenting it will be found that some of the newer tubes function satisfactorily and some do not.

The Norge's Radio Equipment.

Specially designed radio receiving and transmitting equipment has been installed on the Polar airship Norge, which carries the Amundmen-Ellsworth expedition. Direction-finding apparatus is also included. Transmissions are to take place on the following frequencies: 666 kc.,500 kc., 333 kc., and 250 kc.

Make Driving Safer

with Reo's Split-Second Braking and Split-Second Steering

The most important seconds of your life are the ones standing between you and sudden danger. Danger from drink-crazed or reckless drivers—from cars dashing out of cross streets—from stray animals, bumps or boulders around blind curves—and from all the hazards lurking in darkness. The National Safety Council, convened at Secretary Hoover's call, emphasized the desperate need for curtailing human recklessness. But today, and for some time to come, only the driver's alertness AND HIS CAR'S RESPONSIVENESS can save him in the fateful seconds. That is why Reo has Split-Second Braking and Split-Second Steering . . . saving the fractions of seconds that are the margin between safety and disaster.

For years automobile engineers have tried, in the interest of much needed safety, to get rid of two serious defects in the ordinary braking control.

The first of these is the danger of pressing down on the accelerator instead of the brake pedal in excited seconds.

The second defect is the sometimes fatal loss of time while the driver lifts his foot off the accelerator and shifts it over before he can even begin to apply his brakes.

Splitting the dangerous seconds

All the brakes on any car won't begin to stop it until they are applied.

And during the time between seeing danger and applying brakes, your car speeds toward the danger.

Too often that time can be measured only in seconds or even fractions of seconds.

Reo Split-Second Braking makes it possible to save from one-half to three-fifths of a second in applying brakes.

It is possible to save this time because you do not have to take your foot off the accelerator to apply the powerful Reo brakes. It also protects you from the sometimes fatal error of stepping on the accelerator when you want to step on the brake pedal.

The time that the Reo driver can save means a great many feet, as the following table shows:

At	One-Half Second	Three-Fifths Second	At	One-Half Second	Three-Fifths Second
20 m.p.h.*	14 ft. 8 in.	17 ft. 7 in.	45 m.p.h.	33 feet	39 ft. 7 in.
25 m.p.h.	18 ft. 4 in.	22 feet	50 m.p.h.*	36 ft. 8 in.	44 feet
30 m.p.h.	22 feet	26 ft. 5 in.	55 m.p.h.	40 ft. 4 in.	48 ft. 5 in.
35 m.p.h.	25 ft. 8 in.	30 ft. 10 in.	60 m.p.h.	44 feet	52 ft. 10 in.
40 m.p.h.	29 ft. 4 in.	35 ft. 4 in.	*m. p. h. — miles per hour

Three choices which only Reo provides

Only Reo has a brake that can be applied faster than any other brake on any other car—a brake so extraordinarily available that with it you can meet emergencies no other kind of control can meet.

Only Reo has this, and only Reo offers you three choices of brake application.

① You can use exactly the same ways of applying brakes that other cars have—if that's what you're used to, and if that's all you want.

② You can have Split-Second Braking and enjoy the same superior safety that over 100,000 other Reo owners enjoy.

③ Or you can have, at no extra cost, the ordinary pedal and lever for applying brakes PLUS Split-Second Braking.

Only with a Reo can you weave through traffic so easily and quickly. Reo Split-Second Steering makes it possible.

Only Reo offers you these three choices, and only Reo has a steering gear that splits the dangerous seconds.

Split-Second Steering

Often only a quick swerve will avoid danger.

Even the smallest fraction of a second here spells the difference between safety and disaster.

The Reo Steering gear saves more than this small fraction—saves it in two distinct ways: first, because it acts more quickly; and second, because, the action is faster.

It saves the split second lost on practically all other cars because they develop "play" in the steering gear—"play" that wastes precious moments because, until it is taken up, the movement of the steering wheel cannot move the front wheels.

The Reo Steering gear seldom, if ever, develops "play." Even ten and twelve-year old Reos ready for the scrap-heap have steering gears as free from "play," as flashingly responsive, as a New Reo.

Quick and Easy Turning on Balloon Tires

In addition to that saving, Reo Split-Second steering saves whole seconds, because it turns the front wheels of the car faster than any other steering gear can.

Balloon Tires are harder to turn than high-pressure tires; and therefore, when Balloon Tires came into general use, most automobile manufacturers had to "slow up" their steering gears.

With Split-Second steering you can turn the front wheels of a Reo car—equipped with Balloon Tires—in half the time that the ordinary steering gear requires.

Most cars now require two, others three, complete turns of the steering wheel to turn Balloon Tires from extreme left position to extreme right position.

Not only does this mean quicker steering in dangerous seconds—it means easier driving.

Try these Reo contributions to greater driving safety

By now over 100,000 Reo owners know the peace of mind, the comfort, that the Reo Split-Second features provide.

These features are the outstanding contributions to greater safety in driving.

Until the National Safety Council's efforts to curtail recklessness in driving bear fruit, you must depend for safety in many fateful seconds on your own alertness and your car's responsiveness.

With Split-Second Braking and Split-Second Steering you have responsiveness to control that no other automobile provides.

Come in and try them.

NEWS OF THE BOY AND GIRL SCOUTS

'VETERANS OF 46' IS NEW SCOUT TROOP

Auxilliary to Troop 46 Designed as an Alumni for Older Members.

"Once a Scout, always a Scout" is the slogan of Scoutmaster Lester M. Hall of Troop 46 of the Immanuel Baptist Church, 5850 Cates avenue. To actualize this belief for his own troop, Hall has begun the organization of "The Veterans of 46," an auxiliary composed of former scouts who have outgrown the regular activities of the troop, but who are still enthused enough about scouting to wish both to retain contact with the work and to aid in giving its benefits to as many boys as possible.

Hall, who is 72 years old, and the oldest scoutmaster in St. Louis, has had this plan in mind for some time. In the 10 years he has been scoutmaster, Troop 16 has had 250 to 300 scouts on its roll, the majority of whom have dropped out when 16 or 17, because most of the scouts were younger. To minimize this reason, and reduce the turnover, Hall conceived the idea of reregistering the older boys as a separate organization—a sort of troop alumni.

Nine Have Joined.

Impetus was lent to the plan by these ex-scouts attending meetings, offering their services as instructors, and asking in what way they could aid the troops. As further proof that hey realized the benefits of scouting, they would bring younger brothers as candidates for membership. After tentative discussions with several of these boys Hall last week definitely started the organization. By last Thursday nine boys had promised to sign up

South District.

Troop 15, of the St. Luke's Lutheran Church, gave a demonstration of scout work at a picnic of the church yesterday. In the morning the scouts raised a new American flag upon the flagpole recently erected on the church grounds. It will be the duty of the troop hereafter to raise nad lower the flag, with propert ceremonies every day. Troop 15 has ben organized only a few months, but all of the members have uniforms.

The patrol leaders of Troop 63, of the Oak Hill Presbyterian Church, held a hike last week-end to Camp Murphy, the troop camp site on the Manchester road. While there the leaders held a conference, discussing a program for the troop, and laying plans for a parents' night.

Troop 57, meting at Battery A, is preparing for the opening of the battery swimming pool next Friday, in which swimming and life-saving instructions will be given by Scoutmaster Rivoire. The troop has the use of the pool every year. Last wek the scouts made two hikes, an overnight to their cabin at Yeatman, and a day trip to a manufacutring plant. The troop intends to follow ths plan of one camping and one industrial hike a week for the rest of the summer. The scouts also are planning to hike to Camp Irondale this year. Last week, Friday, the troop began a campaign for 10 new members.

Six Tenderfoot Scouts were taken into Troop 86 of the Horace Mann School, at a meeting attended by 50 parents last Tuesday. The Troop Committee of 10 scout fathers was present, and Assistant Scout Executive Haun spoke of the parents' responsibility to the boys.

Troop 148 has been given the use of a tract of land near Pevely, Mo., for overnight hikes and camps. The troop is planning to erect several log cabins and a signal tower on the grounds. Last Monday the scouts held a joint meeting with the Parents' Club, putting on stunts and scout demonstrations. At the close of the meeting refreshments were served.

The Wolf patrol won first place and candy for a prize in a mystery hike held by Troop 178, of the Scruggs School, last Tuesday. The messages directing them were written in the Morse code. Objectives form each patrol were adopted at this meeting. The Panther patrol is leading in an interpatrol contest, with the Fox patrol second. The Pine Tree patrol, composed only of Star Scouts or higher, took a hike to Windsor Springs last Sunday.

Troop 219, led by Scoutmaster Erwin Hubell and Assistant Scoutmaster Roy Bohres, hiked from Gever road and the Manchester car line to Windsor Springs, Saturday, May 8. A treasure hunt was the feature of the day. Several of the scouts cooked hunters' stew, and others baked biscuits.

Eagle Scout Jack Wilson, formerly of Troop 4, has been made Junior Assistant Scoutmaster of Troop 232, of the Blow School. A week ago Friday the troop was presented with an American flag by the Ladies' Circle of the Nathaniel Lyon Post, No. 27, G. A. R. The presentation was made by Mrs. H. W. Sexton, and the flag accepted by Scoutmaster Wagner, who recently took charge of this troop.

Membership in the corps will be open to any former Scout of Troop 46, at the start, but afterwards will be limited to those who have been in the troop for five years or more. The veterans will be registered as regular Scouts, but will participate in the troops' activities at their own discretion. Their position will be approximately that of Associate Scouts, organized into a body of their own. Semiannual gatherings are planned for their official meetings.

It is hoped that the corps will eventually furnish trained scoutmasters to troops of the city.

Troop Has 53 Members.

Troop 46, a 10-year veteran troop, has 53 Scouts, 24 of whom are first-class. There are three Eagles, three Life and three Star Scouts. The assistant scoutmaster, Lawrence Reiter, has been a member for six years, having come up from the ranks. Senior Patrol Leader Lewis Sherwood has been a Scout five years. Eagle Scout Bud Carter is junior assistant scoutmaster.

The troop believes in individual troop camping, rather than group camping at Irondale. An individual summer camp, according to the scoutmaster, brings a troop spirit obtainable in no other way. One of the camps is on the Missouri River near Florissant. Here the Pine Tree patrol has constructed a 7x9 foot tree house in a twin basswood tree 35 feet from the ground. The house, which is built of logs, is completely furnished, even to a radio set. It was started in the summer of 1924 and took about three months to build.

Suburban District.

Troop 1, Brentwood, held a fathers' and sons' meeting at their camp grounds last Wednesday night, the scouts performing stunts around a council fire. Former Scoutmaster S. C. Reaves and Field Executive M. N. Leavitt spoke on Camp Irondale. At the close of the meeting "hot-dog" sandwiches and cocoa were served.

Glennon Boehm was promoted to Senior Patrol Leader of Troop 3, Kirkwood Tuesday. The troop has planned a hike for today to their new camp site on the Meramec River, near Barrett's Station. They plan to start work on a cabin on this property.

Troop 4, Kirkwood, was host to Troop 2 on a hike to Deer Creek a week ago yesterday, at which time a number of the boys passed their first-class swimming tests. Scoutmaster Pray of Troop 4 was in charge.

The local American Legion post has expressed a desire to sponsor Troop 3, St. Charles, and their offer will be accepted. This troop hiked to Coles Creek, about 15 miles from St. Charles, a week ago yesterday. New members are joining every meeting, the officers report.

Every boy in Troop 2, Overland, passed his fire-building and cooking tests on the troop's first hike last Sunday, and some of the scouts passed other tests.

Troop 3, Webster, took a hike to Von Schraders last Sunday, spending the afternoon in swimming, fishing and playing games. Scouts Mead and Kilpatrick passed their Scout-pace test. Clarence Duenke's patrol won two successive "Capture the Flag" games, played in the heavy undergrowth along Deer Creek. At the meeting Thursday Barney Gerdelman's patrol put on a stunt

Troop 5, Webster, took their first hike of the year to the Sugar Creek quarry last Sunday, while there staging a sham battle. The Troop Committee is sending Scoutmaster Hunter to the Scoutmasters' Training Camp at Irondale Decoration day

The scouts of Troop 9, Webster, entertained their parents last Thursday evening. Each patrol put on a stunt, Jack Israckbill's Bear patrol winning with a humorous sketch entitled "A Day in Camp". Dick White's Lion patrol displayed bird houses made by themselves, and sold some to the parents. After the meeting the mothers served refreshments.

Troop 11, Webster, held their first overnight hike of the year last Saturday and Sunday, going by car to Jefferson Barracks, and then hiking to Cliff Cave. Instruction in nature subjects and pioneering was given, and outdoor tests were passed. At the lata meeting the scouts entertained the parents with stunts by each patrol.

North District.

The Commissioners of the North District will meet at Scout Headquarters tomorrow evening at 5:30 o'clock for the last assembly until next fall. Every commissioner has been urged to attend because of the important business to be transacted.

The North District Boosters are working to have the largest representation of any district at Camp Irondale Decoration day. They are asking Troop Committees to send their Scoutmasters to the camp if they can make the trip, and a number of them have agreed. Registration for this camp is now going on at Headquarters.

The four troops of Region 1, North District, met at the Grace Hill Church, the headquarters of Troop 3, last Tuesday evening in a "get-together" meeting. Field executive Jack Wright taught new songs and games, and talked on Camp Irondale. The troops of this region are 161, of the Webster School, 206 of the Ames School, 243 of the Salem Reformed Church and Troop 3. Troop 3 has planned a hike for today, to Kenwood Springs, to pass cooking and other tests.

Troop 12, formerly of the Fourth Christian Church, has reorganized, with a new Scoutmaster and Assistant, and 15 boys, but the officers have not yet been announced. The troop will reregister next week.

Troop 19, of the Blair Howard School, held a Parents' Night last Friday. The boys gave a demonstration of Scout work, and Field Executive Jack Wright spoke.

The Troop Committee of Troop 29, of the Benton School, will hold a reception for their new scoutmaster, J. E. Caldwell, next Friday evening, on which date Mr. Caldwell will officially take charge of the troop.

A special Go-to-Camp meeting was held last Thursday evening by Troop 42, of the Zion Lutheran Church, at which pictures of Camp Irondale were exhibited. The troop voted to send at least one patrol to camp this year, as they have done in the past.

Twenty-one Scouts of Troop 88, of the Salem Evangelical Church, spent a week ago last Saturday in the woods, leaving at 6:30 a. m., and returning at 8:30 p. m. During the day the Scouts watched a farmer spray fruit trees and learned why and how this was done. The troop was in charge of the Scoutmaster and Patrol Leaders, Russell Stumpf and Victor Klein.

The newly-organized Patrons' Association met with Troop 122 at the Sherman Park Community Center last Monday evening, and laid plans for a permanent organization. They also voted to give the boys an outing next month at the new Lions Club Week-End Camp. Scoutmaster Frank spoke on the progress of the troop, and Field Executive Jack Wright told of his trip East. This troop has nine boys signed up for the second section at Camp Irondale.

The Pelican Patrol, winners of a monthly inspection contest of Troop 92, of the Samuel Cupples School, were guests of Scoutmaster John Custer at the Empress Theater a week ago yesterday, as a reward. The same day the Raccoon patrol, under Patrol Leader Fred Ruenthal, hiked to the Meramec quarry. Scoutmaster Custer has been absent from the city for the past month, and during this time the scouts have conducted the troop by themselves, holding meetings and passing tests as usual.

Troop 147, of the Northwest Christian Church, aided by Assistant Field Executive William Fanning, helped in the reorganization of Troop 173, of the Wallbridge School last Tuesday by putting on a model troop meeting, using the patrol system. The meeting closed with a patrol stunt, "The Poor Shepherd Lad." Troop 147 will continue to meet with Troop 173 until the latter is well under way.

Fifteen scouts of Troop 236, of the Los Angeles Community Center in Normandy, signed up for the seventh section of Camp Irondale at a special camp meeting last week.

Isadore Miller's patrol of Troop 206 hiked to the Chain of Rocks a week ago Saturday. Tuesday the troop visited Troop 243.

West District.

The Harmonica Band of Troop 2 played scout songs at an entertainment given by the Pilgrim Congregational Church Friday, May 7. After concluding their part of the program, they were allowed to eat all of the ice cream and cake they wished.

The Troop Committee of Troop 9 has announced they will pay the registration fee and railroad fare for the scoutmaster and assistant scoutmaster to attend the annual Scoutmasters' Week-End Camp, Decoration day.

Assistant Scoutmaster Kemp of Troop 13 is to attend the Scoutmasters' Week-End Camp at the expense of the Troop Committee.

Senior Patrol Leader Reznioff took charge of the meeting of Troop 30 last Wednesday night, in the absence of the scoutmaster. Field Executive S. C. Reaves spoke on Camp Irondale.

Troop 31, of the Grace Methodist Church, has been holding its meetings in Forest Park during the late warm weather.

Dr. Staley, a troop committeeman, spoke May 7 to Troop 23 on the way matches are made, and on former methods of making fires. He also talked on Indian quarries. At previous meetings he has lectured on reptiles and first aid. Dr. Staley has invited the troop to visit his cabin on the Meramec.

Scouts of Troop 49 acted as ushers at a benefit supper of the First Presbyterian Church last Friday night, in lieu of holding their regular meeting.

Troop 59 went on a Mystery Hike a week ago Friday, under the supervision of the Troop Committee, which furnished the prize at the end. Four scouts from as many other troops and several other boys, not scouts, were guests.

SENIOR PATROL LEADER RANKING BOY OF TROOP

Educational Director Explains He Is Superior to Junior Assistant Scoutmasters.

Contrary to usual belief, the Senior Patrol Leader outranks the Junior Assistant Scoutmasters, according to a statement made by William Puffer, Educational Director of the St. Louis Council, Boy Scouts, at the fifth meeting of the local Scoutmasters' Training Course last Monday. Puffer pointed out that the Scoutmasters' Handbook distinctly states that the Senior Patrol Leader is the ranking boy of the troop, and is next to the Assistant Scoutmaster. But because of the use of the term "Scoutmaster" and because the Junior Assistant receives a commission, the impression has been created that he is higher than the noncommissioned Senior Patrol Leader. In many troops Senior Patrol Leaders have even been "promoted" to Junior Assistants.

The Junior Assistant is an older scout who acts as an instructor, as quartermaster, or as supervisor of some definite activity. In large troops one may have charge of each patrol. The Senior Patrol Leader is responsible for the functioning of all the patrols. There may be as many Junior Assistants as there are older boys, but only one Senior Patrol Leader. Puffer suggests to eliminate the confusion that the word "Scoutmaster" be dropped from the title, and a badge noticeably distinct from the Senior Patrol Leader's be adopted.

With the Girl Scout Troops

The Katydids of Ferguson gave an entertainment to the Parent-Teachers' Association of the Ferguson School last Friday. At the meeting of the troop May 7 the girls practised for this, and also made plans for a hike to the Country Day School today. They also learned the names of different leaves.

The girls of Troop 1, Jennings, gave a party for their mothers May 6, during which they gave demonstrations of signalling and stretcher-making with ropes. This was followed by scout songs and refreshments.

The Hasendeubel Women's Relief Corps No. 19 presented Arrowhead Troop 7 with a silk American flag last week. Scout Henrietta Wilke delivered the speech of acceptance, Thelma Bergeest recited the history of the flag, Arline Leiser read a flag poem, and Elka Ackerman spoke on the flags of other countries.

At a mothers' and daughters' party given by Troop 15, the "Encircled Pine," the mothers of the scouts organized a Scout Council, an advisory group upon which the troop may call at any time for assistance. Mrs. Bristow was elected president, Mrs. Kline secretary and Mrs. Jacobsen treasurer. They will meet once a month.

To open the meting Scout Emma May Biswell directed the playing of "get-acquainted" games. The scouts then gave a play, "Fifty Gets Nifty." Realistically, the character of "Wants-to-be-a-scout," was taken by Evelyn Barry, the troop mascot, who is too young to be a scout. The patrols each decorated a table for a lunch, each striving to outdo the others. Patrol 2, led by Hope Toalson, sang a song, after which Taps was sung.

Annette Rubin was elected Senior Patrol Leader at the last meeting of Troop 26. Sylvia Gutenberg was elected scribe, Sara Katz treasurer, and patrol leaders as follows: Patrol 1, Anna Katz; 2, Rose Kotchors; 3, June Sachar; 4, Dora Silverman. Dora Torin and Rose Kortchors were elected representatives to the Y. W. H. A. Council. The troop is planning a social for mothers of scouts.

The Litani patrol of Troop 39 won a knot-tying contest at the troop's last meeting Monday. Afterwards the girls sang songs.

The Conia Troop hiked from the end of the Broadway car line to Chain of Rocks last Sunday, eating luncheon there. The girls put their first-aid training into practice recently when Clarice Wacker sprained her right ankle during an indoor football game.

The scouts of Troop 55 entertained their mothers Wednesday evening with the playlet "Fifty Gets Nifty," and a program by the girls. Beatrice Hugh and Margie Dawson sang a duet, and Leontone Meyer recited "Betty at the Game." Games and a flag drill were staked, and refreshments were served, after which each mother was presented a rose.

Patrol 2 is leading a contest in all-round scouting with 19 points. Patrol 1 is second with 17, and Patrol 3 third with 13.

Next Friday night the troop will give a scout play and entertainment, to which they invite all of their friends.

TUBERCULOSIS DEATH RATE CUT IN HALF

Survey of St. Louis Society Shows Marvelous Progress Made Against Disease in Ten Years.

The death rate from tuberculosis has been cut in half in the last 10 years. More men die from this disease than women, the ratio being 60 to 40. The married woman from 20 to 30 years old is more susceptible to tuberculosis than the single woman, and the single man from 30 to 40 years of age is more susceptible than the married man. These are some of the facts disclosed in a survey made recently by the research department of the Tuberculosis Society of St. Louis.

That the tuberculosis death rate in St. Louis is rapidly decreasing has been known for some time, but in just what age groups the disease is most prevalent, which type of the disease most widespread, and other such details, the knowledge of which is so important in further reducing the death rate, has never before been compiled in definite form, according to Homer Hall, president of the Tuberculosis Society.

"The research department of the Tuberculosis Society, therefore, performs a most important service in making a comprehensive study of the tuberculosis deaths in St. Louis, classifying them according to sex, color, age, marital condition, nationality, occupation, place of death and type of disease," Hall said.

Night and Day Camp.

"Upon the facts established by such a survey is based the society's program of disease prevention. The survey acts as a pointer in showing just which lines should be developed next, and in helping to more intelligently plan a program. For instance, when it was learned that the married woman is more susceptible than the unmarried woman, the Night and Day Camp, maintained at 9500 South Broadway, for girls who are broken in health and who might take tuberculosis unless speedily built up in health, was opened to young married women as well as self-supporting girls for whom the camp was originally established.

"When it was found that the death rate from tuberculosis among Negroes was four times that of white persons in proportion to population, and among Negro children from 10 to 14 years of age 17 times that of the white children, a more definite and comprehensive program of health work for Negroes was planned, and an open air school for underweight children established. When almost half of the Negroes in this city are in positions of intimate contact with the white population, such as serving as cooks, maids, porters, waiters, laundresses, it is highly important that the disease be eradicated among Negroes also, if for no other reason than to protect the whites.

Institutional Care Successful.

"The continued decrease in death rate in tuberculosis is institutions, even though the accommodations are steadily growing, has helped to show that institutional care is successful and that increased facilities will do much to further check the disease, the survey points out. The increase in number of patients in sanitoriums also shows that the public is becoming more and more educated to the value of institutional treatment for this disease, which is a great forward step."

These surveys are based on the vital statistics obtained from the city and studies of the deaths in Koch Hospital, Mount St. Rose and the Jewish Sanitarium for Chronic Invalids.

The research department of the Tuberculosis Society does not confine its survey work to tuberculosis deaths alone, according to Hall, but it makes extensive surveys of child health education, both of the pre-school and school age. It also compiles statistics of the open air school children, and Night and Day Camp girls, determining how beneficial is this treatment, how many children are yearly restored to health, and how much good follow-up work does.

Free For Diabetics

The Wonderful Success of the Sanborn Home Treatment and the Many Men and Women of National Prominence It Has Restored to Health

If you have the slightest symptoms of diabetes or Bright's disease, lose no time in reading one of the most remarkable books of the day—"Is Diabetes Curable?" It is mailed free to anyone who will send merely their name and address. It describes the Sanborn home treatment and relates the experiences of men and women of national prominence who restored themselves to perfect health after failing with other treatments.

PART SEVEN.

"Eileen" to Open Summer Opera Cycle

Eighth Season at Municipal Theater Begins in Two Weeks — Repertory Includes "Il Trovatore," "Iolanthe" and "Fra Diavolo."

TWO weeks from tomorrow night the Municipal Theater Association will open its eighth season with a production of "Eileen," an operetta by Victor Herbert and Henry M. Blossom. Twelve different works will be presented during the summer. Six of them will be novelties in the repertory of the Forest Park Auditorium, and one of these will be a grand opera, Verdi's "Il Trovatore."

"Eileen" was Herbert's own favorite operetta, and fulfilled his life-long ambition to compose a work in celebration of Ireland, his native land. Presented here at the American Theater five years ago, it proved to be a musical essay of high rank. This will be its first production at the Municipal Theater. Blossom, the librettist, was a native St. Louisan.

The second production will be another example of the collaboration of Herbert and Blossom, and another newcomer at the Municipal Theater. It is "The Red Mill," an extravaganza which served as a prosperous conveyance for Montgomery and Stone.

"The Chocolate Soldier."

DURING the third week the association will offer a revival of "The Chocolate Soldier," a comic opera with score by Oscar Straus and book by Stanislaus Stange, who based it upon Bernard Shaw's "Arms and the Man." This work was given as the opening bill of the season of 1921.

The fourth production will also be a revival—that of "The Spring Maid," which was given at the Municipal Theater in 1922 and also in 1923. The music is by Heinrich Reinhardt, and the book by Willhelm and Willner. A new work, "The Pink Lady," will occupy the fifth week. This operetta has a score by Ivan Caryll and libretto by C. M. S. McClellan.

Special Grand Opera Cast.

THE single grand opera of the season, "Il Trovatore," has been allotted to the sixth week. For this production a special cast has been engaged. Three are members of the Metropolitan Opera Company—Frances Peralta, soprano; Marion Telva, contralto, and James Wolfe, baritone. Miss Telva is a former St. Louisan, and this will be her first appearance here in an operatic role, though she has been a soloist with the Symphony Orchestra. The other principals will be Judson House, tenor; and Greek Evans, baritone. The text will be sung in English. The association made its first sally into grand opera last year with a production of "Cavalleria Rusticana."

"Sweethearts," another Herbert operetta, will be revived for the seventh production. It was given at the Municipal Theater in 1922 and repeated in 1923. The book is by Harry B. Smith and Fred de Gresac.

"Iolanthe," the Gilbert and Sullivan operetta which Winthrop Ames has recently revived on a sumptuous scale in New York, will be presented during the season's eighth week. The ninth production will be a revival of Franz Lehar's operetta, "The Count of Luxembourg," which was given at the Municipal Theater last summer.

"Woodland," a fantasy in which the characters are birds and the costuming extraordinary, will be given during the tenth week. The score is by Gustav Luders and the libretto by Frank Pixley, who collaborated in "The Prince of Pilsen." The only previous presentation of "Woodland" in this city occurred some 20 years ago at the Olympic Theter.

Revive "Fra Diavolo."

A NOTABLE opera, "Fra Diavolo," will be revived as the eleventh production. It was given at the Municipal Theater in 1921. The music is by Daniel François Auber, composer of "La Muette de Portici," and the libretto is by Scribe. The English version was made by Rophino Lacy. The twelfth and concluding week has been assigned to a revival of Victor Herbert's fantasy, "Babes in Toyland," which was given at the Municipal Theater in 1926.

The association presents this year a new musical director in Louis Kroll. Charles Sinclair, engaged as stage manager, held that post at the Municipal Theater in 1929. The cast for the light opera productions boasts of three sopranos—Dorothy Maynard, Maude Gray and Irene Dunne, the second and third of whom are newcomers to the Munical Theater. The other principals are Thomas Conkey, baritone; Edward Mollitore, tenor; Beatrice Mershon, contralto; Detmar Poppen, bass; Robert Pitkin

Eighth Season at Municipal Theater Begins in Two Weeks — Repertory Includes "Il Trovatore," "Iolanthe" and "Fra Diavolo."

TWO weeks from tomorrow night the Municipal Theater Association will open its eighth season with a production of "Eileen," an operetta by Victor Herbert and Henry M. Blossom. Twelve different works will be presented during the summer. Six of them will be novelties in the repertory of the Forest Park Auditorium, and one of these will be a grand opera, Verdi's "Il Trovatore."

"Eileen" was Herbert's own favorite operetta, and fulfilled his life-long ambition to compose a work in celebration of Ireland, his native land. Presented here at the American Theater five years ago, it proved to be a musical essay of high rank. This will be its first production at the Municipal Theater. Blossom, the librettist, was a native St. Louisan.

The second production will be another example of the collaboration of Herbert and Blossom, and another newcomer at the Municipal Theater. It is "The Red Mill," an extravaganza which served as a prosperous conveyance for Montgomery and Stone.

"The Chocolate Soldier."

DURING the third week the association will offer a revival of "The Chocolate Soldier," a comic opera with score by Oscar Straus and book by Stanislaus Stange, who based it upon Bernard Shaw's "Arms and the Man." This work was given as the opening bill of the season of 1921.

The fourth production will also be a revival—that of "The Spring Maid," which was given at the Municipal Theater in 1922 and also in 1922. The music is by Heinrich Reinhardt, and the book by Willhelm and Willner. A new work, "The Pink Lady," will occupy the fifth week. This operetta has a score by Ivan Caryll and libretto by C. M. S. McClellan.

Special Grand Opera Cast.

THE single grand opera of the season, "Il Trovatore," has been allotted to the sixth week. For this production a special cast has been engaged. Three are members of the Metropolitan Opera Company—Frances Peralta, soprano; Marion Telva, contralto, and James Wolfe, baritone. Miss Telva is a former St. Louisan, and this will be her first appearance here in an operatic role, though she has been a soloist with the Symphony Orchestra. The other principals will be Judson House, tenor; and Greek Evans, baritone. The text will be sung in English. The association made its first sally into grand opera last year with a production of "Cavalleria Rusticana."

"Sweethearts," another Herbert operetta, will be revived for the seventh production. It was given at the Municipal Theater in 1922 and repeated in 1923. The book is by Harry B. Smith and Fred de Gresac.

"Iolanthe," the Gilbert and Sullivan operetta which Winthrop Ames has recently revived on a sumptuous scale in New York, will be presented during the season's eighth week. The ninth production will be a revival of Franz Lehar's operetta, "The Count of Luxembourg," which was given at the Municipal Theater last summer.

"Woodland," a fantasy in which the characters are birds and the costuming extraordinary, will be given during the tenth week. The score is by Gustav Luders and the libretto by Frank Pixley, who collaborated in "The Prince of Pilsen." The only previous presentation of "Woodland" in this city occurred some 20 years ago at the Olympic Theter.

Revive "Fra Diavolo."

A NOTABLE opera, "Fra Diavolo," will be revived as the eleventh production. It was given at the Municipal Theater in 1921. The music is by Daniel Francois Auber, composer of "La Muette de Portici," and the libretto is by Scribe. The English version was made by Rophino Lacy. The twelfth and concluding week has been assigned to a revival of Victor Herbert's fantasy, "Babes in Toyland," which was given at the Municipal Theater in 1920.

The association presents this year a new musical director in Louis Kroll. Charles Sinclair, engaged as stage manager, held that post at the Municipal Theater in 1926. The cast for the light opera productions boasts of three sopranos—Dorothy Maynard, Maude Gray and Irene Dunne, the second and third of whom are newcomers to the Municipal Theater. The other principals are Thomas Conkey, baritone; Edward Molitore, tenor; Bernice Mershon, contralto; Detmar Poppen, basso; Robert Pitkin

WHITFORD KANE ENGAGED AS GARDEN THEATER COMEDIAN

The Garden Theater at 7200 Olive street road, which will open its second season June 14, announces the engagement of Whitford Kane as comedian. He will play the roles of Bottom in "A Midsummer Night's Dream," Dimanche in Moliere's "Don Juan," and Sir Toby Belch in "Twelfth Night."

Kane is not only an actor but a successful playwright, his "Dark Rosaleen" having been produced by David Belasco. He is a repertory player of experience, having been a member of the Abbey Theater Company in Dublin, the Manchester Repertory Theater, the Court Theater and the Duke of York's Theater in London. In this country he has acted with repertory companies in Philadelphia, Boston and New York, and is now a member of the Goodman Theater Company of Chicago.

Preparations for the opening are under way, both in landscaping and changes of the stage, which were recommended by Thomas Wood Stevens. William A. Parson is in charge of incidental music for the productions, and Joseph Solari will direct the lighting and the scenic construction.

TCHEKOFF WINS AMAZING VOGUE ON LONDON STAGE

Four Dramas by Russian Total 500 Performances This Year, and All Made Money—"The Cherry Orchard" Played 150 Times.

By JOHN L. BALDERSTON.

LONDON (By Mail.)

THE main feature of the present London season has been the extraordinary support accorded to the work of a Russian who has been dead many years, and whose plays before the war, on the two or three occasions when they were performed by the stage societies on Sundays, were laughed at. This has been, above everything else, a Tchekoff year in the London theater.

Why the London public should suddenly have taken to this apostle of gloom, may be left for the highbrows to explain, and their explanations so far advanced have been notably contradictory. But the fact remains. Beginning in the suburbs, the Tchekoff boom grew in proportions until we had the astonishing spectacle of four Tchekoff plays running in big West End theaters in competition with one another.

Total of 500 Performances.

WE have had this season "The Cherry Orchard," "The Seagull," "Uncle Vanya" and "The Three Sisters"—all successes, and money makers, and one of them, "The Cherry Orchard," attaining the dignity of 150 performances within a stone's throw of what C. B. Cochran modestly calls "The center of the world"—Piccadilly Circus.

Adding the run of the plays together, in the suburban theaters where they started and in the West End, I find that between September and the present date there have been 500 Tchekoff nights. While it cannot be said that any managers got rich out of Tchekoff, the phenomenon remains portentous and to me inexplicable.

Komisarjevsky as Producer.

IF the Tchekoff boom could be laid to the producing genius of Theodore Komisarjevsky it would be more easily understood. This Russian, who formerly assisted in the direction of the Moscow Art Theater, has taken the London highbrows by storm. The producer always has been the Cinderella of the theatrical art in London, tossed £75 or £100 by the manager to somehow jumble a play together upon the stage, often not even given the dignity of a line on the program.

Since Granville Barker in the days before the war, and he has practically retired, there has been no producer in London, excepting Basil Dean, who has been accorded either consideration or respect, until Komisarjevsky came along.

London now has perhaps an exaggerated opinion of this Russian's merits, great as they are. The stage-craft which he has shown in putting on "Uncle Vanya" and "The Three Sisters" has been remarkable and effective, but would, I think, attract less attention in New York, where the level of production is much higher than here, and where producers have realized for years that it isn't enough to collect a good play with competent actors and some scenery and throw the actors on the stage to work things out the best they may.

Greater Furore Than Ibsen's.

THE Tchekoff vogue, however, cannot be attributed to Komisarjevsky, because the first two Tchekoff successes this season, "The Cherry Orchard" and "The Seagull," were both produced by local talent and both enjoyed long runs.

Tchekoff's aimless characters, who talk apparently at random and never do anything, his plots, which ordinary theatrical convention would condemn as not being plots at all, the utter remoteness of his interests, what one would suppose the complete apathy of the British toward the life of the downtrodden and unsuccessful middle class in provincial pre-war Russia—all these factors would seem to guarantee complete and immediate failure for Tchekoff in London, as in New York, no foreign dramatist, not even Ibsen during all the fuss and furore of the '80s, ever succeeded in capturing the attention of London as Tchekoff has done. There are only two possible explanations. One frequently advanced is that Londoners are sheep and that there is no more reason for the Tchekoff craze than for five dozen sheep to stampede across a field because a dog barks. The other is that Tchekoff is a genius.

THE most popular number in a successful revue just put on is an elaborate and lengthy parody of a Tchekoff play, written by A. P. Herbert of Punch.

That a large portion of the audience who go to this show have seen Tchekoff is evidenced by the laughter at the take-offs of particular bits from Tchekoff's plays, and the management proudly advertises that among the actors concerned in the burlesque are several who took part in the original Tchekoff productions.

BEHIND THE SCREENS

Ronald Colman has been engaged to play the role of Michael, the principal character in "Beau Geste," which Herbert Brenon will produce for next fall.

Richard Barthelmess has rented the Marshall Neilan Studios, where his coming production, "Ransom's Folly," will immediately go into production. Neilan is to guide Marion Davies' new starring production, "The Red Mill," and will not return to his own studios until he has completed this special, which is scheduled to be two or three months in the making.

Virginia Pearson, one of the very earliest "sirens" of the screen, has been added to the cast of "Silence," which Rupert Julian is directing.

"Young April," Egerton Castle's romance, is soon to be filmed with Joseph Schildkraut in the leading role. Jeanie Macpherson, scenarist for "The Ten Commandments," is working in collaboration with Douglas Doty on the adaptation of "Young April," production on which will start as soon as Schildkraut completes his featured role in "Shipwrecked."

Noah Beery has been assigned an important role in "Padlocked," Rex Beach's story which Allan Dwan is to direct. The role is that of Henry Gilbert, the father—the rich man of a small town, the sincere reformer, who unconsciously submits his only daughter to a Mid-Victorian regime of repression which finally drives her from home in search of an outlet for her individuality. Lois Moran has been cast in the leading feminine role.

George Bradley has been assigned to adapt "Daphne Grows Down," from the novel by Hetty Spiers and Langford Reed. Bradley has just completed his scenarization of "The Dangerous Mrs. Denham." "Daphne Grows Down" will be used as a Colleen Moore starring vehicle.

"As You Like It" Will Be Played In Open Air

An open-air performance of "As You Like It" will be given Tuesday night by the Shakspeare Association of Washington University on Liggett Terrace in the university campus. There will be a cast of more than 100, including lords, ladies, foresters and dancers.

Three of the principals, Harriet Moore, Melvin Maginn and Charles Dillon, were tutored by E. H. Sothern during his recent visit to St. Louis. The direction is in charge of Prof. and Mrs. Mackenzie and Prof. Webster.

It is announced that the performance will begin at 8:15 and that late comers will not be seated until the end of the first scene. In case of rain, the production will be postponed to the following night. The cast will be as follows:

The Duke, Robert A. Kissack; Frederick, Carl Krautter; Amiens, Gayle Johnson; First Lord, Samuel Howell; Jaques, Charles Dillon; Le Beau, John F. Vierling; Charles, Quentin P. Alt; Oliver, Fullerton Willhite; Orlando, Melvin Maginn; Adam, George Wulff; Touchstone, Curt Gallenkamp; Corin, Donald Chamberlain; Silvius, Eugene Bahn; William, Harold Elbert; Rosalind, Harriet Moore; Celia, Helen Bechtell; Phebe, Glen May; Audrey, Charlotte Wagner, and Hymen, Katherine Hafner. Ruth Epstein, Hildegarde Ruecker, Mildred Wild and Virginia Hays will appear as pages.

ST. LOUISANS TO PRESENT 'CAVALLERIA RUSTICANA'

Missouri Opera Company's Performance Friday Night for Benefit of Old Cathedral.

The Missouri Opera Company, an organization of St. Louis singers, will present Mascagni's "Cavalleria Rusticana" Friday night at St. Mark's Hall, Academy and Ridge avenues, for the benefit of the Old Cathedral.

Mario Lanza will appear at Turiddu, Urano Tumiati as Alfio, Anna Colina as Santuzza, Marie Balin as Lucia and Virginia Barrow as Lola. Michele Angelina will direct.

The performance will be combined with a ballet under the direction of Isabel Cabanne Tupper, with Helene Higgins as solo dancer.

Musical Play Is Season's Death-Stroke

By ALEXANDER WOOLLCOTT, Drama Critic of the New York World.

NEW YORK, May 15.

ONE night last week, the first scene of a new entertainment at the Playhouse had scarcely begun to unfold when I realized suddenly and with just a tinge of sadness that the theatrical season of 1925-1926 was over.

This entertainment was a musical comedy entitled "Kitty's Kisses"—a Brady production evolved by the simple process of digging up an old farce, sternly ignoring all the survivors of its original cast and engaging in their places a cluster of acrobatic dancers.

This restorative was being applied at the Playhouse to a moderate success of yesteryear called "Little Miss Brown," and the curtain rose on a stalled train from which a bevy of schoolgirls emerged to run prettily up and down the track. These were immediately joined in the most companionable manner by the conductors; and, at a signal from someone, they all lined up democratically on the ties, threw back their heads and warbled in pleasant unison a ditty entitled "Choo-Choo! Love."

The Duenna's Pretty Wit.

IT was then that I knew the season was over. It was then that it died for me. Later in the evening the pretty roguish wit of the libretto was fairly represented by the moment in which the duenna of the cast cried out wildly: "Oh, I know I'm just going to have another attack of nervous procrastination!" But of this saucy sally I took no note. The season was, for me, already over and, mentally, I was packing the old knapsack for the summer flight.

The "Little Miss Brown" from which this musical comedy was concocted held forth at the Playhouse some 12 years ago. Everything about it has now been kindly forgotten save, perhaps, the identity of the young person who, at that time, played little Miss Brown herself. She was a girl from the Art Students' League who, on the strength of several amateur performances with the other students and a short season of one-night stands in the company of Harry Woodruff, was rashly regarded as an actress ready for the leading role of a Broadway production. Very pretty she was, with a droll, demure stroke of comedy all her own and hands that are still two of the six most eloquent hands in the American theater. Her name was—and in fact still is—Madge Kennedy.

Second "Garrick Gaieties."

OF course, I am the only one who knows the season is over and the foolish managers go on making new productions. For instance, the young folk who hang around the Theater Guild got together again on Monday and presented themselves in a new edition of the "Garrick Gaieties"—a rather less than so-so musical revue, containing, to be sure, one really magnificent burlesque of a musical comedy called "Rose of Arizona."

For this they have succeeded in unearthing an ingenue who suggests nothing in the world so forcibly as a rather dingy Mary Pickford, and a young tenor who looks precisely like the American soldier as he was imagined by the artists who drew for the magazine covers during the war. These two burst into duets on all occasions, their harmonies complicated by their visible and increasing distaste for each other. Their most recurrent song has a refrain which runs something like this:

"It may rain when the sun
stops shining.
It may rain when the sky is gray."

But the high moment of "Rose of Arizona" comes when American womanhood is insulted by some greasers and the entire cast marches off to war singing:

"Hurrah for Pershing and Coolidge,
And to aitch-with Mexico!"

Which reminds me of one odd phenomenon of the stage on which I have yet to hear anyone comment. Nowadays in such plays as "Rain" and "What Price Glory," you hear the American language pretty much as it is spoken in Pullman smokers, billiard rooms, campus clubs and Park Avenue tea parties. Not quite, of course, for the ears of the playgoers are not yet ready for the shock of the vulgate at its full strength.

Quaint Puritan Survival.

BUT in musical comedy—the very shows which the John Roach Stratons probably think of as the most sinful—a curious

FLOWER SHOW OPENS SATURDAY AFTERNOON

Annual Event Will Feature Possibilities of Gardening on Small Plots.

The seventh annual Amateur Flower Show of the Garden Club of St. Louis will open next Saturday afternoon at Shaw's Garden, Tower Grove avenue and Flora boulevard, and will also be open Sunday, May 23, from 10 a. m. to 6 p. m. The slogan adopted for this year's show is "Better garden—better homes—better city," and the show is given to illustrate the possibilities of gardening on small plots, and in back yards.

There are many cash prizes as well as other awards of garden tools, silver bowls and vases, choice bulbs and seeds and special prizes for children's entries. In order to give those who have no gardens an opportunity to exhibit there are prizes for miniature gardens made of artificial materials on small trays, for window boxes, and for floral arrangements for dinners, luncheons and other occasions. The flowers in the last class may be purchased as the prize is awarded on the arrangement.

It is urged that the public remember that entries are desired of familiar backyard plants, old-fashioned flowers, hardy annuals and perennials, and flowering shrubs common to many city homes. Members of the Garden Club do not compete with the general public for the prizes in these classes, and a premium list of the awards for all classes may be obtained at Shaw's Garden. All entries for the show must be made on tags furnished by the Garden Club, and these also may be obtained at Shaw's Garden.

Special prizes are offered children in the miniature garden class, and for school groups who will enter vegetables. Stress is laid on the fact that no prize is offered for collections of wild flowers of any description, as the Garden Club of St. Louis stands for wild flower preservation, and urges that such be left in their natural setting.

Sculptors of St. Louis and St. Louis County have been invited to display pieces suitable for garden decorations, and a bronze medal with cash prize of $50 is offered for the most suitable and artistic entry. The jury of awards in this class will include local artists appointed by the St. Louis Artists' Guild.

MUSICAL PLAY DEALS FATAL BLOW TO STAGE SEASON IN NEW YORK

priasiness is still maintained, and the traditions are still those which governed the publishers back in 1896, when so shocking a he-man word as "damn" has survived in into print only by scrupulously omitting the vowel—a curious process akin to an apologetic "Excuse my glove," a process somehow regarded as a refining one.

Why this same skittishness about "hell" and "damn" has survived in musical comedy, I cannot for the life of me imagine, but the "Rose of Arizona" burlesque observes it delightfully by having the entire chorus shout shrilly and nasally: "To aitch with Mexico!"

The "Garrick Gaieties" is a recurrent entertainment, put on each spring by the young folk who swarm underfoot at the Theater Guild. The aspiring youths and maidens who, on a moment's notice, stand ready to carry trays or dust parlors or rush on as threatening mobs in any of the Guild's productions at practically no financial recompense whatever, are thus allowed once a year to cut-up for the amusement of such passing playgoers as want to fling some money around.

This junior group should be distinguished from the Guild's school, which will have its outlet up the river at Scarborough, where it will give performances in the open-air theater there. The phrase "each spring" may be a trifle misleading, for after all, this is only the second year of the "Garrick Gaieties." But in this country anything a year old is regarded inevitably as one of our more hoary institutions.

The title of the revue was suggested last spring, after profound cogitation, by your correspondent. In the doldrums of this year's program there were moments when the juvenility and the faintly irritating quality of the entertainment made me wish I had suggested: "The Measles of 1926."

The Three Best Plays.

THE season in retrospect offers little provocative material for sage comment. Its best performances, I think, were those given by Emily Stevens as Hedda Gabler, Glen Hunter in "Young Woodley," June Walker in "The Glass Slipper," Alice Brady in "Bride of the Lamb," Laurette Taylor in "In a Garden" and the enchanting Raquel Meller. Its best plays, I think, were "The Wisdom Tooth," "Young Woodley" and "The Dybbuk"—and all three of these still linger for visitors to New York to see.

"Young Woodley" is that bittersweet play of English school life in which a gangling, troubled lad of 17 falls head over heels in love with the youngish wife of his mathematics teacher. Such heartache either induces a lump in the onlooker's throat or sends him into gales of laughter, according to his philosophy.

The "Young Woodley" audience have kept the Belmont crowded since Thanksgiving, but they have been difficult to play to. Out of his experiences as a player, Glenn Hunter seems obsessed with a fear that they will be increasing difficult in direct ratio to the distance from New York. For this reason, he is now disinclined to play "Young Woodley" on tour at all, and the distant playgoer will be left to contemplate the phenomenon of a play running to crowded houses for 10 months and then entering upon an immediate and indefinite engagement in limbo.

The Hunter plans for next season are not yet announced, but it is at least a cautious prediction that he will play the helpless young murderer in "An American Tragedy," the play which Patrick Kearney has just fashioned from Dreiser's overwhelming novel.

A Valedictory.

WHEREFORE the visitor to our town must see "Young Woodley" here, if at all, and, because the inelastic and largely foolish application of the child-labor laws to the jealously guarded children of the theater would make its tour a difficult and harassed one, "The Wisdom Tooth" is also unlikely to go forth in search of playgoers when its day is done on Broadway.

"Young Woodley," then, and "The Wisdom Tooth" stand first in my recommendations to visitors. For an evening of uproarious laughter I recommend "The Cocoanuts," which will be tricked out with an entirely new Berlin score before June. But for the visitor to this town who can spend only one evening in the theater I am inclined to advise that he concentrate on "Iolanthe." And lest this seem to be the too partial benediction of a confirmed Gilbertian, let me report that on Saturday night Samuel Merwin, the novelist, broke down and confessed that he had attended four performances of "Iolanthe" in three days.

And if, in these recommendations, you detect a faint note of valedictory, it is because, with this dispatch this series of pastoral letters comes to an end, not to be resumed until August. Your correspondent is headed for an island in a Vermont lake—a mere midget of an island which looks for all the world as though Maxfield Parrish, out strolling one fine day from his home on the other side of the hill, had drawn it and left it there by mistake. There you sleep in moonlight filtered through pine needles, and on that island there is no theater and no typewriter.

ORGAN RECITAL TODAY ENDS CHARLES GALLOWAY SERIES

Will Be at 3 P. M. in Graham Memorial Chapel, Washington U., and Is Free to Public.

The eighth and last concert of Charles Galloway's series of organ recitals in Graham Memorial chapel, Washington University, will take place at 3 o'clock this afternoon. He will be assisted by the chapel choir. These recitals, free to the public, are a feature of the university's extension course.

The instrumental numbers will be Maitland's concert and overture in A, Schumann's Canon in B Minor, Vierne's "Carillon," Bach's Toccata and Fugue in D Minor, Buck's Variations on a Scotch air and Kinder's "A Summer Morning." The choir will sing Holst's "To the Unknown God" and Buzzi Peccia's "Gloria."

"EILEEN" TO BEGIN EIGHTH SEASON OF MUNICIPAL OPERA

and William J. McCarthy, comedians; and Roland Woodruff, juvenile. General rehearsals will begin tomorrow at the Jefferson Memorial.

Executive Productions Committee.

THE management of this summer enterprise is intrusted by the Municipal Theater Association to an Executive Productions Committee composed of representative St. Louisans, who, on the opening night, will have devoted nine months to their task. Two of the personnel this year are newcomers on the committee—Harry L. Salisbury, Director of Public Welfare, who is chairman, and Charles Talbert, who has served for a number of years as a director of the association. He is chairman of the Subcommittee on Costumes.

Three members of the committee have held similar places since the beginning of the Municipal Theater Association in 1919. They are former Mayor Henry W. Kiel, Nelson Cunliff and Arthur Siegel. Kiel is chairman of the Cast Committee. Cunliff served as chairman of the Executive Productions Committee from 1919 until last summer, when he resigned this post and became chairman of the Committee on Stage and Stage Settings. Siegel has been chairman of the Committee on Publicity throughout the existence of the enterprise.

M. E. Holderness, vice chairman of the Executive Productions Committee, has been a member since 1923, and is chairman of the association's Finance Committee. Thomas H. Lovelace has been on the committee for seven years and is chairman of a subcommittee which supervises the issuance of tickets to charitable organizations. Fred W. Pape, Commissioner of Parks and Recreation, has served on the committee since 1921, and is chairman of the Subcommittee on Auditorium. Otto E. Rugg, who is chairman of the Subcommittee on Concessions, was elected to the Executive Productions Committee in 1922, and has served continuously since that time.

There are four ex officio members of the committee—H. J. Pettengill, Mona B. Crutcher, Walter Weisenburger and David E. Russell—president, secretary, treasurer and manager, respectively, of the Municipal Theater Association.

EPISCOPAL CHURCH IS FREE OF DEBT

Deficit of $1,500,000 Wiped Out by Concerted Efforts of 84 Dioceses.

By the Associated Press.

RACINE, Wis., May 15.—For the first time since 1919, the Episcopal Church in America is free of debt, except to its own reserve funds, Louis B. Franklin, vice president and treasurer of the National Episcopal Council, reported to the body in session here today.

The financial status of the church was brought about as a result of funds contributed since last October by dioceses throughout the country to extinguish a deficit of $1,500,000, Franklin stated at the opening session of the council. Outside of money borrowed from reserve deposit acounts in the sum of $708,000, "we don't owe a penny to anybody," he said.

The reserve deposit accounts are special funds available for use by the missionary society, in effect, the church itself, at such times as its income may be less than its expenditures, with a provision that the money thus borrowed be returned as soon as possible.

Franklin informed the council that approximately $1,250,000 have been pledged for wiping out the deficit, of which a million dollars have already been paid in. Fifty-four of the 84 dioceses that made pledges, he said, have raised their pledges in full. This is in addition to approximately $3,000,000 pledged by the dioceses under the quota system for the work of the church in 1926.

The movement for wiping out the Episcopal deficit started on the floor of the general convention in New Orleans last October. Practically the full amount of the deficit was pledged during a five-hour session of the convention. To guard against further deficits, the convention adopted a resolution under which appropriations of the general church are limited to the income in sight for the current year. This policy is being enforced during 1926, Mr. Franklin said.

ROAD MADE OF BROKEN DISHES

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, May 15.—A road paved with broken chinaware from London restaurants was one sight taken in by members of the American Hotel Association during their English sight-seeing trip. They were told that millions of crushed cups, saucers, plates and other crockery broken at the Wembley exhibition and scores of tea shops were used.

The road reminded some of the visitors of the highways between New Orleans and Portchartrain, La., constructed of oyster shells.

WORLD'S FAIR POSTER BY NOTED ARTIST

Dan Smith's "Voice of the Liberty Bell" Included in Post-Dispatch Today.

Dan Smith, pioneer newspaper magazine artist and one of the foremost illustrators of today, has painted "The Voice of the Liberty Bell," which has been selected as an official poster of the Sesqui-Centennial International Exposition to be held in Philadelphia June 1 to Dec. 1. This poster is included as a supplement with the Sunday Post-Dispatch today.

Smith, who was born in Iceland, for many years was on the staff of the New York World and other newspapers but has been doing syndicate work for some time.

Smith has depicted in poster form the story of the birth and growth of the nation from the time the Liberty Bell rang out the news of American freedom 150 years ago until today. From the mouth of the bell, at the lower left of the poster, come 13 golden stars representing the original states. They merge into the blue skirt of Columbia, who gathers them up and weaves them into a nation now composed of 48 states. The present nation is represented by the national emblem. In the background is the tower of Independence Hall.

62,000 CHILDREN TO SING AT EUCHARISTIC CONGRESS

Electrically Controlled Organ Being Built Here for Installation at Soldiers' Field in Chicago.

An organ, said to be one of the largest ever constructed in the United States, is being made at the George Kilgen & Son's factory, 4016 Union boulevard, for the Eucharistic Congress to be held in the Soldiers' Field stadium in Chicago June 20-24.

It will be installed in a concrete chamber 30 feet by 25, and will be operated by Dr. Louis Brown, organist of St. Patrick's Church in Chicago. The keyboard will be placed on a movable platform which may be rolled from one side of the field to the other, and will be electrically controlled.

A choir of 62,000 school children will sing at the pontificial high mass accompanied by the organ, which is capable of producing the effect of an entire orchestra. Approximately 50 miles of wire will be used in the electrical control system. The pipes are of [illegible] varying in size from less than [illegible] foot for the upper register to [illegible] feet for the pedal pipes. The instrument is to be shipped in sections to Chicago.

Dramatic School Gives Play.

A play called "The Husband [illegible] Clover" will be a feature of a program of sketches, tableaux and dances to be given Friday night at the American Theater as the annual recital of the Wientge School of Dramatic Expression.

CHICAGO, May 15.—The fifteenth season of summer opera at Ravinia will begin June 26 and end Sept. 6. In the season of 10 weeks and three days the management will present 39 operas, of which seven will be new to Ravinia.

These are "L'Heure Espagnol," "Napho," "Haensel und Gretel," "Gianni Schicchi," "La Vida Breve," "Madame Sans-Gene" and "Pelleas and Melisande."

The remainder of the operas are: "La Traviata," "Cavalleria Rusticana," "Rigoletto," "Aida," "Lucia," "Carmen," "Pagliacci," "Madame Butterfly," "Faust," "La Tosca," "La Boheme," "Secret of Suzanne," "The Jewels of the Madonna," "Manon," "Il Trovatore," "The Barber of Seville," "L'Elisir," "L'Amore del Tre Re," "Don Pasquale," "La Navarraise," "Romeo and Juliet," "Martha," "Tosca," "Lohengrin," "The Tales of Hoffmann," "Laknie," "Andrea Chenier," "Samson and Delilah," "Le Diavolo," "Manon Lescaut," "Ballo in Maschera" and "La Traviata." They will be given in Italian, French, German and English, with the probability of at least one "La Vida Breve," in Spanish.

The list of artists will include: Lucrezia Bori, Elizabeth Rethberg, Stella Mallus, Alice Gentle, Florence Macbeth, Margery Maxwell, Helen Freund, Ina Bourskaya, Ada Paggi, Phinne Falso, Anna Correnti, Giovanni Martinelli, Edward Johnson, Mario Chamlee, Jose Mojica, Danise, Mario Basiola, Louis Danise, Mario, Basiola, Louis Angelo, Desire Defrere, Leon Rothier, Virgilio Lazzari, Vittorio Trevisan, Paolo Ananian; conductors, Gennaro Papi, Louis Hasselmans; assistant conductors, Wilfrid Pelletier, Fausto Cleva; concert conductor, Eric de Lamarter; stage director, Armando Agnini.

37 PERFECT PAPERS IN TEST AT PUBLIC SCHOOL CONCERT

Tests conducted by Director Ganz in the children's concerts on March 9 and 11 resulted in 137 papers which were correct not only in answers but in spelling. So, to select the prize winners, a drawing was held at the Symphony office and awards were given to the following:

The questions called for the identification of various melodies, rhythms and styles of music. The tests consist of sets of musical figures word puzzles and subscriptions to a musical magazine.

LIBERTY BELL ON NEW POSTAGE STAMP ISSUE

Local Post-Office to Start Sale of 2-Cent Denomination Monday, 5-Cent Ones May 29.

In honor of the 150th anniversary of the Declaration of Independence, the Liberty Bell, which proclaimed liberty throughout the land unto all the inhabitants thereof on the nation's first Fourth of July, will appear for the first time on a United States postage stamp. The Postoffice Department will put out this issue next Monday. The first of these stamps will be obtainable in St. Louis is in the near future.

This 2-cent issue will be followed May 29 by a 5-cent stamp commemorating the unveiling at Washington, D. C., of a memorial to John Ericsson, inventor of the monitor, which fought the world's first battle between iron-clads in its historic engagement with the Merrimac.

Although this is the sesqui-centennial year, United States postage stamps are only 79 years old. Before that there were provisional issues by Postmasters, such as the St. Louis bear stamps of 1845-47, which catalogue now from $150 to $2000 apiece. But the first United States issue was put out in 1847, a 5-cent stamp bearing the portrait of Benjamin Franklin and a 10-cent stamp on which George Washington's likeness appears.

Designs on Stamps.

In the designs used on United States stamps, scenes, typical figures and pictures of inanimate objects outnumber about two to one the individual portraits.

Speed and progress are the subjects of many of the designs. The issue of 1869 has the picture of a horseman, of a locomotive — very different from the fast express of the 1901 issue—and of a steamship. The automobile appeared for the first time on a stamp in the 1901 issue, which carries also pictures of the Sault Ste. Marie Canal and the bridge at Niagara Falls. It was not until 1918 that the airplane first appeared on a stamp.

Historical subjects have also been favorites of the Postal Department designers, urged on, of course, by the committees promoting various anniversary celebrations. The Chicago Exposition of 1893 called out the largest number of pictures on a single subject. The landing of Columbus had been commemorated on a stamp in 1869, but in 1893 there were 16 varieties, showing not only the landing, but pictures of the discoverer's fleet and of nearly every incident in his life except that of the celebrated egg.

Pere Marquette on the Mississippi, Fremont in the Rockies, the founding of Jamestown, Fulton's Clermont, the first steamboat; the discovery of San Francisco Bay, the landing of the Pilgrims, the landing at Fort Orange in the Huguenot-Walloon issue, and Washington at Cambridge bring the list down to the present anno domini.

Presidents Honored.

The end of the great war brought out the Victory issue of 1919—a figure of Victory surrounded by the flags of the Allies. The Statue of Liberty, the Capitol at Washington, the Arlington amphitheater and the Lincoln memorial are included in the issues since 1922.

Warriors, statesmen and others barely outnumber the Presidents pictured on postage stamps. Here is the list: Franklin, Stanton, who was Lincoln's Secretary of State; Henry Clay, Daniel Webster, Gen. Winfield Scott, Alexander Hamilton, Commodore Perry, Gen. Tecumseh Sherman, who sleeps at Calvary Cemetery here; Chief Justice Marshall, Admiral Farragut, Edward Livingston, Columbus, Capt. John Smith, Pocahontas, Balboa, Nathan Hale and Martha Washington—17 in all.

Washington was the first President whose features looked out from a postage stamp. Jefferson came next, then Jackson, Lincoln, Taylor, Garfield, Grant, Madison, Benjamin Harrison, Monroe, McKinley, Roosevelt, Hayes, Cleveland, Harding and Wilson—a total of 16.

Mrs. L. B. Hyatt

"When I was growing, my mother gave me Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It was a great benefit to me at that time. Mother used it herself and it benefited her wonderfully, so knew when I was in need of a tonic that she could depend upon the 'Favorite Prescription.' I think it one's duty to recommend a remedy when you know it is a reliable one."—Mrs. L. B. Hyatt, 1603 Av. E., Council Bluffs, Iowa.

Your health is your most valuable asset. So, why not get this Prescription today from your druggist? Write Dr. Pierce, President of the Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y., for free advice.

Mrs. W. Baumgart Tells How Cuticura Healed Children

"My baby had eczema on her face and hands. It broke out in a red rash on the sides of her face and troubled her at night so we had to put mittens on her to prevent her scratching. My little girl, eight years old, also had eczema. It broke out in a dry rash, itched very much and caused her lots of discomfort, especially in hot weather.

"I used the Cuticura Soap and Ointment on both of them and they were healed in about two months. I always recommend Cuticura Soap and Ointment to anyone suffering from eczema." (Signed) Mrs. W. Baumgart, 10113 Burton Ave., Cleveland, Ohio, July 16, 1925.

Use Cuticura Soap, Ointment and Talcum to promote and maintain skin purity, skin comfort and skin health. Soap to cleanse, Ointment to heal, and Talcum to powder.

ACIDS IN STOMACH CAUSE INDIGESTION

Create Gas, Sourness and Pain How to Treat.

Medical authorities state that nearly nine-tenths of the cases of stomach trouble, indigestion, sourness, burning, gas, bloating nausea, etc., are due to an excess of hydrochloric acid in the stomach and not as some believe to a lack of digestive juices. The delicate stomach lining is irritated, digestion is delayed and food sours, causing the disagreeable symptoms which every stomach sufferer knows so well.

Artificial digestants are not needed in such cases and may do real harm. Try laying aside all digestive aids and instead get from any druggist a few ounces of Bisurated Magnesia and take a teaspoonful in a quarter glass of water right after eating. This sweetens the stomach, prevents the formation of excess acid and there is no sickness, gas or pain. Bisurated Magnesia (in powder or tablet form—never liquid or milk) is harmless to the stomach, inexpensive to take and is the most efficient form of magnesia for stomach purposes. It is used by thousands of people who enjoy their meals with no more fear of indigestion.

FELT SLUGGISH, TIRED AND DROWSY ALL DAY

"I used to have a tight feeling in my chest after meals, a feeling that made me want to take just a good, long breath," says Mr. Ely Crow, of Statham, Ga. "I began taking Thedford's Black-Draught for this and didn't have it any more," he adds.

"I used to get sluggish, and feel just as tired when I would get up in the morning as when I went to bed. I would get drowsy all during the day, and would have no energy, no appetite. I would take two or three large doses of Black-Draught, and in few days I'd be so hungry I could eat anything, and when I would get up mornings I'd feel 'full of pep,' ready for work.

"This made me a great believer in Black-Draught, so I recommend it to others for the good it has done me, and for the money it has saved me. People tell me that I must think Black-Draught will relieve everything, but, of course, I do not go that far in my belief. I know, though, that in my case I have found it just as recommended."

There is nothing very unusual about Mr. Crow's statement, and yet many people fail to heed these common warnings of constipation until they get real sick. Thousands of men and women take Thedford's Black-Draught at the first sign of constipation, and soon feel fine, ready for work, play and pleasure.

Black-Draught is a natural remedy for the ills due to constipation and indigestion, since only leaves and roots of medicinal plants are used as ingredients. When you take Black-Draught, the digestive organs are helped in a healthful, natural way, and normal elimination is restored without the sickening effects that characterize the use of powerful mineral drugs.

Get a 25c package of Black-Draught, today. Sold by druggists everywhere. JA-32

JEWISH HOSPITAL TO BE DEDICATED TODAY

Services at 10 A. M. Will Mark Oficial Opening of New $2,500,000 Institution.

Dedication ceremonies for the $2,500,000 new Jewish Hospital at Kingshighway and Forest Park boulevard will be held at 10 a. m. today. Rabbi Leon Harrison will deliver the invocation and Rabbi Isaac Halpern, the benediction.

Addresses will be made by Dr. Hannah W. Loeb, Dr. Llewellyn Sale, the Rev. H. C. Cloud, president of St. Louis University; Herbert S. Hadley, chancellor of Washington University, and Aaron Waldheim, president of the hospital. Ninety-nine physicians and surgeons, headed by Dr. Loeb, will be on the staff.

Thursday the 110 patients at the old hospital, at 5415 Delmar boulevard, will be moved into their new quarters. The new hospital has a sub-basement, a basement, ground floor and seven stories; the ground floor and first two stories are of Bedford stone, and the upper stories of red Harvard brick and terra cotta. The building is H-shaped, giving outside windows to all rooms. Its architects, Graham, Anderson, Probst & White, a Chicago firm, together with Dr. S. S. Goldwater of the Mount Sinai Hospital, New York, medical advisor, and with members of the hospital board, sent a delegation on a two weeks' tour of metropolitan hospitals before beginning work in order to embody in it the best features of other institutions. Ninety per cent of the work and material was supplied by St. Louis firms.

The institution will continue the nonsectarian character of the old hospital, where 45 per cent of the patients have been non-Jewish. Ninety-five per cent of the funds for its construction, however, were contributed by Jews.

The lot, 240 by 280 feet, cost $200,000; the equipment, $200,000; the building, $2,000,000. Of the total cost, $1,250,000 was privately subscribed before a drive in March, 1924, netted an additional $750,000. There remains a deficit of $500,000. This is in addition to the expected annual deficit of from $100,000 to $150,000, which will be met by funds supplied by the Jewish Federation of St. Louis. Single subscriptions to the hospital fund ranged from $1 to $125,000. Some of the campaign pledges signed by subscribers were collected by process of law when the signers attempted to repudiate them.

Beds for 300 Patients.

Accommodations have been provided for 300 patients. There are 140 beds in free wards, 70 in wards containing two beds each, and 90 in private rooms. Besides being equipped with indirect lighting, electric fans, toilet and French balcony overlooking Forest Park, each private room also has an attachment for radio reception, another for X-ray work and an electrocardiographic extension to record heart-beat readings instantly at a centrally located heart-station. The furniture is of light-weight hollow steel, the beds being the latest extensible type. Rooms are equipped with both a heavy noiseless door of steel and with a half-size swinging door, called a fly.

There is a roof garden for convalescents during the day, and for entertainments at night; it surveys most of the West End of the city. On the ground floor is a sun porch for heliotherapy. There is a pharmacy, an animal room for guinea pigs, rats and rabbits doomed to serve science; an observation ward for suspicious cases that might break out within the hospital, a vermin-extraction machine; a laundry that looks like the interior of a battleship.

No dispensary, however, is in the building. The hospital will participate instead in the clinical work of the Washington University Medical School, nearby.

OSAGE COUNTRY CLUB BUILDING UNDER WAY

Construction Work Has Added Value to Nearby Properties Developers Say.

The Osage Country Club, located in the new residential suburb of Osage Hills, Big Bend road and the Meramec River, and construction work on the club building, swimming pool and 18-hole golf course, has created unusual values in the Osage Hills district, and has increased the value of other property all around that section, according to Bixby-Smith, Inc., owners and developers of Osage Hills.

While this upward trend in property values has been true in every region adjoining or near any country club, the rise in price in the Osage Hills district on account of the Osage County Club has been clear out of the ordinary, setting a record in property near a country club. Officials of the company state that the demand for residential locations has increased the sales of the first unit of the country club grounds, having amounted to over 60 per cent of the total home locations offered.

The fact that the Osage Country Club, of which Nelson Cunliff is president, was organized and financed to assume all development without any initiation fee to members, a guarantee against all assessments, and with only nominal annual dues, has caused it to jump into popular favor.

The demand for this property and the increased value of it has been due in large part on account of the home advantages not to be found in the ordinary subdivision, which offers every recreational and pleasurable facility, as well as open space in community parkways and the club grounds and golf course, together with ideal social contacts. This ideal environment is making a direct appeal to parents who desire the best surroundings for their children, without the drawbacks of the congested districts of the city.

PRUDENTIAL INSURANCE CO.

APRIL LOANS $16,188,131

James M. Franciscus, loan correspondent for the Prudential Insurance Co. of America has received from the mortgage loan department the following report from the home office at Newark, N. J.

Mortgage loans amounting to $16,188,131 were made during the month of April by the Prudential Insurance Co. of America, it was announced at the home offices here today by A. M. Woodruff, vice president in charge of this phase of the company's activities.

Of these loans $10,257,644 was on dwellings and apartment houses, $1,594,100 was on city property other than dwellings and apartment houses and $4,336,387 was on farm property.

Living accommodations for 2992 families in the United States and Canada were made possible through the investments in the first-mentioned classes of property. The $10,257,644 thus allocated was divided as follows: $7,246,595 on 1658 dwellings accommodating 1879 families and $3,011,050 on 115 apartments housing 1113 families.

Comparison of loans made on homes during the first four months of this year with those made over a similar period last year indicates the sincerity of the Prudential in its determination to help good citizens to acquire their own homes. The 1926 total is $40,625,308 on 6922 dwellings and 384 apartments housing 11,710 families. In 1925 the total was $31,643,575 on 5784 dwellings and 280 apartments, accommodating 9704 families.

30-ACRE TRACT NEAR SUNSET HILL CLUB TO BE DEVELOPED

C. C. Powers, sales manager for the H. M. Schmitz Real Estate Co., announces they have a contract for the development of a tract of land of approximately 30 acres on the Geyer road opposite Sunset Hill Country Club, also having a frontage on the Gravois and Denny roads, which will be developed immediately and known as Sunset Club Court.

Sunset Club Court is owned by a syndicate composed of Harry S. Wheeler, former president of Sunset Hill Country Club; T. A. Hennigan, W. C. Anderson and W. L. M. Clark, all of whom are members of the club.

The Schmitz company will have entire management of the sales and developments. The natural wooded sections of the tract will not be disturbed. The plans and designs are now being worked out by the Pitzmann company. They will provide for winding drives and improvements consisting of hard ballast streets, 40 feet in width. Sites in this tract will have an average frontage of 85 to 100 feet and a generous depth.

These sites will be offered only to members of Sunset Hill Country Club for a limited time, after which the remaining portion will be offered to a selection other than club members.

HOME OF NATIONAL PET SHOPS ONE OF MOST MODERN IN U. S.

The new home of National Pet Shops at 3101-03-05-11 Olive street, formally opened last week, is one of the most modern in the country, according to Gales A. Halfin, its proprietor.

A new two-story building, with all the paraphernalia for monkeys, birds, dogs and other animals available as pets, has been erected at a large outlay. There are separate spaces for small animals, large birds and reptiles. The stock comprises hundreds of birds, monkeys, dogs and other animals. The shops has 16 men and women employed. Five are in the office, three men in charge of the livestock, one woman devotes her entire time to feeding and watering birds, while seven others are employed as chauffeurs, packers and salesmen.

According to Halfin the National Pet Shops during 1925 sold more than 15,000 canaries and hundreds of monkeys, dogs and other animals.

BIG HANDKERCHIEF FOR WOMEN

Return of Tailored Suits Believed Reason for Paris Fad.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, May 15.—Another "mannish mode" has been adopted by women in Paris. The most recent fashion is man-sized handkerchiefs.

Whether the larger handkerchiefs owe their popularity to spring colds or to the fact that tailored suits have returned as fashionable wear, the experts are unable to say.

IMPROVED REFORM EQUIPMENT FOR BOONVILLE URGED

Missouri Association for Criminal Justice Says Machinery in State Institution Has Become Obsolete.

Discussion of the needs of the Missouri reformatory, at Boonville, for improved facilities for training of prisoners is contained in a copyrighted report of the Missouri Association for Criminal Justice.

This statement, dealing with pardons, paroles and commutations, was prepared by A. F. Kuhlman, assistant operating director of the association in its crime survey. A summary of his findings was presented at a meeting at Jefferson City Jan. 12 last, but the complete report now is available. In it he said:

"While in this survey no attempt has been made to study the internal administration of the reformatory as such, it is quite evident that in no department is enough provision made for industrial training. Training, machinery and equipment are inadequate, and few inmates can be taught to perform useful work before they are paroled. The State is thus neglecting one of the first essentials in preparing offenders to make their way after release and to achieve a normal place in the world.

Facilities Inadequate.

"The equipment and facilities for industrial training are inadequate in practically every department. In many instances the heads of departments admitted to the author that the machinery and equipment provided in their departments was obsolete and that they were not prepared to give to the boys and young men an adequate preparation to earn a living. Thus, for instance, in the printing shop six boys were engaged in setting type by hand. They try to work with a machine which is nothing but junk.

"This means that, regardless of how proficient they may become in this work, they will not have learned to operate a linotype by the time they are released from the institution. Yet they cannot get a position in any modern printing shop unless they can do so. It also means that there can be little incentive for a boy to put forth his efforts in the mastery of the work of this department. There is little reward of permanent economic value ahead because mastery of the machinery in this department will not enable the boy to succeed when he is released from the institution.

"If this department were equipped with modern machinery a large portion of the State's printing job could be carried on in this institution, and each year a large class might be trained to become proficient in operating a lino-casting machine.

Blacksmith Shop Obsolete.

"Again, in the mechanical division we find a blacksmith shop that would have been suitable 20 years ago, but we do not find any training in that division which would prepare the boys who spend their time there to take a position in a garage. It is obvious that if the department were properly equipped mechanically and had trained instructors, a great many boys might each year complete such preliminary training as would enable them to find remunerative work in garages and mechanical shops.

"In the tailor department there is no equipment or training which would enable the inmates to become proficient tailors. All that we have is a poorly equipped patch shop.

"The barber shop is merely a room in which inmates do the barber work for inmates. There is neither training nor equipment for the training of qualified barbers.

"There are always a great many boys who would like to learn bookkeeping and stenography. Yet in the commercial department of the school there is no teacher trained to teach the boys in either of these activities. There is no equipment except one old worn-out typewriter.

"Department heads and the superintendent frequently have urged the prison officials to make more adequate provision for industrial training, but without success.

"One of the essentials in correctional work is to help offenders acquire wholesome habits in the use of leisure hours. The institution is greatly hampered in such work. First, it has no gymnasium in which the inmates of the institution might spend their leisure hours in athletic games and physical exercise. When the weather becomes unfavorable so that it is impossible to carry on recreational activities in the open, such activities have to be suspended and many of the men have to be herded in the dingy basement of their dormitory building.

"There is no reading room or library other than a single small room in which some books are stored, most of them old and not sufficiently interesting to be read by many of the inmates. In the absence of a reading room, library or gymnasium, in which the long evening hours might be spent in constructive pursuits beneficial to the physical, mental and moral welfare of the prisoners, they are put to bed at 7 or 7:30 o'clock in the evening. This means that the institution loses an opportunity to build up strong, healthy bodies and minds.

"The principal of the school work has attempted to make a study of the inmates, but he is employed to attend to such a great multitude of other duties that he cannot be expected to do much with the task of individualization. There is at present not even a segregation of vicious and degenerate offenders from those who are first offenders and who would be very responsive to reform influences."

in WISCONSIN the Land O'Lakes

new delights await you—

LIVE again with Frontenac, Marquette and Joliet! Paddle down the historic rivers and lakes whose gleaming surfaces were broken by the paddles of these daring explorers during the picturesque French regime. Enjoy the thrill of discovery—from the "great river" to the "shining big sea water"; adventure beckons men who cannot resist it. And who can?

Broad prairies spreading away beyond the reach of the eye; bold, heavily wooded bluffs; sparkling lakes and rivers—Wisconsin invites you to this land of historic legend and scenic beauty. Step into God's sunshine, where pale cheeks become tanned by Nature's tonic, where unused muscles become hard and strong; where the spirit of Manitou imbues you with the love of nature, and the tread of the red man still echoes down the forest aisles.

Plan your vacation now—the woods and waters of Wisconsin, the Land O'Lakes—await you. Good concrete and hard-surfaced roads invite you—splendid accommodations will greet you.

The Trade Winds of Fortune fan South Texas today!

Out of the east they blow,—the salt-laden, unfailing sea breezes—bringing comfort by day and restful sleep by night the summer through. Fanning South Texas, the trade winds lay the spell of the sea on this fruitful tip of the Mid-Continent area, which centers at Corpus Christi.

Here a deep-water harbor, hooked to the nation by two great railroad systems and to Mexico by another direct line, will soon be ready for world-wide commmerce. The Corpus Christi port is not a local project. The United States government and the state of Texas are helping build it, realizing its economic importance to the state and nation.

With the port opened in September, Corpus Christi will occupy a commanding position as a hub of commerce, industry and agriculture. Running up to the very gates of the city is a vast plain of fertile, well drained land—millions of productive acres, already dotted with prosperous farms. Natural gas wells of immense capacity furnish abundant cheap fuel for industrial use. Oil fields are being opened up.

Corpus Christi sits in the center of this prosperity zone. Its resources and assets are tangible. As development continues to unfold, the road to quick, sure profit widens. Investors first on the ground will profit most.

Any business man will be convinced. Investigate for yourself.

The Spell of the Great Lakes

Historic, mysterious, romantic Great Lakes . . . revered by the Indians . . . their sky-blue waters crimsoned by many a bloody conquest . . . today the waterways for commerce of the world.

Detroit is in the heart of the Great Lakes region. Here you see them from picturesque motor roads . . . you cruise them on magnificent steamers.

They still weave their spell of olden days . . . they still preserve their beauty of marvelously stimulating scenery. Their singing waters fall on snow-white beaches, where bathing is clean and bracing.

But the Great Lakes are only one of many attractions at Detroit. There are charming boulevards—big league baseball—public golf links—boating on Detroit River—tours of the automobile factories—and, above all, Belle Isle, the most beautiful island park in the world.

BRITAIN AT WORK AGAIN, BALDWIN IS TAKING A REST

Country Returning Rapidly to Normal After General Strike —Bitterness Subsides.

HOPES FOR EARLY COAL SETTLEMENT

One Railway Announces Resumption of Service—Theaters and Amusement Places Reopen.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, May 15. — Premier Baldwin has gone to Chequers Court, his country home, to spend the week-end.

This brief announcement tells the story that the country is at peace again. Normal conditions are being resumed. Theaters and other places of amusement have reopened. Volunteer workers have practically disappeared from the streets, and a visitor to London would see nothing unusual in its appearance, save the closed parks still used as Government depots, and these are likely to be turned over to the public again next week.

Many more of the railway men resumed work today, and some of the big lines were able to announce a full service for tomorrow. The dockers have returned to their jobs at Southampton and other ports.

A serious situation existed for a time among the newspapers, but after conferences lasting two days, a provisional arrangement has been reached for immediate resumption of work in the printing trade throughout the country. Thus the newspapers will be able to appear in complete form Monday. The settlement provides for the re-engagement of the men at the same rates of pay as before on a day-to-day basis, pending a conference next Thursday to discuss a general final national settlement.

Hope for Coal Settlement.

The Government's coal proposals on the whole have had a good reception, and although it is still not known whether the miners or the owners will accept them, the feeling is hopeful a settlement will be reached, and that it may even be unnecessary to take a ballot of the miners on the subject.

There is a notable absence of bitterness. Premier Baldwin's strong appeals for conciliation have evidently had a powerful effect. For example, one of the leading London dailies, which on Tuesday angrily demanded that the Trades Union Congress be dissolved, prints an editorial today under the heading "No Reprisals," in the course of which it says:

"Anyone who thinks this is the occasion for smashing the trade unions or for imposing humiliating terms on the strikers is not helping his country."

The steady drift of strikers back to work was indicated in dispatches from the provinces early in the day.

The railwaymen at Bristol, Derby, Newcastle and Hull still show some dissatisfaction, and did not return to work as a body, but at other great centers, such as Glasgow, Edinburgh, Liverpool, Crewe, Peterborough and Cardiff they declared themselves satisfied and were expected to resume work Monday.

The loading of ships at Cardiff, the Tyneside and the Clydeside is proceeding rapidly.

Miners to Decide Thursday.

No official decision on the coal controversy can be expected from the miners' delegates before their meeting next Thursday, after they have consulted their individual districts.

The mine owners thus far have given no indication of their attitude toward the Premier's proposals, but they are due to give an answer Monday.

"Although the government proposals require careful consideration by the miners and elucidation of doubtful points they represent a forward step, said Secretary A. J. Cook, inasmuch as "the government at last has placed proposals before us to govern the future development of the mining industry."

Reiterating that he was "as anxious as anyone in the country for a satisfactory and peaceful settlement of the mining problems," Cook declared such settlement

Thus the newspapers will be able to appear in complete form Monday. The settlement provides for the re-engagement of the men at the same rates of pay as before on a day-to-day basis, pending a conference next Thursday to discuss a general final national settlement.

Hope for Coal Settlement.

The Government's coal proposals on the whole have had a good reception, and although it is still not known whether the miners or the owners will accept them, the feeling is hopeful a settlement will be reached, and that it may even be unnecessary to take a ballot of the miners on the subject.

There is a notable absence of bitterness. Premier Baldwin's strong appeals for conciliation have evidently had a powerful effect. For example, one of the leading London dailies, which on Tuesday angrily demanded that the Trades Union Congress be dissolved, prints an editorial today under the heading "No Reprisals," in the course of which it says:

Reiterating that he was "as anxious as anyone in the country for a satisfactory and peaceful settlement of the mining problems," Cook declared such settlement could only be secured on the basis of a living wage.

The government's proposals have met with such a degree of approval that in some quarters it was believed a ballot by the districts themselves would not be necessary.

Labor Party Manifesto.

The Labor party in a manifesto issued today relating to recent events says:

"For the purpose of checking unconstitutional governments and acting as a defensive weapon in the industrial battle of labor, the general strike has its place, but the emancipation of the people from capitalism and the re-establishment of socialism must be achieved primarily by an educational and political organization."

NEW DRY BILL MODIFIED AS TO SEARCH OF HOMES

Evidence for Warrant Must Show Manufacture of Liquor for Sale "or Barter or Exchange."

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, May 15.—The administration bill providing for more rigid Federal prohibition enforcement was reported favorably yesterday by the Senate Judiciary Committee with amendments. The committee voted unanimously to report the bill after spending the day in discussion of proposed changes. Chairman Means of the special Senate prohibition committee plans to call it up soon in the Senate, where he does not expect to meet much opposition.

After long and heated wrangling, the committee softened the provision dealing with search warrants for private homes. As the measure was originally drawn, it provided for the issuance of search warrants for dwellings on evidence that a still was in operation for the manufacture of intoxicating liquors for sale "or other unlawful disposition."

The committee struck out the "unlawful disposition" phrase and substituted "barter or exchange."

It also cut out the entire section authorizing a legalized distiller to restore the proof of distilled spirits by the addition of ethyl alcohol where it had been lessened from natural causes. The committee took the position that this had no relation to law enforcement and should be included in a separate bill. Other amendments included a provision providing that a vessel could not be seized for transporting liquor unless the master of the ship had knowledge of its presence on board.

Police officers of the District of Columbia would be restricted in their duties to points within the district limits. The committee also reported a bill to permit retired army and navy officers and enlisted men to hold positions as prohibition enforcement officers without losing their retirement pay.

HOUSE ACCEPTS SENATE BRIDGE BILL AMENDMENTS

It Provides for Erection of Spans at Alton and Hall's Ferry or Musick's Ferry.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, May 15. — The House yesterday accepted the Senate amendments to the bill to bridge the Mississippi River at Alton and the Missouri at Hall's Ferry or Musick's Ferry, Missouri.

The measure, which goes to the President, would provide connecting links on the Missouri and Illinois trunk highways.

The bill authorizes State Senator A. L. McCawley of Carthage, Mo., to build the two bridges. The projects have not passed the promotion stage. McCawley said use of the proposed bridges would reduce the distance from Sixth and Olive streets in St. Louis to Alton from 27.4 miles to 18.5 miles.

GROCER SAYS RATS RUINED HIM, SUES BUILDING OWNER

Alleging that rats ruined his business and ate his stock, Hyman Ustrin, former proprietor of a grocery and meat market at 2768 Chouteau avenue, yesterday filed suit for $8800 damages in Circuit Court against Mrs. Marie Kramme, 2801 St. Vincent avenue, from whom he rented the store.

The petition states that he had a year's lease on the premises, dating from last August, at a rental of $60 a month, but when he opened up his store, rats swarmed in through several holes in the wall. Ustrin says he attempted to kill them with poison and as a consequence of the resultant condition the State Food and Drug Department declared the premises unsanitary and forced him to close. Mrs. Kramme could not be reached last night.

PRIZE-WINNING POET AT 80

Raoul Ponchon, Who Got 10,000 Francs From Wine Growers, Is a Beer Drinker.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, May 15.—Raoul Ponchon, an 80-year-old poet, who has written 150,000 lines of poetry, has been awarded the first prize of 10,000 francs by wine growers for depicting best the fertility of the soil of France. Ponchon, who refused to publish a book until 1920, has spent all of his life in the Latin quarter, although not born there.

But though he praised wine to the tune of a tidy sum, he is a beer drinker.

$60,000 MADE BY LOAN CONCERN IN TWO DEALS

Industrial Savings Trust Co., Resells Property Purchased for New Quarters.

$35,000 PROFIT ON WELLINGTON HOTEL

Company Made $25,000 on Orpheum Hotel Sale Two Years Ago—Aeolian Co. Buys Lease.

By Berry Moore.

Substantial profits have been realized in real estate during the last three years by the Industrial Savings Trust Co., which has corporate identity with the Industrial Loan Co., 714 Chestnut street.. A search for larger and more centrally situated quarters rather than profits from resales of real estate, however, was the primary object of the institution in entering the real estate field.

Approximately $35,000 was derived by the money-lending concern yesterday when it sold, effective July 1, the Wellington Hotel building at 713-15 Pine street, to Frank Dubinsky, president of the Dubinsky Realty Co., for $135,000. About two years ago it purchased this property for $100,000, with plans for new quarters on the ground floor of the building. The Cornet & Zeibig Trust handled the negotiations in both instances.

Profit of $25,000 on First Deal.

The Industrial Saving Trust Co.'s first venture in the real estate field involved the purchase of the four-story Orpheum Hotel building at the northeast corner of Ninth and Chestnut streets for $135,000. It resold the property to Nathaniel Glick of the Glick Realty Co. and Jack Dubinsky for $160,000, foregoing its plan for new quarters on the ground floor. Glick and Dubinsky have declined an offer of $200,000 for the property, according to realty circles.

Purchase of the Wellington Hotel by the Industrial Savings Trust Co. soon followed, with plans for its conversion for new quarters, which were abandoned with the sale of the property to Frank Dubinsky. The structure comprises four stories, with stores on the first floor and hotel rooms above, and occupies a lot 40x80 feet.

The Goldman Realty Co. recently purchased an adjoining building on the east in this block, which has been remodeled. It is a six-story office building with stores on the first floor.

Aeolian Co. Buys Lease.

The Aeolian Co. has purchased the unexpired 99-year lease of the building it occupies at 1004 Olive street with lot 25x109 feet. Le Grand Jones Inc., in connection with John S. Carter & Co. effected the transaction. This property is owned by Camilla E. Palmer and Lottie C. Saracheck, who leased it 30 years ago for 99 years to the Kerker Realty Co. for an annual net erntal of $2500. Subsequently the lease was acquired by the Price Realty Co., which erected the present six-story building. The Aeolian Co. has been occupying the building under a lease calling for an annual net rental of $9000, plus the ground rental of $4375, taxes and insurance. The lease runs 69 years to run. Purchase was made from W. J. Holbrook, president of the Holbrook-Blackwelder Co., who held an option on the lease, and who placed the valuation at $110,000.

Activity in the downtown sections was also reflected in the purchase of the Title Guaranty Trust Building at Seventh and Chestnut streets by the Chestnut Street Realty Co., from the International Life Insurance Co.

There was a demand for property in the central business district of the city during the week on the part of operators, strengthened by the possibility of developments in this section, with the expenditure of the $87,000,000 bond issue under way.

Permits for three apartment buildings and a two-story office and store structure were issued at City Hall yesterday.

Apartments of six floors and 150 rooms, costing $80,000, and six floors and 192 rooms, costing $100,000, will be erected at 6154 and 6168 Waterman avenue, respectively, under permits issued the Mardyke Investment Co.

The Glen Eyrie Investment Co. plans a three-floor 24-tenant apartment, costing $72,000, at 5364-70 Delmar boulevard. Walter F. Shehan, 721 Chestnut street, represented both companies in the permits.

The two-story store and office building will be erected at the southeast corner of Euclid and Maryland avenues, at a cost of $125,000, under a permit issued Dr. Roland Hill, Lister Building.

APRIL CONTRACTS IN STATE, $15,471,000

The April construction under contract in Missouri reached a total of $13,431,700, according to the F. W. Dodge Corporation. This was a 5 per cent increase over March, 1926, but a decrease of 25 per cent over March of last year.

During the last four months $52,268,800 worth of new construction was started in Missouri, this being 8 per cent less than the amount for the first four months of last year.

The April building record for Missouri included the following important classes: $7,696,600, or 57 per cent, for residential buildings; $3,108,000, or 24 per cent, for public works and utilities; $1,191,800, or 9 per cent for commercial buildings; $682,000 or 5 per cent for industrial buildings; and $318,000, or 2 per cent for educational.

New Hotel and Suburban Homes

RESIDENCE AND FLAT SOLD BY GIBSON REALTY COMPANY

The John W. Gibson Realty Co. reports having sold a large 10-room residence, having two baths, hot-water heat, hardwood floors and garage, at 4726 McPherson avenue. The property was sold for George R. Jackson to the Marner Realty Co.

The company has also sold a three and three room flat at 1459 Webster avenue for Mrs. Katherine Cherry.

STANLEY EPSTEIN REPORTS 68 SOUTHAMPTON FLATS RENTED

An indication of the stability of the rental situation is apparent in the statement issued by Stanley Epstein to th ceffect that his building project in Southampton, consisting of 68 duplicate flats on one block of Bancroft avenue is entirely rented and there is a waiting list of prospective tenants.

This record is more remarkable when it is considered that these flats were completed and rented during the winter season.

Stanley Epstein further reports a similar active demand for the purchase of these 17 buildings, there being only five buildings remaining unsold. A partial list of some of the purchasers includes Adrian M. Levinson, Louise Auler, Anna Biederman, Morris G. Levinson, Fannie F. Cook and Josephine Lebrecht.

THREE HOUSES SOLD BY BERGFELD REALTY COMPANY

The George F. Bergfeld Realty Co. reports the following sales: 6249 Washington avenue, a modern two and one half story eight-room residence, with all modern conveniences, to Earl M. Johnston of the United States Bank for P. B. Jamison; 7029 Washington boulevard, a modern home of 10 rooms, three baths, to a client. The seller was represented by Wagner-Grant-Bell; 4555 Washington avenue, a residence of nine rooms, bath, hardwood floors, hot-water heat, to F. W. Phillips for William J. Mauthe; southeast corner of Waterman and Williams avenues, having a frontage of 50 feet on the south side of Waterman avenue by a depth of 120 feet to an alley, to Benbow Realty and Investment Co. for H. P. Flintgan.

ROHN REALTY CO. HANDLES MANCHESTER HILL TRACT

The Rohn Realty Co. has been made selling agent for the Manchester Hill Country Club on Manchester road and is perfecting plans for launching the tract with a big picnic.

CARONDELET PARKVIEW IS NEW SUBDIVISION

Henry Hiemenz Realty Co. announces placing on the market an attractive subdivision known as Carondelet Parkview, comprising six city blocks fronting on the north line of Kingshighway, Southwest, and east line of Morganford road and fronting on both sides of Iron, Schoenlau and south side of Bowen street, just adjacent and west of Holly Hills. Modern city improvements are now under way and will be installed and finished as rapidly as possible.

The lots are laid out in sizes of 35 and 40 feet front by a depth of 120 and 125 feet to 15-foot alleys. Provisions are made for Morganford road to be 80 feet wide and other streets will be 50 feet, except Kingshighway Southwest, 200 feet wide.

A branch office has been established at the northeast corner of Kingshighway Southwest and Morganford road, and lots will be sold with a guarantee of all city improvements to be installed at prices marked for each lot, consisting of granitoid streets, gutters and sidewalks, water, sewers and electricity. Two blocks in the subdivision have been set aside for those who want to build frame cottages. The other four blocks are restricted to brick dwellings, with uniform building line.

WILLIAM GELZER WITH WAGNER-GRANT-BELL CO.

HAILE AND HOLME CO. AGENTS FOR GREENDALE

The Binz Realty and Investment Co. announces the appointment of Haile & Holme Realty Co. as agents for their Greendale subdivision.

Work on improvements is being rapidly rushed to completion. The final opening is planned for May 30.

SALES AND LEASES BY MULLIN-WALTERS COMPANY

Mullin-Walters Realty Co. reports the sale of a four-family flat at 3815-17 Lafayette avenue for the account of Miss Mary A. Borgers of Murphysboro, Ill., to a client. This is a modern piece of property, each flat having four rooms, large porches, hot-water heat and very modern in every respect.

A residence and some acreage in Castlewood, Mo., on the Meramec River, to a client for the account of George Troxler and others.

Two stores in the new building being erected under the company's supervision at the southwest corner of Chippewa and Texas, 2632 Chippewa being leased to A. E. Fischer, who will operate a high-class radio store, and the other to Miss Edna Roth, who will operate a beauty parlor. All parties in these transactions were represented by the Mullin-Walters company.

HOTEL TO OCCUPY CICARDI'S OLD SITE

Eight-Story Structure at Delmar and Euclid to Be Named The Roosevelt.

The Delmar-Euclid Building Corporation, which recently purchased the northwest corner of Delmar and Euclid avenues, formerly occupied by Cicardi's cafe has completed financial arrangements with the American Bond and Mortgage Co., of New York and Chicago, for the erection of an eight-story reinforced concrete hotel structure to be known as the Roosevelt. Plans for the new structure are being prepared by the Widmer Engineering Co., which will supervise construction.

The structure will embrace the entire site, which has a frontage on Delmar of 120 feet and on Euclid of 165 feet. The first floor will have stores facing the street front with show windows and entrances to an arcade having its main entrance on Delmar avenue.

The site, which has acquired from Anheuser-Busch, Inc., is now being demolished to make way for the new structure.

Hotel entrance will be on Euclid avenue, entering into the main lobby and lounge on the first floor The second and third floors will contain 100 offices, which will be equipped with every facility furnished by the most modern downtown office buildings with special provisions for taking care of the equipment required by doctors and dentists. The hotel will be from the fourth to the eighth floors and will contain 300 rooms, each with bath.

The exterior design of the building with the lower two stories of light gray matt terra cotta and upper stories of variegated shades of red matt brick trimmed with terra cotta, leans towards a renaissance influence.

The office portion of the building will be served with separate elevators and the hotel will have three elevators serving the hotel portion of the building.

The main lounge of the hotel on the first floor will have highly decorated ornamental plastered ceiling with paneled wainscotins on the walls which will give this room a Jacobean feeling. The main lobby on the ground floor will be treated with Travartine wall effect, marble floor and decorated ceiling. In the basement there will be a cafeteria and also the main dining room, which will have ornamental plastered ceiling, terrazzo floors and decorated paneled walls.

The first mortgage bonds on this building have been purchased by the American Bond and Mortgage Co., of New York and Chicago which has a local branch office at 521 Security Building. Its capital and surplus of $8,000,000 ranks the company among the foremost real estate loan organizations in the country.

PINKERTON AGENCY TO LANDRETH BUILDING

Among the tenants who have taken offices in the new Landreth Building, southeast corner of Fourth and Locust streets, is the Pinkerton National Detective Agency, Inc., which now occupies the north half of the fourteenth floor. The building was opened May 1 and is under management of Isaac T. Cook & Co. Inc.

The Pinkerton Corporation was founded during the Civil War by Allan Pinkerton, grand father of Allan Pinkerton who is now head of the firm. Allan Pinkerton, the founder, was chief of the United States Secret Service during the administration of Abraham Lincoln. The district governed by this office is under direction of J. J. Lintner, Division Manager and H. H. Grange, resident superintendent.

Other new tenants of the Landreth building are: Martin Hussmann, butter and egg broker; William A. Helm & Co., certified public accountants; Taylor-Ewart & Co., investment securities, and E. H. Rollins & Sons, brokers.

HOGAN HEATING CO. LEASES WASHINGTON AVENUE STORE

The Hogan Heating Co. negotiated a long term lease for the storeroom at 1905 Washington avenue, in the new building covering the block between Nineteenth and Twentieth streets.

The company has just been appointed agents for the Gill oil burner. They will install a showroom, displaying oil burners in operation, and will have a display of boiler casing installations in oil heating designs.

This firm for the past 10 years has been located at 816½ Chestnut street. They will occupy their new location about May 15. The lease was negotiated by Martin & Breitt for the account of the Moe-Bridges Co. of Milwaukee, who have recently leased space in this building.

SUBDIVISION FOR NEGROES BEING DEVELOPED RAPIDLY

The Yahlem Finance Corporation has been appointed sub agents for the sale of Lincoln Terrace, a subdivision being developed exclusively for Negroes by Leopold Grossberg, its owner.

A large number of homes already have been built and sold in this tract and applications for numerous others are under consideration, according to the Yahlem concern. With the resources of the Yahlem corporation available for construction, the rapid upbuilding of the addition is assured.

Lincoln Terrace, which is located at Hanley road and Bruno avenue, St. Louis County, has gas, electricity, water and sewer.

SALES FOR THE WEEK BY MERCANTILE TRUST CO.

The Mercantile Trust Co. reports the sale of the northwest corner of Third and Lespefance streets for John F. Queeny. Also the sale of 2835 Washington avenue, a one-story building, for Harry Horowitz to the North Star Realty Co.

Korte Realty Co. Moves.

The Korte Realty and Loan Co. has moved to larger quarters at 110 North Eighth street.

FOR ADDITIONAL REAL ESTATE NEWS, SEE PAGE 16.

WESTCHESTER TRACT TO BE OPENED TODAY

Westchester, a new bungalow park of 560 lots, on the Manchester road immediately west of Geyer road, will be placed on the market today by the E. B. Hammer Real Estate Co. of 3548 South Grand boulevard.

This new residential park has a frontage of 1350 feet on the north side of Manchester road and extends northward for 4500 feet, with an outlet to the east on Geyer road.

This property will be divided into choice lots, having an average frontage of 50 feet and a depth ranging from 184 to 234 feet. Several bus lines pass the property.

PAGEWOOD LOTS SELLING FAST, SAY ALTHEIMERS

Pagewood at Page avenue and Woodson road is attracting the attention of both home site seekers and investors, according to the Ben Altheimer & Brother Realty Co., which is marketing it.

Approximately half of the 1000 lots comprising the addition have been sold, with indications pointing to an early closing out of the addition. The lots are being offered on unprecedented terms.

C. H. GROSSE ERECTING EFFICIENCY APARTMENT

The construction of a nine-family four-room efficiency apartment has been begun at the northwest corner of Oakhill and Hartford avenues. It is being built for Charles H. Grosse by Ben Cornwall under the supervision of the Vernon Laux Realty Co.

Beauty

Brick has proved its endurance for thousands of years—even if for many centuries crude in aspect. The Brick of today is equally enduring, but beautiful in finishes and marvelous in colorings. Refinements in manufacturing have kept costs down.

Alton Brick is widely esteemed for integrity of quality, variety of texture and fidelity to scheme of coloring.

DAVIS PLACE

$22,500

Seven rooms, two baths, garage for two machines.

Rough-plaster house, in Spanish style. Hospitable entrance, one step from the ground, leads into large, attractive living room. Fluted plastic columns, specially cast, give the cloisteered effect of an entrance hall. The walls are of the finest quality rough plaster. Long French windows open onto flagstones artistically set in the ground. At the far end of the room a cheerful fireplace is flanked on either side by high, curving niches, which hold open-faced book shelves. The casement windows of the dining room frame charming horizons of green hills and curving valleys. Upstairs four airy bedrooms. Balconies useful for the airing of bedding add their own artistic note to the distinguished architectural ensemble.

Drive out Forsythe or Delmar boulevard to Clayton, then south four blocks; or drive out Wydown boulevard to Hanley road, then south 500 feet, to Davis place.

Yahlem's Offer to Working People!

Did you ever hear of anything like this before? Of course you didn't. Neither did anyone else. It hardly seems possible. But Big Boy Yahlem will do it. Anything to help a worthy person. It is every good man's dream to have a home of his own for his wife and kiddies and it is this man that Yahlem wants to help.

If you own a lot, Yahlem will build a home on it for you. If your lot isn't completely paid for he will lend you the money to complete the payments and then build. If you haven't any money and don't own a lot and desire to have your own home—see Yahlem and start making arrangements. This offer is for any honest man who is steadily employed and whose object it is to save a little for a rainy day when old age comes on.

Watch Yahlem now. He's going to set the world afire. Come up today or any evening and look over the plans. Many cozy little homes for you to decide upon.

FRIGATE CONSTELLATION, BUILT IN 1798, TAKEN TO EXPOSITION

Constitution's Sister Ship at Philadelphia After Her First Trip in 38 Years.

By the Associated Press.

PHILADELPHIA, May 15.—The U. S. Frigate Constellation, sister ship of the Constitution, arrived at the Philadelphia navy yard late today to be exhibited during the sesqui-centennial exposition. This is her first trip since 1888. She is moored beside the Olympic, Admiral Dewey's flagship at the Battle of Manila Bay.

A crew of 13 honor students of the Newport school for apprentice seamen, one for each of the 13 original states, is on board.

The Constellation was built in 1798 and was first used against the Barbary pirates.

U. S. Observer for Paris Meeting.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, May 15.—Major Barton K. Yount, assistant military attache at the Paris embassy, has been detailed to act as "observer" for the Army Air Service during the sessions of the special committee of experts which open Monday in Paris. He acted in a similar capacity at the International Conference on Aerial Private Rights, when the expert group was created in Paris last year.

Thornburg to Robert E. Garland.

LIST OF SALES REPORTED BY EDWARD F. WRISBERG

Edward F. Wrisberg, 4048 Manchester avenue, reports the following sales:

Northwest corner of Sarah street and Chouteau avenue, a mercantile building and adjoining lot, for Samuel Lee to the Standard Oil Co.

4303 West Papin street, a flat, for Archie King to Beeler Keen.

4369 Papin street, a frame house, for the Krieger estate to Henry Kettler.

A lot on Schaeffer place, off Manchester avenue, for the Independent Investment Co. to Mrs. Mary Matrera.

4438 Arco avenue, a flat, for Harry Hilgemann.

1309 South Boyle avenue, a brick cottage, for Max Petzer and wife to Richard Brand.

Northeast corner Manchester and Macklind avenues, three-story building, for Katherine U. Wrisberg to Anton Basch.

Lot at Kingshighway and Parker avenue for Clara Robinson.

RUSHING IMPROVEMENTS FOR GREENDALE SUBDIVISION

The Binz Realty and Investment Co., owner and promoter of Greendale, a subdivision on Normandy avenue, reports the major part of improvements installed, the balance to be completed in 10 days or two weeks.

Greendale, formerly a part of the Normandy Golf Club grounds, lies to the east of and overlooks the golf course. No expense is being spared to make Greendale one of the finest improved sections in or adjacent to St. Louis.

Rock asphalt streets, granitoid walks, curbs, water, gas, electric, storm and waste sewerage systems, street lighting and fire plugs are being rushed to completion. Shade trees will be planted.

There has been no active sales campaign, the Binz company wishing to have the improvements installed before offering the property to the public. They report the sale, however, of a number of lots to prospective home builders or investors.

An outstanding feature of the Binz project will be the improving of Normandy avenue, a county thoroughfare about 7600 west, running from St. Charles to Natural Bridge road. This street serves as the approach to Greendale from the St. Charles road.

EVERSTICK ANCHOR CO. BUYS FORMER CAN COMPANY FACTORY

The Everstick Anchor Co. has acquired from the Westerbeck Realty Co. the former Columbia Can Co. factory at Second and Madison streets, it was announced by William A. and Charles A. Block, who, acting in conjunction with Julius Conrath Jr., negotiated the sale.

The property fronts 93 feet on Second street, 125 feet on First and 299 feet on Madison street. A Burlington Railroad switch is located on the First street side. The building is a three and four story structure, containing 90,000 square feet of floor space, and will be occupied by the Everstick Anchor Co. as soon as alterations have been completed. The consideration was not made public.

LOTS AND RESIDENCES SOLD BY THE F. L. DITTMEIER CO.

The Frank L. Dittmeier Real Estate Co. reports the following sales:

4918 Aldine place, apartment flat, to Sam and Nathaniel Rothman.

Lot on the east side of Ven Phul north of College avenue, for Hugh R. Steiger to Hiram Lloyd; 5941 Romaine place, flat, for Sam Rothman estate; 2907-09-11 Chouteau avenue, business building, for Fred Slobright to Ben Friedman; 5805 Helen avenue, bungalow, for Hazel B. Hanratty to Roy Stewart; lot on the east side of Taylor near Maffitt avenue, to John H. Feckter; lot on south side of Oleatha avenue east of Kingshighway to Clara Simpson.

FIRST FAMILY TO MOVE INTO SUNSET MANOR NEXT SATURDAY

The improvements scheduled for Sunset Manor by the William E. Reason Realty Co., owners, including gas, sewers, electric, water, streets and concrete sidewalks, are progressing rapidly.

Monica Drive will have all its improvements ready for the first family that will move in Saturday. The tract is located on Denny road just south of Big Bend boulevard.

ANOTHER PROMINENT SOU... KINGSHIGHWAY CORNER

The Southampton Investment Building Co., operating extensively on Gravois and South Kingshighway boulevard, announces the leasing of a sale of another prominent South Kingshighway corner.

The southwest corner of Kingshighway and Murdoch, fronting 100 feet on South Kingshighway boulevard by 60 feet on Murdoch, for account of Benjamin Otto and to a client, who purchased as one of the high speculative future values of South Kingshighway. The improvements at present consist of an eight-room residence with hot-water heat and a two-story frame garage. The reported consideration was $30,000, which is much less than the prices at which Kingshighway corners have recently transferred, without improvements.

The company also reports the making of loans totaling $53,500, the sale of

by L. Frank Baum

Off the Rock Shelf

"I FOUND a way to continue our journey," said the Ork, in answer to Cap'n Bill's query, at the same time nursing tenderly the claw which had been burned. "Just below us is a great lake of black water, which looked so cold and wicked it made me shudder; but away at the left there's a big tunnel, which we can easily walk through. I don't know where it leads to, of course, but we must follow it and find out."

"Why, we can't get to it," protested the little girl. "We can't fly, as you do, you must remember."

"No, that's true," replied the Ork musingly. "Your bodies are built very poorly, it seems to me, since all you can do is crawl upon the earth's surface. But you may ride upon my back, and in that way I can promise you a safe journey to the tunnel."

"Are you strong enough to carry us?" asked Cap'n Bill, doubtfully.

"Yes, indeed; I'm strong enough to carry a dozen of you, if you could find a place to sit," was the reply; "but there's only room between my wings for one at a time, so I'll have to make two trips."

"All right; I'll go first," decided Cap'n Bill.

He lit another candle for Trot to hold while they were gone and to light the Ork on his return to her, and then the old sailor got upon the Ork's back, where he sat with his wooden leg sticking straight out sidewise.

"If you start to fall, clasp your arms around my neck," advised the creature.

"If I start to fall, it's good night and pleasant dreams," said Cap'n Bill.

"All ready?" asked the Ork.

"Start the buzz-tail," said Cap'n Bill, with a tremble in his voice. But the Ork flew away so gently that the old man never even tottered in his seat.

Trot watched the light of Cap'n Bill's candle till it disappeared in the far distance. She didn't like to be left alone on this dangerous ledge, with a lake of black water hundreds of feet below her; but she was a brave little girl and waited patiently for the return of the Ork. It came even sooner than she had expected and the creature said to her:

"Your friend is safe in the tunnel. Now, then, get aboard and I'll carry you to him in a jiffy."

I'm sure not many little girls would have cared to take that awful ride through the huge black cavern on the back of a skinny Ork. Trot didn't care for it, herself, but it just had to be done, and so she did it as courageously as possible. Her heart beat fast and she was so nervous she could scarcely hold the candle in her fingers as the Ork sped swiftly through the darkness.

It seemed a long ride to her, yet in reality the Ork covered the distance in a wonderfully brief period of time, and soon Trot stood safely beside Cap'n Bill on the level floor of a big arched tunnel. The sailorman was glad to greet his little comrade again, and both were grateful to the Ork for his assistance.

"I dunno where this tunnel leads to," remarked Cap'n Bill, "but it surely looks more promisin' than that other hole we crept through."

"When the Ork is rested," said Trot, "we'll travel on and see what happens."

"Rested!" cried the Ork, as scornfully as his shrill voice would allow. "That bit of flying didn't tire me at all. I'm used to flying days at a time, without ever once stopping."

"Then let's move on," proposed Cap'n Bill. He still held in his hand one lighted candle, so Trot blew out the other flame and placed her candle in the sailor's big pocket. She knew it was not wise to burn two candles at once.

The tunnel was straight and smooth and very easy to walk through, so they made good progress. Trot thought that the tunnel began about two miles from the cavern where they had been cast by the whirlpool, but now it was impossible to guess the miles traveled, for they walked steadily for hours and hours without any change in their surroundings.

Finally Cap'n Bill stopped to rest.

"There's somethin' queer about this 'ere tunnel, I'm certain," he declared, wagging his head dolefully. "Here's three candles gone a'ready, an' only three more left us, yet the tunnel's the same as it was when we started. An' how long it's goin' to keep up, no one knows."

"Couldn't we walk without a light?" asked Trot. "The way seems safe enough."

"It does right now," was the reply, "but we can't tell when we are likely to come to another gulf, or somethin' jes' as dangerous. In that case we'd be killed afore we knew it."

"Suppose I go ahead?" suggested the Ork. "I don't fear a fall, you know, and if anything happens, I'll call out and warn you."

"That's a good idea," declared Trot, and Cap'n Bill thought so, too. So the Ork started off ahead, quite in the dark, and, hand-in-hand, the two followed him.

When they had walked in this way for a good long time the Ork halted and demanded food. Cap'n Bill had not mentioned food because there was so little left—only three biscuits and a lump of cheese about as big as his two fingers—but he gave the Ork half of a biscuit, sighing as he did so. The creature didn't care for the cheese, so the sailor divided it between himself and Trot. They lighted a candle and sat down in the tunnel while they ate.

"My feet hurt me," grumbled the Ork. "I'm not used to walking and this rocky passage is so uneven and lumpy that it hurts me to walk upon it."

"Can't you fly along?" asked Trot.

"No; the roof is too low," said the Ork.

After the meal they resumed their journey, which Trot began to fear would never end. When Cap'n Bill noticed how tired the little girl was he paused and lighted a match and looked at his big silver watch.

"Why, it's night!" he exclaimed. "We've tramped all day, an' still we're in this awful passage, which mebbe goes straight through the middle of the world, an' mebbe is a circle—in which case we can keep walkin' till doomsday. Not knowin' what's before us so well as we know what's behind us, I propose we make a stop, now, an' try to sleep till mornin'."

"That will suit me," asserted the Ork, with a groan. "My feet are hurting me dreadfully and for the last few miles I've been limping with pain."

"My foot hurts, too," said the sailor, looking for a smooth place on the rocky floor to sit down.

"Your foot!" cried the Ork. "Why, you've only one to hurt you, while I have four. So I suffer four times as much as you possibly can. Here; hold the candle while I look at the bottoms of my claws. I declare," he said, examining them by the flickering light, "there are bunches of pain all over them!"

"P'r'aps," said Trot, who was very glad to sit down beside her companions, "you've got corns."

"Corns? Nonsense! Orks never have corns," protested the creature, rubbing its sore feet tenderly.

"Then mebbe they're—they're—What do you call 'em, Cap'n Bill? Something 'bout the Pilgrim's Progress, you know."

"I'm sure they'll feel better by mornin'," said Cap'n Bill, encouragingly. "Go to sleep an' try to forget your sore feet."

The Ork cast a reproachful look at the sailor—who didn't see it. Then the creature asked tragically: "Do we eat now, or do we starve?"

"Give it to me now!" demanded the Ork. "If I'm going to starve, I'll do it all at once—not by degrees."

Cap'n Bill produced the biscuit and the creature ate it in a trice. Trot was rather hungry and whispered to Cap'n Bill that she'd take part of her share; but the old man secretly broke his own half biscuit in two, saving Trot's share for a time of greater need.

The Musical Squirrel

By FRANK A. SECORD

THE CROWD that gathered at a spot in a meadow where Charley Cobry was to demonstrate the powers of a freak squirrel he claimed to possess looked with awe and also with pity upon the lad who had made the extravagant claim that he had such an animal. Charlie claimed his freak squirrel could make sweet music and that it knew some of the old-time pieces. He started out by joking some friends one evening at a party and, as several of the girls took his story seriously, the boy began to figure out how he could make good—at least pretend to.

Therefore, one Saturday afternoon Charlie Cobry appeared at a meadow, after announcing that he would give a demonstration of the squirrel's ability to make music.

"Why go to the meadow?" the boy was asked.

"Because," was the ready answer, "this squirrel renders his music only when in the air. I got him from a nest in a tree. He has never made any music since I had him down on the ground or near it."

This was a truthful statement, too. The squirrel hadn't.

"And are you going to turn him loose in a tree and let us stand like so many nuts below and wait for him to get ready to make music?" someone inquired.

"Well," was the reply, "all I have to say is that if any of you are interested, come to the meadow. I shall send the squirrel up in a kite. If you don't hear music I'll eat the kite, string and all."

"Play the string is spaghetti, eh?" a lad laughed.

"Oh, I won't have to eat it—be assured of that!"

"You will if you fail. Take it from us!" a group of boys declared. "We'll choke the whole line of string into your mouth. You cannot make a mess of monkeys out of us and get away with it, Charlie!"

"I am simply going to show you," was the reply. "I am not trying to start a circus, so am not seeking monkeys."

"Yes, and there won't be any present at your musical squirrel's show, either!" rapped the others.

The kite was a large one and it took considerable tail to balance the thing. Charlie provided a small box with a slide door, and this box he attached to the tail's end, after experimenting with the kite a few moments to determine just how much weight was necessary to buoy it in the air.

When all was ready and the boy was satisfied with the result of the experiment, he produced a small brown squirrel which was curiously looked over by those gathered round, as Charlie transferred the animal from its own cage to the box fastened to the kite's tail.

"That's just a common bushy-tail!" sneered a member of the crowd.

"I didn't claim him to be anything else!" retorted the rather nervous lad who was to prove his claim of possessing a freak squirrel who could produce some old-time bits of music.

"Suppose you figure he'll get scared when up in the air and the box rocks in the wind, so he'll chatter," a girl giggled, greatly enjoying the mystery that surrounded the experiment.

"Never knew Charlie could do sleight-of-hand stuff!" a friend remarked as he edged close to the box, now ready to be tied to the kite.

"I didn't, either," the object of the jibe answered. "I am not going to attempt any sleight-of-hand stuff, young fellow."

"Sure the squirrel is in that box now—this minute?" the other inquired.

"If you don't think so, stick one of your fingers in," Charlie offered. "If this squirrel is anything like others I have captured from time to time, I bet he'll take a bite out of you!"

"Not out of me, I guess!" laughed the lad. "I am not sticking fingers into the other fellow's game, I am not. We don't know for sure but that you have a snake in the box."

"Sure—singing snake!" guffawed another of the crowd.

"See here!" Charlie exclaimed, rising. "Cut out the jokes—if that's what they can be called. I did not invite you folks out here to see or hear a singing squirrel. I told you nothing of the sort, but that you'd hear from this one a number of snatches of music."

The second string was gently pulled and to the utter amazement to all the interested and curious doubters, from the air came the faint but distinct strains of "Old Black Joe."

"From him! From him!" laughed someone.

"A long way from him, too, I bet!" still another offered.

The kite was soon launched. Gracefully and steadily it rose. Charlie held the string carefully and with a critical eye watched the box on the end of the tail of the object rising. The box swayed but little and finally hung very straight and without much motion.

It was then noticed that Charlie Cobry held a duplicate string in his hands. There was the string upon which the kite had been sent up and also a string that was seen terminating at the box on the kite's tail.

"What's the big idea, kid?" Bennie Martin inquired, squinting at the two cords and then at Charlie.

"Well, that's my business. Nothing was said about how many strings there is to this demonstration," the boy answered. "If I wish to use a dozen, why that's the personal business of yours truly, isn't it?"

"Suppose so."

Charlie, however, volunteered the information that the second string was for the purpose of notifying the squirrel in the box when to make music and when to cease.

"Gee, whizz!" muttered those gathered round, "the kid has even trained the bushy-tail to obey signals—to hear him tell it!"

"Watch!" Cobry grunted. He was far too busy to engage in any conversation now. He was a methodical lad and always did things earnestly, even when engaged in pulling off a trick on his companions. This was the supreme moment in his life, he thought, and, while the boy was not sure of entire success, he had a good idea that success would be his.

"May we call the tunes we wish the squirrel to chirp?" a girl inquired, arching her brows and appearing very earnest in the inquiry.

Charlie looked her over a second, sneered and then answered, "You are about as bad as those boys. If you expect to see and hear something impossible, stick around and get disappointed. I will do as I agreed and that's the end of my answers to silly questions."

"I ask for 'Old Black Joe' and that's an old-timer," Harry Bliss chuckled.

"You'll get it, too!" was the startling assurance from Cobry. "The first tune of Mr. Squirrel will be 'Old Black Joe.'"

"Do tell!" Bliss gasped. "I'll eat my own leg for a sausage if you produce 'Old Black Joe' from that kite."

Without paying any attention to this statement, Charlie nodded to young Martin and said quietly "Bennie, hike off to the house and get some pepper and salt for Harry. He's going to eat one of his legs pretty soon."

When the kite hung fine and straight and the scant breeze blowing below indicated that the object was to have a steady flight, Charlie Cobry fastened one of the strings to a root of a bush, carefully holding the other string in his hands. "Folks," declared he, "the first tune by Mr. Squirrel up there in the air some 50 feet, will be 'Old Black Joe.'"

The second string was gently pulled and, to the utter amazement of all the interested and curious doubters, from the air came the faint but distinct strains of 'Old Black Joe." This was a power. "Some squirrel!" exclaimed Bennie Martin. Turning to Harry Bliss, this boy shouted, amid the merriment of all the others, "Cannibal, get to! Set to! Good thing you have your leg with you. Hop to the feast, fellow!"

Bliss was dumfounded. He lifted his pap to Charlie and remarked something about crowning the latter "king of all."

"May I pick the second tune for the musical squirrel to give us?" a girl made bold to inquire.

"What have you in mind?" the wizard of the kite asked. "I don't know, I'm sure, if I can get the squirrel to obey you or not."

Charlie jerked the string again the strains of "Old Black Joe" ceased and the box on the tail of the kite was silent, except for a thumping noise that was plainly to be heard below. This noise bothered young Cobry, for the reason that only he himself knew well enough the squirrel was jumping around inside the box, evidently frightened and seeking a way out. He hoped with all his mind that the animal would not gnaw out.

To the astonishment of Charlie, the girl requested "Carry Me Back to Old Virginny" and he almost screamed a reply to her words. "Yes! Yes! I'll give you that tune!"

The string was gently pulled once more and from the air came, clear and very plainly done, the old familiar tune of "Carry Me Back to Old Virginny."

"It's almost time to faint!" exclaimed the girl who asked for the tune. "If I were a fainting person I'd sure start something right now!"

At the next request Charlie shook his head. He wasn't so lucky this trip. He was forced to confess that his squirrel didn't know the tune, even though his companions plied him with questions, asking how he could determine what the animal would or would not give them.

"I know," was the answer the trickster would offer.

When the kite was finally pulled down, to the amazement of everybody, young Cobry slid the door of the mysterious box open, the squirrel hopped out and scampered away towards the trees that fringed the meadow's edge. Instantly every boy and girl present took after the animal and then Charlie hastily pulled from the box a small Swiss music box—one of those old-fashioned things that operate with a spring and have a cylinder with teeth that work against a disc of tuned steel prongs. This box had a capacity of six tunes—all old-timers—and the second string was used to stop and turn on the catch that controlled the mechanism.

Italians Fish for Salmon Off San Francisco

On the San Francisco waterfront today is a fascinating bit of the picturesque Old World brought to America and made over into a thriving enterprise by the methods of science.

There, huddled along the Fisherman's Wharf, one may see a nest of forty boats owned by a colony of Italian fishermen. Transplanted bodily—language, customs and boats—from the Mediterranean to the Pacific, these hardy men are reaping a harvest of wealth in shining salmon from the deep sea outside the Golden Gate.

In their little boats, says the April Popular Science Monthly, they have replaced with gas engines the lateen sails used for centuries by their forefathers. In place of old-time nets and hand lines, they have substituted long, springy trolling rods with which four fishermen now can bring in a larger catch in one day than eight men formerly did in two.

Directions: Paste this sheet on cardboard and cut out the cards neatly. Four persons can play this game. Deal them out, four to each player. The one at the right of the dealer then draws a card from the dealer, the next one to him draws a card from his hand and so on. As soon as a player finds that he has the whole set of four cards that make up a story he lays his cards quietly in his lap. The player who first discovers that a hand has been laid down calls out "BING" and wins the game.

SQUIRE BAKER Has Long Been a Mystery to Durand Illinois. Just What He Had, in His Enormous Ramshackle House, Was Unknown. So He Was Prevailed Upon to Open His Doors—for the First Time—and Display the Conditions of His Eccentric Existence

By GUY FORSHEY
Of the Post-Dispatch Staff

DURAND, Illinois.—It is spring cleaning time in this agreeable but inconspicuous little town of 600. The housewives, with naive candor, are exposing to the gaze of neighbors the best and the worst of their household effects. Good rugs and rugs not so good take their beatings on the back-yard clothesline side by side without show of disdain or apology. Good rugs and bad are taken for granted in Durand, for among the townspeople there is about as much secrecy surrounding each other's home furnishings as there is surrounding each other's business and personal conduct, and that is the sort of secrecy enjoyed by the average canary or the residents of other small towns. There is one house in the village, however, that does not suffer its contents to go on spring parade. It never did, and until "Squire" Baker dies it probably never will. For 20 years it has been Durand's one "house of mystery" and the town's most famous structure. For a good many more years than that Albert Whitfield Baker has been the town's most picturesque inhabitant.

"I'm an unusual sort of feller," declares the "Squire" in autobiographical reminiscence, and nobody of his acquaintance will deny the truth of his assertion. To hear the rest of them tell it, he is rather more than that, but in any analysis whatsoever, he is unusual. Through two decades he has lived alone in the maze of his castle's 51 somber and cobweb-ridden rooms, yielding not so much as the threshold to those of his neighbors who may be inclined, either from motives of sociability or curiosity, to go calling. Almost weekly he adds to the mystery of his treasure hoard with the odds and ends of refuse supplied by uncounted public auctions and rummage sales. Going to auctions and buying or receiving gratis the stuff that nobody else wants is his chief source of interest in the joy of living—that, and arguing with the loafers who hang around Kinney's pool hall or hold down the boxes in front of the post-office. Long ago the villagers lost track of his purchases and now when they see a cartload of junk being hauled down the street they remark that it must be headed for "Squire" Baker's place.

THE traveler sojourning in Durand doesn't sojourn very long as a rule until he hears all about "Squire" Baker and that gloomy edifice of his which the natives call the "Seminary." They call it the "Seminary" because it was built for a hotel back in the sixties and later became a school for girls. That was before the "Squire" had anything to do with it of course. If there is one place in the world he wouldn't be caught hanging around it is an active school for girls. He is 75 now and his ring of hair and flowing beard are snow-white, but he is still as shy of women as a rustic of 15. He shuns them as he would the plague. But speaking of the house——

If the traveler shouldn't hear all about its history without asking (as he probably would) its air of mystery would soon provoke his inquiry. One can hardly visit the town and fail to see the house standing there in the outskirts of the village beside the road that leads to Rockford. Across the corner from where the new $100,000 Community High School building is arising, the great rambling frame landmark looms sphinx-like behind a grove of giant elms. Its windows stare blankly into the sunshine unprotected by shades or blinds. Some of them have lost a pane or two of glass, leaving black holes to open into nothingness. Patches of odd weatherboarding mark other spots where windows once were but are no more. Paint is gone, all of those little touches which distinguish a building as a human habitation are gone. It towers there to all appearances an empty shell, silent and eerie. No sound disturbs the quiet save the tap, tap, tap of elm branches swaying in the wind. Not unusual is it that tales of ghostly sights and sounds should flourish among the youngsters of the village. Hardly a wonder that urchins passing after dark should quicken their steps when the flickering light of a coal-oil lamp gleams through a great dark window.

BUT it suits "Squire" Baker just as well that youngsters and everybody else should hurry by. He doesn't go in for visiting or "chinning" over the back-yard fence. Twenty years ago he bought the "Seminary" and its five acres of ground for $1400, and it fits his purpose to perfection. For his living quarters he reserves three small rooms in one end of the house off the back porch—and that leaves him 48 other rooms to fill with his bewildering assortment of "furnishings."

What these "furnishings" really comprise has long been a subject for speculation among his fellow citizens. Not that they thought he had anything of great value. They knew very well he hadn't, but the mystery of it all was intriguing. Every now and then there would arise from nowhere some tale that the attic of that old Seminary housed antiques or relics of amazing value. What were they? The townspeople never found out. The "Squire" never was disposed to discuss his personal affairs or make a public museum of his storehouse. So far as the villagers can recall, only once has he conducted a visitor through the gloomy recesses of his quaint abode or risked publicity by posing for a photograph. That was when the writer of this article visited him recently and after considerable insistence gained the privilege of inspecting a once-famous "spring-floor" dance hall that comprises the major part of the third story. Incidentally, the host led his visitor through every room in the house to prove his contention that he was not a collector of antiques and had nothing of value on the place. It may be stated without reservation that he proved his point. To the writer the point of most interest was the fact that a man could collect so many trappings without coming into possession of something of even a little value.

IF THERE was anything in the Seminary, except possibly the Squire's clothing, that would bring more than 50 cents for purposes other than a bonfire the tour of inspection failed to disclose it. And the catholicity of taste exhibited on the part of the collector was astounding. Since Tom Dolan played that watermelon prank on him in their youth, the Squire has kept shy of women and so far as known he never contemplated marriage or fatherhood, but among his trinkets are to be found at least two baby carriages and a baby's high chair. There are articles of women's clothing of various ages and periods. There is furniture enough, such as it is, to equip two or three fair-sized homes, but all of ancient model and distressingly dilapidated. There are stoves galore, cooking stoves, heating stoves, wood burners, coal burners, rusty, cracked and broken-legged. Bottles and cans and fruit jars are numbered by the hundreds. Odd parts and fragments of farm machinery litter the dusty floors along with nails, rags, bolts, nuts, fallen plaster and masses of other stuff that defies classification more specific than that of trash.

FROM room to room one saunters, encountering here and there the ruins of billiard tables, some of them still covered with sheet or canvas in a futile gesture of protection against dust. Four or five of these were seen, as well as the remains of what was once equipment for a bowling alley. The Squire says he took these in payment of a debt owed him when a local pool and billiard establishment went out of business. The villagers say he bought them for little or nothing to keep the bankrupt pool hall from getting into operation again. Anyway, he has them now and the chances are they will remain where they are until the old Seminary tumbles down upon them. The understanding that nothing owned by "Squire" Baker can be bought has reached the status of a dogma in Durand. Several times wags have offered (with fingers crossed) to buy some of his trinkets at fabulous prices and have been abruptly assured that nothing was for sale. The owner says himself that he has never yet sold one of his purchases, no matter whether it was real estate, livestock or junk. To do that, he believes, would be speculating, and he is unalterably opposed to speculation. That's what is ruining this country, he will tell you.

Men's clothing in that old structure is to be found in heaps and stacks like dry goods in a rural store. Plenty of clothing is one of Squire Baker's special requirements. And that contributes largely to his reputation around Durand as one of the neatest old gentlemen in the town. Some of that clothing stock is musty; nearly all of it is dusty and in some the moths have left evidence of a gala holiday. Virtually all of it is coarse and possibly was secondhand when he bought it, but it all gets its turn at duty. They say around the village that he changes clothes every time he goes home—or, at least, comes out with a different hat.

Of hats he has an almost unlimited supply. They say that when a local store held a closing-out sale some years ago and offered men's hats at three for a dollar, the Squire loosened his purse strings and bought the entire stock of 150. Another time an army goods store went bankrupt and he laid in a supply of 20 olive drab campaign overcoats. These are still to be found in his living room, piled high just across from tall stacks of newspapers yellowed with age and a group of rusty milk cans containing seed corn. That seed corn is for his farm. He owns 500 acres of the best land in Winnebago County and never has lacked money for the gratification of his appetite for junk.

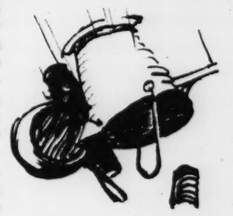
ALL those samples of varicolored sands he exhibits are from his farm. He takes great pride in that sand. See, here is yellow sand and red, and over there are bottles of white sand and gray and blue. In some of the bottles the different colors are arranged in layers or stripes like multiflavored brick ice cream. It was a very pretty sight, and the visitor was almost on the point of asking for a bottle to take along as a souvenir when the "Squire" remembered the spring-floor dance hall and led the way to the third floor.

Up creaking stairs we went and the mice scurried to cover under the moldering rubbish. There was one caught in a trap. The Squire released its body and flung it out of a window. We walked through room after room filled with old-fashioned bedsteads, old clothing cabinets, old chairs and tables, broken and dust covered, stacks of feather beds and quilts, old sofas laden with fallen plaster. The scene had ceased to be merely that of repulsive litter. It was becoming weird. How dismally those bare floors creaked! How densely the cobwebs hung! Half guiltily one mused of ghosts and haunted castles. Occasionally would come the mental observation that only spirits light as air could thread their way among so many cobwebs and leave no trace. It seemed a pity the tour had to be taken in broad daylight. How much greater would have been the thrill of exploring such a place by light of a coal oil lamp or flickering candle. One almost resented the bright sunshine and the spell-destroying honk of a flivver on the neighboring highway.

BUT if spirits of another world share the somber quarters of Durand's white-bearded recluse they probably are the harmless shades of the sixties with crinolines and wide neckties and long-tailed coats. In the old hotel days that spring floor swayed under the feet of belles and gallants from miles around. It was the center of social activities of the northern part of the State. But the building's career as a hotel was comparatively brief.

It seems that when John Pettengill came pioneering out to Durand before the Civil War he overestimated the young town's possibilities as a future railroad center and was a bit premature with his hotel. The erection of it was a formidable undertaking. For his building material he went to the standing timber of Wisconsin. There in the backwoods north of Mineral Point he cut the logs, floated them down the river to the town's sawmill and then, with mule and ox teams, hauled the lumber 100 miles across country from Mineral Point to Durand.

BECAUSE of its great size, as compared with that of most country inns, his hotel attracted considerable trade for a time, but when the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railroad came through it missed the place by half a mile and the town then grew up mostly on the other side of the tracks. It didn't grow as much or as fast as Pettengill had expected, anyway, so the hotel business languished and died. Some years later an educator from Philadelphia came out and converted the structure into a young women's boarding school, which he called Johnson's Seminary, but after 10 years or so of service in this capacity the place again stood idle and deserted. It remained vacant most of the time until Squire Baker bought it and converted it into his strange storehouse. Several who overlooked the bargain at that time have since tried to buy it from Baker, but they might as well have spared themselves the effort. The Squire makes it clear that he has no notion of parting with it or any of the rest of his property, not even that old horse-drawn hearse he bought in Beloit, Wisconsin, a few years ago when it was knocked down for a few dollars at a livery sale.



Just what he expected to do with that hearse is a poser. It is doubtful if he knows, himself, or ever knew. If he does he won't discuss the matter, but he still has the macabre vehicle and still has to stand a lot of "kidding" on account of it. He used to keep it locked up in a shed back of the seminary, but that plan couldn't last because it got to be a favorite Halloween prank of the youngsters to haul it out and park it in somebody's front yard. Finally he had to take it away to the seclusion of his farm.

The farm is about five miles northwest of town, near the Wisconsin line, and the Squire drives out there almost every day to look after his livestock and his tenants. Always he makes the trip with a horse and buggy. Although he is well able to do so, he has never owned an automobile and declares he never will. The automobile industry, he asserts, is another thing that is ruining the country. He has the same opinion about farm tractors and does his farming with old reliable horseflesh.

His farm includes the original Baker tract, upon which his father, Cyrus Baker, settled when he came out from Maine in 1849. In a log cabin on this tract Albert Whitfield Baker (the Squire) was born in 1851. He comes of an eminently distinguished family. He will tell the visitor—and show the records to prove his assertion—that he represents the eighth generation of Bakers in this country, his ancestors having come to the New World from England in 1628, joining the Pilgrim colony at Plymouth, Massachusetts, when John Winthrop was Governor. His great-grandfather, Judge Samuel Baker, was one of the Minutemen of the Revolution and hurried to Lexington at the sound of the "shot heard round the world." After the colonies had gained independence he was then one of the seven delegates who voted for the adoption of the Constitution in 1789.

Until the death of his mother a score of years ago, the Squire lived on the farm and she kept house for him. Upon her death, however, he bought out the shares of his brothers and sisters and proceeded to draw apart from humanity.

"I'M NOT what you would call a sociable feller," he explains. "When you run with the crowd you've got to do what the crowd does. You've got to treat and you've got to drink when they treat you. Now, I don't let anybody treat me. I never drank in my life or used tobacco in any form. I have a lot of knockers. Anybody that amounts to anything is bound to have enemies. But if you look you will find in most cases that the knockers are just jealous because somebody is getting ahead of them."

For three hours at a stretch the "Squire" will expound his principles to anybody who will argue with him. After his daily visit to the farm, evening usually finds him on one of those boxes along Main street in heated controversy over some problem of national or municipal government. Usually he experiences no trouble in finding an argument, for the village jokers like to contribute to the fireworks by taking the other side. As for his enemies, he probably has not nearly so many as he fancies. The townspeople accept him as peculiar and look on his eccentric habits with exceeding good nature. They are annoyed at times by his opposition to public improvement measures, but they probably would miss him a lot if he weren't there. They have a lot of fun speculating on what he will next add to his overloaded storehouse. He is still pretty spry, but he is getting along in years, and some are remarking that since he hasn't yet added a coffin to his collection this grewsome article may be his next purchase. But the undertakers are not expecting a profitable sale. The conviction flourishes hereabouts that even when Squire Baker buys a coffin he will get it secondhand.

IS PATCHWORK A LOST ART?

There Was Less Talk of High Cost of Living When Affixing a Patch Was a Fine Art.—NEWS ITEM

By W. A. BYRNES
Of the Post-Dispatch Staff

JUDGING BY THE PAVING CONDITIONS on some of our main thoroughfares, the city authorities know a little about patching—"darn little" says he who gets bumped.

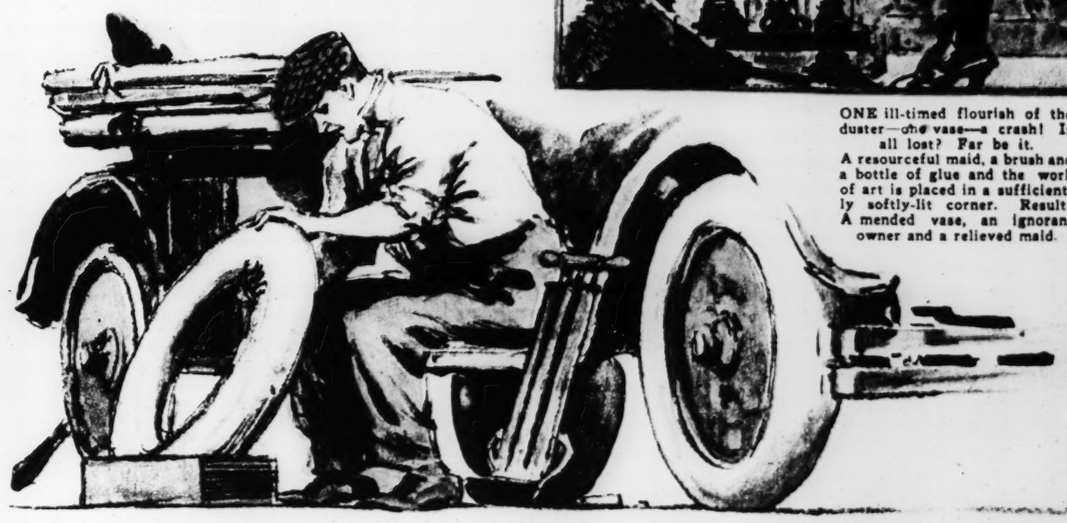
"TINWARE TO MEND—wash tubs to mend." As long as the jolly tinker's lay is heard, there'll be no need for fear of this art vanishing.

THE ancient and honorable guild of cobblers still cobble albeit with much aid from machinery.

THERE'S the fellow who'd die of ennui but for the constant need of patches around his bungalow. The roof, stucco walls and rain spouts afford abundant opportunities for exploiting his skill!

JUST A DASH OF SHOE BLACKING on the exposed parts comprises little Johnny's modus operandi for patching torn stockings.

A LIVING PROOF that patching has not gone out, although the patchee has not only gone out, but stayed out, alas! too long. As long as there are rolling-pins there'll be work for patches.



ONE ill-timed flourish of the duster—one vase—a crash! Is all lost? Far be it. A resourceful maid, a brush and a bottle of glue and the work of art is placed in a sufficiently softly-lit corner. Result: A mended vase, an ignorant owner and a relieved maid.

IF IT WEREN'T FOR PATCHWORK this tourist would be here for the night. These four tires are the only ones he possesses.

WOMEN who want to RULE

"The Hand That Rocks the Cradle" Is Going to Hold the Reins of Office in De Kalb, Missouri, and Riverton, Illinois. Here's How It All Came About.

IN TWO towns here in the middle of the United States women exercised their rights to seek political office with sweeping victories in the April municipal elections. De Kalb, a village of 500 population, 15 miles from St. Joseph, elected an entire ticket of women to the Town Board, the woman having the highest vote, in this case Mrs. J. W. McAdow, according to custom to be named Mayor. Riverton, Illinois, seven miles from Springfield, having something less than 2000 population, elected a woman City Clerk and four members of the Town Board, the Mayor and two remaining male members still serving unexpired terms. In both towns the issue was enforcement of prohibition, with the women upholding the dry side of the question.

Each town claims a situation not abnormal in the evasion of the Volstead act. No worse than other small towns where illicit liquor traffic is apt to be carried on in service garages, barber shops, poolrooms, soft-drink parlors and other places reserved chiefly to men in their idle moments. A situation not bad enough to arouse good men to action, but just bad enough to make women think it time something were being done about it.

In both towns, though male candidates and their supporters may be momentarily chagrined over their defeat, there is a disposition to give the women a free rein and good-natured curiosity to see what women endowed with authority will be able to do with the situation; an experiment which many other communities will watch with interest.

IN De Kalb conditions are about like this. It is an old town, originally settled before St. Joe and designed for the county seat, with a space for the courthouse still rather wistfully reserved in the square. It nestles in a cluster of steep hills and valleys, most of its neat white houses with green shutters set in sloping lawns of luxuriant growth, and under old shade trees. The population, entirely Nordic, draws from the rich surrounding farming country. Politics, or rather a one-ticket city government, had willingly been left to the domination of one man, referred to affectionately as the "Old Doctor," E. B. McAdow, to be distinguished from his brother, Dr. J. W. McAdow, who owns the drug store on the square. It was customary to go and vote for the ticket of the Doctor's choice, or, if one disapproved, to stay away from the polls on election day.

This winter the "Old Doctor" went to California on a vacation. In his absence account came to be taken, along with a growing laxity toward liquor vending, of the qualifications of a group of women who had been successful in putting over several civic enterprises. Two years ago they organized a cemetery association which has transformed the town cemetery from a desolate waste to a beautiful park. Lately they were the moving spirit in the acquirement of a community house, which it is hoped will provide a social center for the town.

They are church women, belonging to the three different sects which have edifices in the village—Baptist, Methodist and Christian—but who are in the habit of forgetting denominations and combining efforts all the aid societies meeting together, when some matter of civic interest is up for consideration. They forget political affiliations, too, in municipal affairs. For example, on the ticket elected there are four Democrats and one Republican; one Methodist, one Baptist and three members of the Christian Church.

Two factions, dividing upon the question of whether or not there was a bad situation, began to be active the past winter. Anxious appeals were sent to the "Old Doctor," with seeming confidence upon both sides that he would be able to reconcile any amount of differences. The Doctor, with equal equanimity, replied that he would be home in plenty of time to settle the matter, and he did arrive a few hours before election day.

BUT men who had hoped he would make a clean sweep of the present administration or select at least some candidate from the other faction were disappointed. When the ticket was made public it was observed the candidates had been selected from the same "clique" that had been running things. It was a ticket of which the "Old Doctor" is quoted as saying, "It can't be beaten." And, indeed, composed as it was of well-known and popular citizens, no other man seems to have cared openly to oppose it.

This was due in part, no doubt, to the inexpediency of prejudicing business relations. But women are not so hampered with traditions of reciprocity. Nobody could blame men if their wives took matters into their own hands. Not even though it be suspected and even admitted by unterrified women that their husbands aided, abetted and put them up to the framing of a ticket.

Now that the election is over, husbands of victorious candidates are rubbing their hands with satisfaction and announcing they can be depended upon in any crisis to which the women are not equal. One man, S. A. Mallory, is telling around the square how, when his wife was called away from her washtubs that Monday morning to do electioneering, he was so much in sympathy with the cause that he pitched in and finished the washing.

Once committed to the idea, trust women to assume their full responsibility.

On guard Monday morning, the day before election, a group of them intercepted Mayor Rube Frakes setting off for St. Joseph to have the regular ticket printed, and demanded that he include the names of five opposing candidates, all women, on it.

"You mean that?" the Mayor asked incredulously. "We sure do," replied the women. And the Mayor, with some dismay but only a few misgivings, agreed that since it was their legal right he would see their instructions carried out.

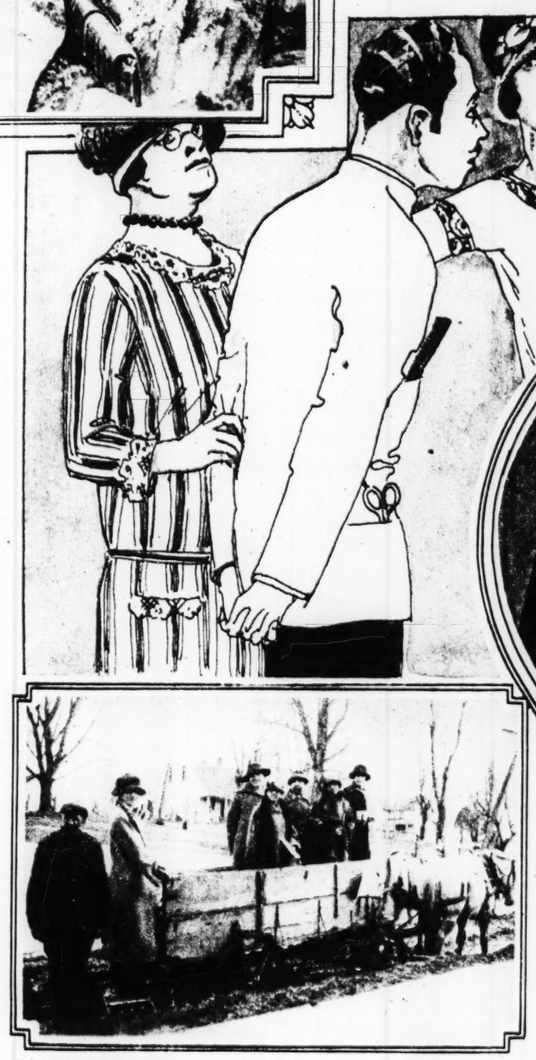
THEN the women turned themselves to an intensive campaign. There was only one day in which to make a canvass, and it was a rainy blustery day, the roads, which in the village are not paved, so deep in mud as to be impassable to wheels. So they walked. A house-to-house canvass was made almost before the opposing faction got wind of what was happening. Next day, election day, the problem was to get supporters to the polls. Roads were muddier than ever and the well-known silent electorate, which loses most elections to a busy minority, was likely to stay at home, exercising its citizenship as usual by criticising the government.

Somebody thought of S. P. Murphy's big wagon with the long boarded bed and floor and the team of sturdy old horses. And a stepladder. The wagon would hold 10 or 20 voters standing close together for support. Not a very stylish turnout, but what with a lot of joking and joshing, a lark could be made of each expedition.

Wagonload after wagonload of friendly voters was called for and delivered, in spite of delays due to having to be pried out of the mud. The other side meanwhile was getting into action. Cigars, cigarettes, chewing gum and candy were being distributed to influence votes. At noon it was rumored the race was running about neck and neck.

Now, Mrs. McAdow conducts a luncheonette in connection with the drug store, and her ham sandwiches are famous. I can testify to the bountiful way in which she does things. A room back of the drug store, through which we passed to the office where our interview took place, is a kitchen, with a big range, upon which simmered pots of soup, coffee and other hot foods, while on a table were platters of cold comestibles. Set apart on another table was a group of baked hams, deep apple pies and other substantial viands waiting to be contributed as a neighborly offering to a household in which there had been a death and in which a "sitting-up" party would be entertained that night.

Election-day refreshments at the drug store were perhaps the final and determining factor which brought out a poll of 200 votes, the largest on record in the community, and a majority of 113 to 87 in favor of the women's ticket. People voted who had not done so before in years. Now, what will the women be able to do with their power?



TRANSPORTING voters to the polls on election day. Despite uninviting traffic conditions the women of De Kalb got out the vote.

"WE ARE eager to accept the counsel of the men about the revenue, the letting of contracts and such things," stated Mrs. McAdow, the Mayor, in a tone that implied the least bit of apprehension lest such counsel might not now be forthcoming.

In interviews with board members the subject of prohibition was carefully steered away from at first. They preferred to talk of traffic regulations. Stopping wild driving and open cut-outs. But continued questioning brought out that they have their eyes on some sort of game, they don't know just what it is going on in the barber shop where a boy is said to have lost $100 taken from his coin savings bank. And that it is hoped what is suspected of being a bootleggers' headquarters, in a garage, already has been done away with without process of law, the garage owner's wife having promised to take up a daily observation post there. One of the Mayor's duties is acting as Police Judge. All violators of the law must come before her.

"We are moving slowly and cautiously," said Mrs. McAdow, "because we do not wish to antagonize anybody. Our first effort will be to frame some effective ordinances and have them examined by an attorney. Then we want to get the right sort of man for Marshal, one who will be consecrated to our cause, without regard to salary, though we do want to make it worth his while to give his whole time to the job. To this end we shall attempt to raise a salary fund by private subscription."

They had agreed upon the right man, they said, a retired farmer, who was popular with the young people, but who could be trusted to use authority when necessary. But while the man was willing to undertake the job his wife objected, in fear of the danger involved, and so he had declined to serve.

"Please do not get the idea that we have a very bad situation here or that our town is not above the average in morality," insisted the new officers, "or that even our men are not all in favor of a clean dry town."

And in the attitude of the defeated candidates seemed to be, besides the little temporary pique mentioned, a good deal of relief and willingness to let the women try their hand. The "Old Doctor," who isn't an old man at all, but a big bluff hearty individual who would attract attention anywhere as he walks along the street, by reason of a radiant and forceful personality, tells the women:

"I was against you in the election, but I am with you now."

The women elected are: Mrs. J. W. McAdow, Mayor; Mrs. S. J. Hull, City Clerk, and three members of the Council, Mrs. S. A. Mallory, Mrs. John Pyles and Mrs. Charles Clinkenbeard.

IN RIVERTON the objective is the same, but conditions somewhat different. This is a mining community, in which there is a large foreign element. It is a town widely scattered, even business centers being in separated groups. Soft-drink parlors, sumptuously numerous and prosperous looking, are noticeable to the casual observer.

Discord between a faction calling itself dry and one embracing the city administration, which resents being called wet, has been rife for some time. Violence has broken out on one or two occasions in the form of raids led by zealous women, some of whom are now elected to the Town Board.

Here, too, the women's ticket was put into the field at the last moment and a campaign organized only the day before election. The appeal was made solely on the liquor issue. It was frankly men at a meeting presided over by a man which framed the slate composed entirely of women about whose dryness there could be no question. Here, too, every woman who ran was elected, and a larger vote, 538, was polled than ever before in history. But here majorities in favor of the women were very close.

ACCORDING to the victorious women, exulting on their own side, a distinct feeling of antagonism on the part of the losing faction is manifest and an undertone of defiance in the community, especially among foreign-born neighbors. This, they agree, will have to be met with a firm brave stand. Cautious procedure and the avoidance of further violence is to be the watchword.

Some new ordinances and a new Town Marshal who can be trusted to do his duty are the first objectives. With a majority on the board and a belief that they have the Mayor with them the women are sanguine of results.

I was directed by Mrs. Parsons, to whom the other women referred me as their spokesman, to see the Mayor for an official statement.

The Mayor is James Louis Smith. He resides and conducts municipal affairs in a small one-room building. It was designed originally as a chicken brooder and there are windows on three sides. It stands in the midst of a farm which he owns, but which is operated, apparently, by a tenant. For all its combination of purposes it presents a snug and workmanlike interior. A desk crammed with official papers and a typewriter occupy one corner. The domestic menage occupies one-half. Another corner is given up to shelves of books of a distinctly philosophical and classic flavor. Everything is neatly disposed, shining with cleanliness. The touch of a woman's hand, far from being needed, one felt, would be resented in this shipshape interior.

The Mayor is a widower, whose young daughters are boarding and attending school on the other side of town. He is a man of means, owning the bank building and other business property I learned elsewhere. He speaks sagely and in terms of learning, with an Hibernian twist to his tongue. He quoted Thoreau, whom he emulates in his manner of living. He is of small but sturdy stature, was a miner all his younger days, a digger under the ground, and is self-educated.

"I welcome the women upon the Village Board," he said. Handing me a paper upon which he had just written his committee appointments, he added: "You will see I have made the lady who was a leader in the raids chairman of the Committee on Police, Licenses and Health."

Women, indeed, were named on all the committees.

He told of the handicaps he had met with in prosecuting liquor cases, of exhausting all legitimate means without ever getting a conviction at the county seat. He was loath further to squander limited public funds on these futile efforts. But he would refuse to lend his co-operation personally or officially to any raids or illegitimate means of obtaining evidence against dry law violators.

There was just that intimation of a difference of opinion between the Mayor and his Cabinet on methods of law enforcement. He would, he said, appoint for City Marshal any man upon whom the ladies might agree.

Another newspaper reporter from a large city came to interview the Mayor while I was there.

"The world must be getting the idea this is a regular Sodom and Gomorrah," remarked the Mayor.

He and other members of the board in Riverton, like those at De Kalb, were most concerned lest reports get abroad that conditions in their towns were so bad as to necessitate extreme measures, that they must be pretty bad indeed when women felt called upon to come to the rescue.

"WE HAVE no state here which warrants anything unusual," insisted Mayor Smith. "We have a quiet little town. We have not had a killing here within my memory. I believe a great many voted for the women's ticket in a spirit of fair play and with some curiosity to see what they may do. I confess to some curiosity myself and the belief that it is time women were asserting their new rights and privileges and assuming their active responsibility in government. I hope the trial of this innovation here will be entirely successful and that it will bring favorable rather than unfavorable advertisement to our town."

The women elected at Riverton are Mrs. Mary E. Parsons, Mrs. Isabel Jacaway, Mrs. Elizabeth Duncan and Mrs. Maude Osborne to the board, and Mrs. Hazel Hewitt, City Clerk.

CHICAGO.—She stood in all be fine young inno—well, not exactly innocence, because she was 15 and a modern miss—anyway, she stood in her fine young shoes and said: "Mother, if you don't stop talking I'll steal your gray-haired daddy from you."

But mothers will talk. They don't seem to be able to do much else these days when it comes to handling daughters. Mrs. Grace Powell insisted on talking. She said:

"Don't be an idiot, Marion. He's 58 years old. Stick to your boy friends."

Well, she wouldn't. Well, she didn't. Marion was bound to live her own life to the last frazzle. She up and eloped with T. Fred Laramie, the gray-haired Daddy, to Crown Point, Indiana, February 6. It was a beautiful case of larceny. Marion stole her mother's old sweetheart and made a clean getaway. She didn't leave a trace of the loot. She escaped with him, eyeglasses, sporty hat, Packard brougham, gray hair and all. Marion was a love pirate and her mother walked the plank. Or, rather, the floor.

Marion is back with Mother now. She and Mother make periodic trips to the law office of Roy C. Woods, who has filed suit for separate maintenance in Marion's behalf. The young wife charges her 58-year-old husband with cruelty. I interviewed Mrs. Powell and her daughter in Attorney Woods' office the other day. The mother was beaming; Marion looked a bit sheepish. After all, Mother was right, and it is too bad she had to be right after all, because, as Marion says: "She was right in the first place and I was a dumbbell to try to put one over on her."

Mrs. Powell, it seemed just, should have the first chance to talk, not only for the purpose of saying: "I told you so," but because mothers deserve a hearing now and then. Mrs. Powell, who has an apartment at 4116 Irving Park boulevard, has supported herself and daughters by working as an investigator for the Government, the Chicago police and a railroad company.

"I'M a detective," she said, "and Marion should have had more sense that to try to put anything over on me. She picked the wrong mother to hoodwink. Although she did get away with it for a time, I knew every move she made and might have halted the match, except that Marion is of age and legally able to do anything she pleases. I didn't try to stop it after I saw she was really determined to marry Mr. Laramie. I realized that she had to learn her lesson."

Marion dropped her gaze demurely and crossed her legs and said: "Yes, Mother."

"Mr. Laramie was an old friend of mine," her mother continued. "I have known him for 14 years. He was City Attorney of Maywood when I first met him and a friend of my brother's. In 1920 he began calling on me. My two girls were children, then—Marion has a twin sister, Arline, who is now Mrs. G. A. Kunz—and Mr. Laramie acted toward them as a father. He called Marion 'Jack' and Arline 'Jill' and they regarded him with the affection children would have for a father.

"I never thought that Mr. Laramie would consider my children in any romantic way. They used to kiss him, of course, and sit on his lap when he came to call, but we thought nothing of that. He was 'Daddy' Laramie to them.

"I didn't notice anything wrong until last September, when he and Marion got chummy. One day I came home and they had the phonograph going and Mr. Laramie was trying to dance. He was all excited and giggly. I told him not to be so foolish. A man of his age!

"He flushed up and said, 'Look here, you don't think I feel any romantic affection for Marion, do you? That's absurd.' I agreed with him. We dropped the subject. But in evening came in October when I found Marion with a box of Julia King's candy. That was the kind of candy Mr. Laramie always brought me. So I said: 'Marion, Mr. Laramie gave you that candy, didn't he?' And Marion said: 'No.'

"BUT that put me on my guard. A few nights later Marion — she was working downtown as a stenographer—called me and said she was staying down for dinner and a show and wouldn't be home until late. I asked her: 'Are you staying with Mr. Laramie? Is he your date?' She laughed and said no, and told me not to be so serious. She said she didn't like me to be always prying into her affairs.

T. FRED LARAMIE—he who says he was stolen.

Mrs. Powell, who has an apartment at 4116 Irving Park boulevard, has supported herself and daughters by working as an investigator for the Government, the Chicago police and a railroad company.

"I'M a detective," she said, "and Marion should have had more sense that to try to put anything over on me. She picked the wrong mother to hoodwink. Although she did get away with it for a time, I knew every move she made and might have halted the match, except that Marion is of age and legally able to do anything she pleases. "Mr. Laramie was an old friend of mine," her mother continued. "I have known him for 14 years. He was City Attorney of Maywood when I first met him and a friend of my brother's. In 1920 he began calling on me. My two girls were children, then—Marion has a twin sister, Arline, who is now Mrs. G. A. Kunz—and Mr. Laramie acted toward them as a father. "I didn't notice anything wrong until last September, when he and Marion got chummy. One day I came home and they had the phonograph going and Mr. Laramie was trying to dance. He was all excited and giggly. I told him not to be so foolish. A man of his age!

"He flushed up and said, 'Look here, you don't think I feel any romantic affection for Marion, do you? That's absurd.' I agreed with him. We dropped the subject. But an evening came in October when I found Marion with a box of Julia King's candy. That was the kind of candy Mr. Laramie always brought me. So I said: 'Marion, Mr. Laramie gave you that candy, didn't he?' And Marion said 'No.'

"BUT that put me on my guard. A few nights later Marion — she was working downtown as a stenographer—called me and said she was staying down for dinner and a show and wouldn't be home until late. I asked her: 'Are you staying with Mr. Laramie? Is he your date?' She laughed and said no, and told me not to be so serious. She said she didn't like me to be always prying into her affairs.

"A few nights after that Marion phoned that she was staying downtown for dinner, again, and wouldn't be home until late. Well, it happened that was the night Mr. Laramie was to call on me. I phoned his office to find if he was coming. A man answered and said, 'Mr. Laramie has been called out of town unexpectedly.' I recognized the voice. It was Mr. Laramie's. So I said, 'Funny about your voice, you talk so like Mr. Laramie.' The voice replied, 'This is Mr. Farrel speaking.' I knew it wasn't Mr. Farrel—he's Mr. Laramie's law partner. But I said nothing.

"The next time Mr. Laramie called on me I put it right up to him. I said: 'Are you and Marion going together?' He finally admitted that he had taken Marion out once or twice. 'But don't blame me for that,' he said. 'It isn't my fault. Marion won't leave me alone. She's trying to vamp me.' He acted very worried about the matter and after a time said: 'Surely, you don't think I care for Marion? Surely, you don't think that she can cut you out with me?'

"Well, I told him: 'She might. You never can tell.' He looked more worried, and pleaded with me not to misjudge him. 'I care for Marion only as a father,' he said. 'I wish she'd leave me alone.' So that settled the matter as far as Mr. Laramie was concerned.

"I then tackled Marion. She just laughed. 'Don't let Daddy fool you,' she told me. 'I'm not vamping him. He's vamping me. He's my sheik.' But she denied that she had had any dates with him."

Mrs. Powell looked reprovingly at Marion, who tittered.

"I WASN'T telling Mother anything," Marion said. "I was putting it over for the thrill. Gee, her gray-haired daddy had a line, all right. He was always saying, 'Marion, you're a cute kid. You've got the pep. I like 'em peppy.' He had lots of money and always bought me everything I wanted. He had a Packard brougham, too. He used to tell me, 'When you're right with me, the world is yours.' I believed him. And I didn't think it any of Mother's business."

Mother smiled the old sage smile.

"I knew that Mr. Laramie was getting Marion drunk," she said. "I knew it because I had her shadowed. My informants followed her when she left the office where she worked. She was traced to Mr. Laramie's office every time. And every time she telephoned and said, 'Mother, I won't be home for dinner,' I knew she was out with Mr. Laramie. Once they went to Otto's Place, another time to Rainbow Garden. Both of these are places where you bring it on the hip.

"The climax came last December first. Marion had stayed down for a dinner date. About 11:30 she telephoned me and her tongue was thick. I knew she was intoxicated. She said, 'Mother, I'm out with Theresa and Jane. I'm going to stay all night at Theresa's house.' I said, 'Marion, you're lying. You're out with Mr. Laramie.' She just laughed and hung up.

"I traced the telephone call to the Flanders Hotel, Room 246. So I went right out and got two policemen and we hurried to the hotel. The clerk said a Mr. and Mrs. Fichter were registered in that room.

"We got the clerk to let us in with a pass key. Marion was there alone. She was in bed and raving drunk. I took her home. The next day I swore out a warrant for Mr. Laramie's arrest. He was arrested but got a continuance of the case. I had to leave town on business and could not make an appearance, so the case was dismissed."

Mrs. Powell looked reproachfully at Marion.

"Gee," said Marion, "I was pie-eyed that night. I drank two highballs at dinner and I don't remember anything else."

Mrs. Powell took up the story:

"Well, this episode brought on a break between my daughter and me. We quarreled and she left home. Mr. Laramie was peeved at me for having him arrested. He installed Marion in an apartment at the Washington Hotel and pretty soon they eloped and were married. Then they went to live at the Graemere Hotel, in a fine apartment.

"My other daughter was sick and I saw Marion at the hospital one day. She told me she was unhappy. I wanted her to get good and sick of her bargain. She did, all right. That man was cruel to her. He wanted her to go to bed at 8 o'clock. He didn't want her to have any young friends. As soon as they were married he slowed down. He wasn't as keen on dancing and running around as he had been. Then he got mad and was jealous of her. He accused her of still being interested in her young friends.

"He wanted her to sit at home while he read his paper. Oh, she got tired of her gray-haired Daddy, all right. Didn't you, Marion?"

The young wife nodded.

"UH-HUH," she said. "I sure did. Instead of calling me Jack he ought to have called me Jill. I fell down the hill, all right. Stealing Mother's sweetheart was a great stunt, I thought. I got a big kick out of it. He was different from the boys I had been going with. And he had lots of money, and a Packard brougham. I was a dumb-bell, all right, to fall for him."

Mother and daughter looked at each other in complete accord. It was agreed between them that Marion had been a dumbbell but had seen the error of her ways.

At this juncture Attorney Woods summed up the situation.

"We charge that Laramie ruined this girl's life," he said. "She had a good job and was happy with her mother. He lured her from her mother's arms and married her. Then he made her life miserable. He shadowed her whenever she left their apartment. One time when she went to visit her mother she caught him hiding behind a tree. On March 18, and again on March 27, he ordered her out of their home, and told her he was going to have their marriage annulled if she did not obtain a divorce.

"Now, she is entitled to maintenance in the style to which her husband is accustomed. Laramie makes $25,000 a year or more. We are asking for a settlement on that basis."

All of the foregoing statements Attorney Woods had alleged in his petition for a separate maintenance.

"We'll make him pay, too," finished Mrs. Powell and Marion in chorus.

* * * * *

T. FRED LARAMIE, husband to Marion, sat in his office at 105 Clark street. It is true that his hair is gray, that he is 58 years old and that he is something of a dresser. But all other facts and points in the story he denies.

"This is a conspiracy," he alleged; "this is an outrage. Marion and her mother worked me. The mother saw she couldn't marry me so Marion tried it. Marion married me. I admit that. I don't know just how it came about, but she did. She was such an affectionate little thing. I'm only human. I fell in love with her. But after we were married—whew! Brz-rmrm—brrr. She was cold as ice.

"It's not true that I led Marion into this marriage. I was the innocent victim. I was a friend of the family.

"One day Marion came to me with complaints about her mother. The next day the mother came to me with complaints about Marion. Mrs. Powell wanted me to make Marion stop drinking. I said, 'Grace, I can't do that, when you drink. You set her a bad example.' When Marion complained about her mother to me I told her, 'You're just as naughty as she is about drinking. You both must stop.'

"I wasn't Grace Powell's gray-haired sweetheart. I was just a friend. I called on her, yes. But I never proposed to her. I was just a friend. Now, listen, here is why I think they worked together to get me married to one of them:

"Take that night Marion was found at the Flanders Hotel. Just take that as an example. What was the truth about it? Listen. I was sitting in my office about 6 o'clock that evening when Marion came in. She was stewed. I said 'Marion, what are you doing here?' I was shocked. She said, 'I'm peeved at my mother, she's been lecturing me again.' So I said, 'Well, let's go out and eat something.' We went to dinner and Marion got more intoxicated. I drove her around in my car for two hours trying to sober her up. I wanted to take her home. I started to do so but she protested that she didn't want to go home. So I took her to the hotel and registered as Mr and Mrs. Fichter. Then, I told the clerk to scratch the Mr. out as I wasn't going to stay. I left Marion in the room, telling her to sleep it off and go home in the morning.

"Now, how did Mrs. Powell trace us to the hotel? I asked Marion the next day, when the warrant had been issued against me, how her mother found her. She said, 'I don't know.' But I found out later that Marion had telephoned her mother.

"It isn't true that I was cruel to Marion. Why, I did everything for that little girl. She had everything she wanted. She bought seven pairs of shoes in two months. Why, the very day she left me she came in and I gave her $12 for another pair of shoes. Of course, I may have grumbled a little. I think I said: 'Good Lord, girl, how many pairs of shoes are you going to need?' She said, 'Well, I want a pair to go with my green dress.' So I gave her the money. Was that cruelty?

"THAT was the way all along. I indulged her. But I did insist that she settle down and make a good wife. I told her before we married that she was running a risk marrying a man so much older than herself. She laughed at my warnings.

"Don't talk to me about leading Marion into marriage. She led me. I don't know to this day how she did it. But she did. I'm married. I won't deny that.

"Our only quarrels were because she acted cold toward me after our marriage. No sooner had she got her hands on that marriage certificate than her whole attitude changed. It isn't true that I ordered her out of our home. I said: 'Look here, Marion, if you're not going to settle down we might as well end this.' That was all I said. Was that cruelty?

"Separate maintenance? Huh! She won't get a penny. She'll come back and behave or take the consequences. I'm going to fight this case to the very end."

Laramie had only one other correction to make in his wife's account of their romance.

"I wasn't learning to do the Charleston that day Mrs. Powell saw me dancing," he said. "It was just a one-step."

FORTY YEARS a GAMBLER on the MISSISSIPPI

George Devol Was a Swaggering Rough-and-Tumble River Slicker in the Days When Fast Packets Crowded With Prosperous Passengers Plied Their Ways Upstream and Down. Poker, Faro and Three-Card Monte Yielded a Rich Harvest.

He Has Written an Amazing Autobiography in Which Is Related (With Apparent Zest and Relish) the Inside Information on Crooked Card Playing. The Racy and Amusing Confession of a Crackerjack Western Confidence Man

HE LAID his pistols down. He put away the cold decks. Like the Mississippi steamboats, his day had passed. For him the sucker fell no more. George H. Devol, the gambler, having collected the usual percentages in favor of the house; having had his gains and losses, his fights and flirtations, had come to the mellow years of reminiscence. The old days, the bold bad days on the Mississippi—ah, they will not be forgotten—so "Butting" George Devol picked up a lusty pen.

His book, "Forty Years a Gambler on the Mississippi," just published by Henry Holt & Company, is a litany of that fine ancient American double-cross, the sign and symbol of the roaring forties, the epic fifties, the war-torn sixties and the sentimental seventies, when civilization first began to dawn along the Father of Waters. Out of its pages swaggers a sort of Bret Harte hero, a Mr. John Oakhurst, if you will, but no gentleman. George Devol was a liar and a cheat, a rough-and-tumble fighter, a crooked gambler and a smooth confidence man. He admits it. But he had his code; he was not all bad. He admits that, too.

Wherefore, let us begin, choosing anecdotes here and there from this notorious gambler's own story:

"I BECAME infatuated with the game of faro, and it kept me a slave. So I concluded to either quit work or quit gambling. I studied the matter over for a long time. At last, one day while we were finishing a boat that we had caulked, and were working on a float aft of the wheel, I gave my tools a push with my foot and they all went into the river. My brother called out and asked me what I was doing. I looked up, a little sheepish, and said it was the last lick of work I would ever do. He was surprised to hear me talk that way and asked me what I intended to do. I told him I intended to live off of fools and suckers. I also said: 'I will make money rain'; and I did come near doing as I said."

(He leaves the partnership with his brother Paul in a boat-caulking business at Cincinnati, and fares forth upon the broad highway that runs from St. Paul to New Orleans.)

"The year I was in St. Paul they paid off a lot of Indians a short distance from the town. I was told that the red man was a good poker player and was always looking for the best of it. They paid them in silver, so I got some of the hard money, hired a horse and buggy, got some whisky and started out to give them a game, more for the fun and novelty of the thing than to win their money. . . . Three of the bucks dropped out and left an old chief and myself single-handed. As I was over $150 ahead of the game, I played liberally to draw the old chieftain on; and as he had one of his bucks walking around behind and talking 'big Injun' all the time, he was getting the best of me. I knew that my hands were being given away, but I did not let them know I was onto their racket. I waited my chance and clinched onto four fours and a jack. I kept 'going blind' until the chief got a good hand, and then he came back at me strong. I let the buck see my hand until it came to the draw, and then I shifted the hand and came up with the four fours and the jack, but the warrior did not get to see that hand. I then made a big bet. The old chief beckoned his squaw and she brought him a sack of silver. He called me. We showed down; the money was mine, and then you should have seen the fun. The buck that had been giving my hand away started to run. The old chief jumped up, grabbed his tomahawk and lit out after him . . . .I never knew whether the old chief caught the buck or not, but I do know he did not catch me. I jerked off my coat, dumped all the money into it, jumped into my buggy and lost no time in getting out of that neck of the woods."

"WE HAD a great graft before the war on the Upper Mississippi, between St. Louis and St. Charles. We would go up on a boat and back by rail. One night going up we had done a good business in our line and were just putting up the shutters when a man stepped up and said he could turn the right card. My partner, Posey Jeffers, was doing the honors that night (acting as come-on man) and he said: 'I will bet from $1 to $10,000 that no man can pick out the winning ticket.'

"THE KILLERS all rushed back and began firing at me, and the bullets went splashing all around."

The man pulled out a roll nearly as large as a pillow and put up $5000. Posey put up the same amount, and over the card went for $5000, but it was not the winner. 'Mix them up again,' said the man, and he put up the same sum as before. He turned, and Posey put the second $5000 in his pocket. The man walked away as if to lose $10,000 was an every-day thing with him. We then closed up our 'banking house,' well pleased with ourselves. The next day we were counting our cash and we found that we had on hand $10,000 in nice new bills on the State Bank of Missouri, but it was all counterfeit. We deposited it in the fire, as we had no immediate use for it."

"ANOTHER time I was coming up on the steamer Fairchild, with Capt. Fawcett of Louisville. When we landed at Napoleon, Arkansas, about 25 of the Arkansas killers (river toughs) came on board, and I just opened out and cleaned the party of money, watches and all their valuables. Things went along smoothly for a while until they commenced to drink pretty freely. Finally one of them said: 'Jake, Sam, Ike, get Bill and let's kill that damned gambler who got our money.' 'All right,' said the party, and they broke for their rooms to get their guns. I stepped out the side door and got under the pilot house, as it was my favorite hiding place. . . . . I slipped the pilot $100 in gold, as I had both pockets filled with gold and watches, and told him that at the first point that stood out a good ways to run her as close as he could and I would jump. He whispered, 'Get ready,' and I slipped out and walked back and stood on top of the wheelhouse until she came, as I thought, near enough to make the jump, and away I went. But it was farther than I expected, so I went down about 30 feet into the river, and stuck into the soft mud clear up to my waist. Some parties who were standing on the stern of the boat saw me, gave the alarm and the 'killers' all rushed back and began firing at me, and the bullets went splashing all around. The pilot threw her into the bend as quick as he could. . . . The shooting brought the niggers from the fields to the bank of the river. I hallooed to them to get a long pole and pull me out, for I was stuck in the mud. They did so, and I got up on the bank and waited for another boat."

"I WAS playing poker with a gentleman on board the steamer John Simonds, bound for Louisville, late one night, and had won a few hundred dollars from him, when he got up without saying a word and went into the ladies' cabin. In a short time he came back with a small velvet-covered box in his hand and said to me: 'Come, let us finish our game.' He opened the box and I saw it was full of ladies' diamond jewelry.

"I said: 'What are you going to do with those?' Said he: 'I will put them up as money.' I said: 'Oh, no, I have no use for ladies' jewelry.' 'Well,' says he, 'if I lose I will redeem them when we get to Louisville.' . . . I loaned him $1500 on the jewelry and we sat down to play. It was about 3 a. m. when we commenced and before they wanted the table for breakfast I had won the $1500 back. We drank a champagne cocktail and he went to his room.

"The barber was at work on me, so I was a little late for breakfast, and the steward had to take me into the ladies' cabin to get me a seat. There was a gentleman, a very beautiful lady and a sweet little child at the same table; the lady's eyes were red, as if she had been crying. I looked at the gentleman and saw it was the same person who had lost the diamonds. Somehow, my breakfast did not suit me, and the more I looked at that young wife and mother the less I felt like eating. So at last I got up and left the table.

"I went to my room, got the little velvet box, wrapped it up, carried it back. They were just leaving the table when I returned. I called the chambermaid and told her the lady had left the package, and for her to take it to her room. After it was gone I felt better and ate a square meal. The gentleman came and thanked me, and wanted my address; but as I never had anyone repay me money lost at gambling, I told him not to mind the address, for I knew if I did not give it I would not expect anything and therefore would not be disappointed."

"THERE was a dance in the cabin of the steamer Magnolia one night, which was a fine affair, as there were a great many wealthy people on board. I had not done any playing on the boat, so I put on my good harness and went back into the ladies' cabin to join in the dance. I was introduced to a number of fine ladies, among whom was a beautiful young widow. She joined me in a waltz, another dance and a promenade on the guards. I thought her the most agreeable and sweetest woman I had ever met in my life. I was in her society most of the time until the dancing ceased.

"I met the fascinating widow the next day, and before I bade her good-by I had received a pressing invitation to visit her at her plantation. . . . It was not long before I availed myself of the opportunity. During my visit I received every attention. The Negroes could not have done more for their master. There was a nice lake on the plantation. The servants would drive the lady and me over to it and we would enjoy ourselves at fishing for a few hours. On our return she would play and sing for me, and as I sat and looked at her I thought: 'What would I give if I was a square man, and how happy I would be with such a woman as my wife.' I did not tell her my business for fear she would think less of me. I could not endure the deception, so after three days of happiness I tore myself away. . . ."

"I GOT on the Belle Key one afternoon at Vicksburg. . . . We played on the square for a while. Finally, I could put it off no longer, so I ran up two hands, giving the planter three eights, and then downed him for over $400. We played a little while longer and then I ran up two more hands and guarded them so nothing could fall in that time. I gave my partner (his confederate who was helping him trim the planter) the best hand, and he took in about $600. The planter was then over $1000 loser, so he excused himself for a few minutes, and I knew he had gone after more money. He soon returned with $1500, and that lasted him about one hour. He got up and said: 'Boys, I must have some more money.' . . . I winked at my partner to loan him some money on his wench. He went back and brought out one of the prettiest quadroon girls, about 17 years old, that I ever saw. My partner loaned him $1000 on the girl and got the clerk to draw up a bill of sale; then we resumed the game, but that did not last him but about half an hour, for I beat him out of nearly the whole amount on one hand, and that broke up the game. He had but $75 left. We went down and took a drink and then went to bed.

"The next day he got the money and redeemed his girl; then he said to me: 'I have got about $700, so let us go up and play single-handed.' We went up and I soon got that money. . . . He went to my partner and borrowed $1000 more on his girl, and I took that in. He then went to Captain Keyes and tried to borrow money to redeem his girl again, but the Captain would not loan it to him. He found a man who loaned him the money, and redeemed his girl again.' . . . When he got to his landing he and his negro left the boat, and I tell you she was a dandy!"

"CANADA BILL was a character one might travel the length and breadth of the land and never find his match or run across his equal. Imagine a medium-sized chicken-headed tow-haired sort of man with mild blue eyes and a mouth nearly from ear to ear, who walked with a shuffling half-apologetic sort of gait, and who, when his countenance was in repose, resembled an idiot. For hours he would sit in his chair, twisting his hair into little ringlets. Then I used to say: 'Bill is studying up some new devilment.' His clothes were always several sizes too large and his face was as smooth as a woman's and never had a particle of hair on it. Canada was a slick one. He had a squeaking boyish voice and awkward gawky manners and a way of asking fool questions and putting on a good-natured sort of grin that led everybody to believe that he was the rankest sort of boob—the greenest kind of country jake. Woe to the man who picked him up, though. Canada was, under all this hypocritical appearance, a regular card shark and could turn monte with the best of them. He was my partner for a number of years, and many were the suckers we roped in, and many the huge rolls of bills we corralled. He was an arrant coward, though, and would not fight a woman if she said boo. His right name was Jones. When Tom Brown and Holly Chappell traveled with me, the four of us made a quartet that could give most any crowd any sort of monte they wanted. Brown got $240,000 for his share of the profit and Chappell went north with his portion and today is as poor as myself. Bill never weighed over 130 pounds and was always complaining of his head. I always found him honest to a fault; and when the poor fellow died I felt I had lost one of my truest friends."

"A BIG fellow tackled me by the name of Barlow. He was a longshoreman, and a tough one, but I did him up in 17 minutes. He came into a saloon where I was in company with Bill Leonard and Bob Johnson. I had given races that day and it appears that this man Barlow had lost some money. . . . He said: 'You keep the racetrack and you are as big a thief as that other fellow.' . . . So at it we went. He was a good scienced man, and had his hands up very quick. He made a feint to strike me with his left and let go with his right. I gave him my head for a mark, which he hit cleanly, and his fist looked like a boxing glove two minutes afterward. I ran under his guard, caught him under the arms and downed him. In the squabble I got one crack at him between the eyes with my head, ending the fight.

"I was coming from New Orleans on the Duke of Orleans one time and had won a few hundred dollars from some of the passengers, but had quit playing and was standing in the hall talking to some gentlemen that had played in the game, when a big fellow stepped up and said he believed we were a set of gamblers and had divided the money he lost in the game. . . . Those days I would rather fight than eat. . . . We went on deck and they cleared a space for us. . . . He struck at me with one of those old-fashioned Dutch winders. I ducked my head, and he hit that. I knew it hurt him, for he did not use that like any more. I got in under him, let fly with my head, and caught him square in the face. I made him grunt, but the next time I got one in on him I made him look silly, for the blood came out of his ears and nee. He said: 'That will do.' I changed my clothes, as they were covered with the fellow's blood."

"He was a terrible rough-and-tumble fighter, and many a tugh citizen I have seen him do up. Geore was a great butter. He could use his head with terrible effect. One night at New Orleans a stevedore tackled him. Te stevedore was a much larger man, butGeorge got the best of it. During the fiht the stevedore's friends stood over Geege with drawn pistols, threatening to kl him should he do any butting. He can kill any man, white or black, by butting hiz.")

"WHEN a sucke sees a card turned up," continue Devol, "or a little spot on a tart in three-card monte, he does not know tat it was done for the purpose of making im think he has the advantage. He thinks of course, that the player does not see it, nd he is in such a hurry to get out his money that he often tears or cuts his clothes. . . . After suckers have paid their money and turned the card they see the mark was putthere for a purpose. Then they are mad because they are beat at their own game. . . I have had the right card turned on me for big money by suckers, but it was anaccident. . . . I have also given a big had in poker to a sucker and had him knock be ginger out of me, but this would make me more careful in the future. . . .

"I have won hundreds f thousands from thieves who were making tracks for some other country o keep out of jail or to spend their ill-gotten gains. I enjoyed beating a ma who was loaded down with stolen money bter than anyone else. . . . I had the nigers all along the river so trained that theywould call me 'Massa' when I would get oor off a boat. I would go on board with on of those niggers carrying my saddlebags, nd those sucker passengers would think Iwas a planter sure enough; so if a gale was proposed I had no trouble getting nto it, as all who play cards are looking fosuckers that they know have money; and who in those ante-bellum times had more money than a Southern planter? . . . I was never without a pistol, and I had one called 'Bess Jane' which saw me through many a tigh place. . . . I was always very stubborn about giving up money if anyone wanted to comel me to do it, but I wish I had one-quarte of what I have given back to people tha did need it. . . . I have never had sense nough to save my money. It is said of me that I have won more money than any sportsman in this country. I will say that I hadn't sense enough to keep it; but if I had never seen a faro bank I would be a wealthy man today."

I GOT some of the loveliest dirt I saw it one day when we were out driving—beside a cunning little brooklet that flowed out of a drain pipe. Artie didn't even want to get out and get it at first. He said he had associated intimately with dirt all morning cleaning the car and for two weeks when he had cleaned house and he didn't see why I should keep him busy for days and days carrying dirt out of the house and then insist on his carrying some into it.

But I explained to him what unusually nice dirt it was and tried to make him feel the poetic urge that comes with the spring to plant things in the earth and see them grow (in window boxes), but he insisted that he couldn't see anything poetic about filling the car with dirt and then having to put on dirty clothes and get out a lot of old rags to clean it up again.

We had a dreadful time with that dirt from the very first. Artie even went so far as to suggest that we save it in case we should need it in the Court of Domestic Relations. He can be so unfeeling at times! The night we brought it home we put it in two coal scuttles down in the basement, intending to bring it up to the flat as soon as Artie could fix the window boxes, but the janitor acted horrid about it. He was even impertinent! He came right up to my flat and said he needed the coal scuttles to carry ashes in right away.

THEN I had to hunt up a little boy and get him to carry it all upstairs and put it in two big pasteboard boxes in the outside hallway. It cost me 75 cents, but I felt it was worth that to have such lovely dirt in my apartment.

Then Mrs. Gordon, the woman in the apartment across the hall, objected to my keeping it there, and I had to carry it into the kitchenette. The boxes broke and I spilled quite a bit on the floor, but I managed to fill my new roaster and two saucepans and the double boiler and my big kettle.

And then Artie was so inconsiderate as to invite the Smiths over to dinner—right when he knew I was occupied with gardening—and he sent up a big potroast and a lot of vegetables. The only thing I could do was to move the dirt, so I dumped his suit that had just come from the cleaners out of the box and filled it—the box—with the dirt—and set it on the bathroom floor.

It would have been all right if Artie hadn't taken a bath that night. He chooses such inopportune times to do things! I heard him splashing around in the tub humming the Miserere—Artie always associates the Miserere with cleanliness—and then all of a sudden I heard a jump and then a strange sliding and then a sickening thud.

GROSS EXAGGERATIONS

By Milt Gross

Mrs. Dumbly

I GOT some of the loveliest dirt! I saw it one day when we were out driving—beside a cunning little brooklet that flowed out of a drain pipe. Artie didn't even want to get out and get it at first. He said he had associated intimately with dirt all morning cleaning the car and for two weeks when he had cleaned house and he didn't see why I should keep him busy for days and days carrying dirt out of the house and then insist on his carrying some into it.

But I explained to him what unusually nice dirt it was and tried to make him feel the poetic urge that comes with the spring to plant things in the earth and see them grow (in window boxes), but he insisted that he couldn't see anything poetic about filling the car with dirt and then having to put on dirty clothes and get out a lot of old rags to clean it up again.

We had a dreadful time with that dirt from the very first. Artie even went so far as to suggest that we save it in case we should need it in the Court of Domestic Relations. He can be so unfeeling at times! The night we brought it home we put it in two coal scuttles down in the basement, intending to bring it up to the flat as soon as Artie could fix the window boxes, but the janitor acted horrid about it. He was even impertinent! He came right up to my flat and said he needed the coal scuttles to carry ashes in right away.

THEN I had to hunt up a little boy and get him to carry it all upstairs and put it in two big pasteboard boxes in the outside hallway. It cost me 75 cents, but I felt it was worth that to have such lovely dirt in my apartment.

Then Mrs. Gordon, the woman in the apartment across the hall, objected to my keeping it there, and I had to carry it into the kitchenette. The boxes broke and I spilled quite a bit on the floor, but I managed to fill my new roaster and two saucepans and the double boiler and my big kettle.

And then Artie was so inconsiderate as to invite the Smiths over to dinner—right when he knew I was occupied with gardening—and he sent up a big potroast and a lot of vegetables. The only thing I could do was to move the dirt, so I dumped his suit that had just come from the cleaners out of the box and filled it—the box—with the dirt—and set it on the bathroom floor.

It would have been all right if Artie hadn't taken a bath that night. He chooses such inopportune times to do things! I heard him splashing around in the tub humming the Miserere—Artie always associates the Miserere with cleanliness—and then all of a sudden I heard a jump and then a strange sliding and then a sickening thud.

"Artie!" I screamed. "Artie!"

And then such horrible language! I can't repeat it, but it's simply seared on my brain to this day!

"It's the lovely dirt!" he yelled. "I jumped out of the tub, expecting to land on the bath rug, and I stepped into this stuff and skidded. The place is a damn mud-puddle!" And then more of those unspeakable epithets. I can't even write down the initials of the words he used. Never were my senses so outraged!

But the next morning he put the dirt in my window boxes and I consoled myself by thinking how sorry he'd be when those boxes were all a mass of dainty flowers and sweet little clinging vines, so green and leafy.

He said he'd wash his hands of my dirt from that time on, so I got a pink smock and a trowel and bought some seeds from a woman at a market place. When I got home I'd sort of forgotten just what kind they were, but I thought it would be interesting to watch them grow and see what they would develop into.

Among them was a sweet little bulb—sort of fragile looking, white, tinted delicately purple. It looked like a tiny pearl. I could just imagine some lovely fairylike flower springing from it. I planted it in the center of the box and watered it carefully each day, but even my devotion to it brought me nothing but misunderstanding complaints.

After a few days the woman from the flat below came up to tell me that the water had dripped through the box and spoiled an angelfood cake she had set on the window sill and that it always splashed on her white-enameled table that stood by the window. And she wanted me to stop watering my flowers if she would stop running her vacuum cleaner just when I wanted to take a nap, and she said she'd stop running her cleaner if I'd stop playing the piano late at night, and I said I'd stop playing the piano late at night if she'd stop cleaning things in gasoline, and she said she'd stop cleaning things in gasoline if I'd stop shaking my oil mop out the window, and then we stopped speaking to each other.

BUT I consoled myself with the thought of my little plants, which by that time were just peeping above the ground. One of them was a tiny blue-green thing that looked like a wee rosebud. Another I decided was a dahlia, and the little bulb had sent up a slender green shoot graceful as an elfin sword. I was so happy over them!

I said "was happy," for up to this point I have managed to write this story dispassionately, holding my feelings in check. But, oh, the disappointment—the disillusionment! I found out just today that my little flowers that I have watched over and cared for so tenderly are not flowers at all! They are—they are—oh, I can hardly bear to set it down! They are a cabbage, a string bean, a beet and a potato! The disgusting horrid little potato plant even had a bug on it! It was because of the bug that I found out all about it. I called Mrs. Gordon in to help me pick it off, and she says—oh! she says my little fairy elfin bulb is an onion. Nasty little thing!

Oh, it's simply unendurable! And Artie just won't stop talking about it! He says—I prefer not to set down what he says, but I am convinced—thoroughly convinced—of what I said in the first place—that Artie is utterly devoid of finer instincts!

LAME DUCKS

A Story of Springtime and Paris, and Two Americans Who Were in the Doldrums When They Met. The Artistic Career of Each Had Been Wrecked by a Misfortune. But Their Hearts Were Brave and Invited Romance.

IT WAS in April, a late spring, with only the tiniest little buds on the horse chestnuts, and an edge in the air, once you were out of the elusive Paris sunlight. But it was also the Parc Monceau, which cannot help being charming in any month of any year in the calendar.

On a park chair, strategically planted in a square of sunlight just at the edge of a bubbling whirlpool of children, there sat a woman, alone and very quiet. She was so motionless, indeed, that the pigeons walked carelessly about her skirts, searching for crumbs, and the tiny French people paid no attention whatever to her, but spooned up the gravel at her feet and bounced their aimless balls over her shoulder. It would have been difficult to give her any definite age, for although clothes do not make a woman, really, they modify her to a great extent, and only an out-and-out beauty could have emerged triumphant from the shapeless and untidy garments of this woman.

An interesting but not an attractive girl. Allowing for possible ill-health, or trouble, you would have put her somewhere on the treacherous slope of the early thirties; and only great beauty, perfect physical soundness, unusual intelligence or profound care of the person can soften this rapid descent into a smooth indefinite plateau. This girl was obviously not interested in such processes.

A rubber ball rolled suddenly under her skirt, and its owner, alarmed, raised a shrill cry of, "Miss! Miss!" A severe English governess answered instantly: "Well, then, Gabrielle, ask the lady to allow you to fetch it out. And in English, mind—she is English." "May I fetch my ball, if you please? I am sorry," pronounced the mite in faultless English, adding: "I thank you very much—merci infiniment, madame," as the girl, with an absent-minded French phrase, reached down and handed back the toy.

"But, all the same, she's not English," muttered the man whose chair rested in the farthest corner of the patch of sun, peering through the heavy black glasses that almost masked his face. "She's dressed like one, the Lord knows, but she's an American—left-handed, too, like me. I'll bet she returns a nasty back-hand ball with that big paw of hers! Sport fiend, probably. But she's certainly no beauty."

The children near his chair, who had grown used to the occasional soliloquies of the tall pale American in the black goggles, smiled at one another and jostled his chair carelessly. They were quite accustomed to him, and he had sat there often, in the morning, now, for hours.

AS the girl in the wrinkled sport-suit rose abruptly from her chair and dropped her leather handbag, he moved instinctively to pick it from the ground. It was a worn bag, bulging uncomfortably, with a loose catch, and as he seized it awkwardly it fell apart, and a mass of letters, newspaper clippings and unassorted odds and ends fell from it and fluttered about. They collected the debris swiftly and in silence; neither was sufficiently embarrassed, sufficiently interested, to speak. Suddenly he pulled out from under his chair a picture post card and glanced at it unconsciously while holding it out to her.

It was a sufficiently harmless picture, even banal, and represented four men and a woman, packed flat like sardines in a box on a huge bobsled, careening down a glistening mountain slope of snow and ice. "Happiness at St. Moritz!" was its legend, and a second inscription, "Society at its favorite winter sport!" was printed below the written message. But, harmless and banal as it was, it had a curious effect on the man, for with a kind of snorting sob he threw it violently from him, as if it had been a poisonous snake, and glared through his disfiguring black glasses at the girl, who stared back at him, surprised and confused.

"I'm awfully sorry," he apologized abruptly, capturing the post card in three long easy strides and advancing toward her, a brick-red flush on his thin cheeks. "I didn't mean to be such an idiot. But unfortunately this darned thing got on my nerves—it was just a bit too much. Here it is."

"A bit too much?" she repeated vaguely. "Thank you; I'm afraid I"——

"Well, it happens that 'Happiness at St. Moritz' is a pretty ironic remark, from my point of view, that's all. And it sort of came over me. I didn't mean to frighten you."

"You didn't frighten me at all," she answered composedly. "You don't care for St. Moritz, then?"

"I owe these to it," he said dryly, tapping the black goggles with his long nervous hand. "I went nearly blind there."

"Oh," she murmured, in her vague indifferent voice, not looking at him, "really! Snow-glare, I suppose you mean. But that passes, doesn't it?"

Her very calmness had a greater effect on his confidence than any easy sympathy. He would have shrunk from that, but her lack of it seemed to spur him.

"Unfortunately, in my case, it won't," he said briefly. "The optic nerve, they tell me, has been injured. I had strained my eyes pretty badly etching, and this settled it."

"Oh, you're an artist, then?"

"I was," he said, and clenched his hands.

"That's hard," she murmured, a little more gently; "that's very hard. I don't blame you for hating the card. I—I loathe St. Moritz, myself."

"Oh, you've been there?"

"I was there six weeks," she said, staring ahead of her with that empty absent stare. "Six weeks—oh, God, why did I go?"

The sudden uncontrolled passion of her voice was startling; it was as if a jagged, blood-red streak shot across a stretch of gray.

NOW it was his turn to stare, a little doubtfully, for, after all, a woman whom you never have seen before in your life, an unattractive little woman—— She bit her lips and flushed deeply.

"Oh, I'm not a lunatic," she said, "though you might think so! But you're not the only one that St. Moritz did for—look at that!"

She held out her two wrists side by side, turned downward, and he saw that the right one was slightly enlarged and swollen out of line—not slim and flexible, like the other.

"You broke it?" he asked, wondering a little, and she nodded.

"But—really, it hardly shows," he began, not knowing what he was expected to say. "No one would be likely to notice it"——

"The audience would be likely to notice it, I assure you," she said roughly, "if I ever attempted to play with it again."

"O-o-oh!" he whistled slowly. "So that's it. You—you're a musician? Violin?"

"Piano," she answered brusquely. "I had just made my debut—I was going back home."

"That's pretty tough," he said, gently, "pretty darn tough. But can't anything be done? Won't it knit?"

"That's the trouble," she answered. "It has knit. It was set wrong. Eight weeks ago. It's no good—I've been to everybody, and it's no good."

"But who set it? Was it on one of those damnable bobsleds?"

"Yes," she said, and sat suddenly on her chair. He drew his own beside it.

"Mayer had my contract all signed for the States," she began. "I felt pretty good, so I took a little Swiss vacation with a good friend of mine—a girl. Well, I went on one bobsled ride too many. We spilled and I fell with my wrist against the steering wheel, and I knew something had happened to it. It hurt, of course, but not so frightfully. They all told me to let the hotel doctor fix it up for the moment, till I could get to London or Paris, and so I did. He said it was very simple, and I'd better let it alone when he was through. It healed in five days, and I had it X-rayed in Lausanne, and they said it would be all right, and to keep it in the cast. So I did. I hadn't any pain, and it seemed to grow stronger all the time. I stayed a month. Then in Paris, here, they told me it was all wrong, and I managed to get Brewer, who was over in London, and he said it would be too dangerous to break it again and set it right. He was very kind, but he said it was no use."

SUDDENLY she looked around her. They were alone in the park, it seemed. The children had all gone home to luncheon.

"I—I must go," she said abruptly. "I don't know why I babbled like this to you. I never do. I suppose it was hearing about your—your accident. I must go."

"Perhaps we'll meet again," he said, not looking at her, a little wrinkle of pain between his eyes. "I often come here. Good-by."

"Perhaps," she said. "Good-by." And she walked quickly away.

He never even glanced after her.

The next day it rained steadily, a cold driving sleety downpour. He tramped the streets, never still, for inaction drove him crazy, and his drawing boards and copper plates made a disheartening litter in the big room that opened out of his tiny bedroom. He ate, automatically, at the first cafe that presented itself, when he felt hungry, and stood for some time cynically regarding the chilly bronze ladies on the edge of the great fountain of the Place de la Concorde, phlegmatically pouring streams of water over their unprotected shoulders from their bubbling cornucopias.

Suddenly at 3 o'clock a light unreasonable sun streamed out over the city. The violent blinding light was too much for his eyes, and he turned toward the little park, which would be, at least, sheltered. Mechanically he made for the little island of green where he usually sat, and noticed, with a certain irritation, that a woman was already seated in the deepest corner. When he came nearer he saw that it was the girl of yesterday, but she looked, somehow, different, younger. She was certainly under 30, not over it. In a few more steps, the reason was fairly clear; she was greatly improved in appearance. Her suit had been well pressed; her hat, though simple to severity, was of straw and became her; her thick bobbed hair, though straight and decidedly Joan-of-Arc in contour, had been evenly trimmed and brushed.

As he neared her she rose and extended her left hand frankly.

"Good afternoon," she said, in her low oddly colorless voice. "Won't you take this place? It's best for the glare, isn't it?"

"You're very kind to think of it," he answered, touched at what was, for her, he seemed to realize, an unusual consideration. "I will, if you don't mind. Much more of this, and I'd have a beastly headache."

"Face the hedge, why don't you?" she suggested, and took another chair beside him. "How long have your eyes been so bad?"

"ABOUT three weeks," he said. "Nobody warned me, you see, and I thought it would be rather sissy to put on dark glasses—none of the men I was with wore them. And the doctor said all I needed was complete rest from etching for a month. I always loved winter sports and never had them over here—only at school and college, you know. So when my eyes began to hurt I supposed it came from adjusting them to a bigger angle, as I had been advised to do, and kept on staring at the mountains! Then, one fine afternoon, skiing, everything went red and jagged, and then black, and I began to have a splitting headache and a few other little things, and then—Blah! Nearly all gone. No can do."

"But surely," she began, "the big oculists"——

"Oh, I've seen them all! The big Johnny in Vienna, and Wilmer from Washington; he was over here by good luck. They all say the same."

"And will you always have to—I mean—will it—will it get worse?"

"Maybe not—probably not, they think. It came so sudden, you see. Dark glasses always, in a strong glare, if I'm sensible, but less and less, very likely. But special eyeglasses, a little later, and no fine work of any kind. Not even painting; I don't see colors as I used to—fine shades, I mean."

"Oh—you painted, too?"

"That's what I was supposed to be doing. Then I got awfully interested in etching, and I couldn't seem to do anything else. I'd only been two years at it and—and I got into the autumn salon this year."

"No, really? How wonderful!" she said, with the quick artist sympathy.

"It was rather jolly. And the Government bought one, besides."

"Well, well! What was it?"

"It was a corner of the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier—taken three-quarters on, if you see what I mean. It was sort of an odd idea, and I think that was what got them. You know how they are."

"Oh, yes—'Comme c'est bizarre!'" she quoted, a little scornfully. "'Bizarre' seems to be the greatest praise they can give anything, from an evening dress to a circus act!"

His Yankee grin flicked across his sad face. "That's them!" he agreed.

"Anyhow, I'm glad the old tomb got across before I went bad. Like to see it?"

"Yes, indeed!" she answered, and he took out of a worn wallet the treasured printed column, with a rough cut of the classic lovely shaft and the enthusiastic comment of the reviewer, who found in Mr. Wesley Cromer's work a great promise for the future of American etching. The French critics, he added, found in his strong assured style a distinctly Gallic flavor and a gratifying lack of Anglo-Saxon sentimentality, a quality which, he added modestly, his countrymen were perhaps incapable of comprehending.

She looked up and laughed shortly.

"That's what they said about me!" she said.

"EVEN TO LAME DUCKS, the world is still kind and life is still rich—with love!"

"Really? How funny! What was it?"

She took from her new handbag a little roll of newspaper clippings, selected one, handed it to him in silence, studying the etching the while. He read it curiously, glancing from her to the picture of her in a column of the Paris edition of the Herald, a clever intense face, younger, apparently, than she, well set on a long round throat and squared shoulders rising from a severe dark evening gown, with a quaint Maltese cross on a fine chain for her only ornament. Miss Janet Crewe, it appeared, had avoided the temptation of a too-early debut and had, as a result, done great—even very great—credit to Mme. Leschitisky and Mr. Cortet, who admitted her to be their most promising pupil in five years. Her success with the Grieg "Concerto" had roused even the orchestra to well-merited applause, an enthusiasm based on a magnificent and really masculine technique, utterly unspoiled by the temperamental quality so often relied upon by young women to cover grave defects of method. Indeed, no shadow of the sentimentality so often and so mistakenly applied to this famous concerto marred a rendition which well deserved the interest manifested in Miss Crewe's career by one of the United States' leading concert managers. America could not fail to honor so brilliant a young countrywoman in proportion to her merit.

"I WISH I could have heard you, Miss Crewe," he said sincerely. "I'm no great critic, but I'm fond of music. And that's a good thing, for I've got to begin to go to concerts. The light on the stage strains my eyes, and I have to watch 'em pretty closely yet, to understand 'em. I'll miss the play, though."

"Why don't you go to the opera?" she asked. "You could close your eyes, whenever you liked, and the music would still be going on."

"That's a good idea," he said thoughtfully. "I'll begin as soon as I dare to. There are lots of operas I've never heard, and I'd like it."

They sat quietly for a moment, and then he burst out suddenly:

"I don't know why you should be so kind to me! I'm ashamed of myself, spouting all my affairs like this—I don't usually."

"I don't think you spouted," she answered quickly. "Certainly if you did, then I did yesterday! I was ashamed of myself, if you like, for showing no sympathy with—with anybody. That was why I came back," she added frankly.

"Oh, I see," he said, a little doubtfully. "I see. Well, it was very kind of you, anyway—here, let me do that!"

For while he was fumbling for the sous in his little purse she had taken out two coins and paid the fussy old woman in the black shawl who had come to collect for the park chairs.

"See here, this won't do," he added decidedly. "If you pay for my chair I must take you to tea. Women always take tea, don't they?"

"Oh, yes, I like tea well enough," she said vaguely. Her interest had flagged, it seemed, and she was back in her thoughts again.

"Now that she's made good," he thought resentfully, "and squared herself with her conscience, she's through! We'll see about that!"

"It'll do you good," he said, with determined cheerfulness. "This is a hard time of day, I know. Let's go to some jolly little place, that's warm, and you can tell me about some operas."

"Very well," she agreed listlessly, "if you really want to. It doesn't make much difference to me, Mr. Cromer, what I do. You might as well know that. But I can't promise to be agreeable, you know. I think I'm really better off alone."

"Oh, I don't know," he persisted good-naturedly. "What's the difference? I am, too—maybe. We're a couple of lame ducks, Miss Crewe—that's what we are! At least we can be sorry for each other."

She made a little shrugging gesture.

"Oh—sorry!" she said scornfully, but she rose and walked out of the park with him.

In a cozy little tea room, all faded pink chintz and tiny inconvenient tables, they marveled at the family of three beside them, where the grandmother drank two bottles of beer with chocolate eclairs, the young mother ate cheese with a great cup of sweet chocolate and the thin, big-eyed little boy drowned endless pastries with strong tea!

"Those children," she complained, "are eating all the time, and yet they're always thin."

"But look at the stuff they feed 'em," he said. "What could you expect? They're fat in Brittany, though—I was up there sketching, summer before last, and you ought to see 'em run in at noon, rubbing their tummies and howling, 'Soup, soup, grandmother—I'm hungry!'"

"Do you know a little place called Pabu?" she asked. "I was there all one summer with a piano they hauled 10 miles in an oxcart."

WHILE she talked in that odd low voice he drew rapidly on the tablecloth, and as she watched the quaint-roofed cottages, the just-indicated church spire, the old peasant in her coif, and the fat ecstatic youngster pressing an empty bowl to his full stomach, she smiled irresistibly.

"That would make an awfully good poster," she said. "Couldn't you draw those—later? If you made them big enough?"

He shrugged a disdainful shoulder.

"Maybe—probably. Oh, Lord, to think of it!" he groaned, and she bit her lip and spoke hastily of the opera.

"If you want to go, I could get you all the tickets you want—student rates," she added. "They're very nice about that. I went all the time my first year here. If—if money's any object it makes a difference."

"Oh, money's going to be an object, all right, now!" he answered ruefully. Then: "Of course, up to—up to this winter, I didn't have to worry. I've got about twelve hundred a year of my own, thank God! and from now on that's got to do. You see, I had a three-year scholarship, in California—I'm from Los Angeles—and I took a couple of prizes over here, and so things were pretty soft for me. And this infernal Swiss trip was a pretty swell affair—we lived like fighting cocks. One of my classmates invited five of us as his guests, and he never let us spend a cent—poor Jim, he was awfully broken up over me!"

A softer note came into his voice; his eyes lost their bitterness for the first time.

"I KNOW," she answered, musing. "Mrs. Kittredge—she took me to St. Moritz—keeps writing me to come to Egypt with her, or anything I want to do. But I'm through with it. No more rich friends for me! They've finished me."

"Then you're not—what will you do?"

"Oh, I'm all right; it isn't that," she answered absently. "I've got just what you've got—twelve hundred. Grandmother left us each that, my sister and me. I got a three-year scholarship, too—at the Boston Conservatory. Fall River, I come from. And I took a Flagler prize, too. But that's all over now, of course. However, nobody can starve, over here, on twelve hundred."

"No, indeed," he agreed heartily. "That's the way I feel. And you can hear all the music you want, very cheap"——

"Oh, music!" she cried, and her voice sank suddenly, and grew rich and angry.

"You couldn't teach, could you," he suggested tactfully, "though I suppose, over here"——

"Oh, yes," she answered wearily, "I could teach. A first-prize Conservatoire can always coach. Especially Americans—they think we can teach them the tricks and push them along faster. Madame as much as offered me— But I turned it down. I'd rather starve!"

She flashed petulant eyes at him. For the first time her artist's temperament flared out, and he could imagine her crashing great chords across a listening audience.

"Oh, what's the use?" she said, sunk into gray ashes again. "I must go now, Mr. Cromer. Thank you for the tea."

Before he could quite realize it, they had separated, and he went back to his early bed, forgetting to dine, for he spent the last late daylight in tidying the studio, putting away his sketching tools and plates, arranging the scattered studies carefully and choosing out the bolder, posterlike designs almost unconsciously.

"I might as well do something," he muttered. "There's no good making an utter slump!"

He hurried to the park the next day at noon, surprised at the eagerness with which he scanned the little dell, the disappointment with which he saw that there was but one woman there, a charmingly dressed French girl, playing with a little French boy. But as she tossed his ball back to him with a clumsy left-handed throw, his heart beat quicker, for it was Janet Crewe.

As he advanced, lifting his hat, she stared for a moment at the tall stranger. The day was warm, even too warm, the skies softly overcast, and not an overcoat was to be seen in Paris. But it was not the trim gray suit of light English tweed that made him look so young, suddenly; it was his blue eyes, which she had never before seen.

"Why—why, Mr. Cromer!" she said, startled.

"HALLO!" he answered, with a breezy California cordiality. "Isn't it great? I saw the oculist this morning, and he said to take the glasses off whenever there wasn't any glare. So here I am! What a stunning dress—you look about 25 today!"

"I am 25 today!" she answered, blushing a little under his frank admiration. "And Sue sent me this for a birthday present. It is nice, isn't it? Speaking of age, though, you don't look so very aged yourself, you know." The little French boy took his ball and with a polite "Bonjour, madame! Bonjour, monsieur!" wandered discreetly away.

"Oh, I'm not quite ready for an old man's home," he said gravely. "I was 32 the day—the day I met you."

"But—but that was only day before yesterday!" she began, amazed, and he smiled.

"Yes. It seems longer, doesn't it?" he said.

"I—I hoped you might come," she began again hurriedly. "Madame gave me two tickets for 'Aida' this afternoon, and I thought you might—it's really going to be very interesting, I think. There'll be an Italian Aida—Muzio. It's quite a gala, and the seats are fine—way down in the orchestra."

"I'd love to," he answered, "and you must lunch with me, won't you—at Prunier's, being it's your birthday! We'll have champagne!"

"I'd love to," she repeated, adding doubtfully: "But ought we? I mean—Prunier's is so awfully expensive."

"Oh, expense!" he cried scornfully. "I'm rich, woman! I'm a Rockefeller! What do you think—I've sold a poster!"

"No!" she wondered. "Where? How?"

"I woke up at 6," he said, "and I just felt like it, somehow, and I went at that Breton thing I drew on the tablecloth yesterday—you remember? I had it half done by 10, nearly, and suddenly I thought how jolly it would be for a soup ad. You know they have such stupid things, sometimes. AMERICA is being visited by an epidemic of coupons. There is no doubt but what these little things are coming to play a very important part in our lives. In the past, a man could mail a coupon for a history of Rome, a seed catalogue, a Hawaiian guitar, or a railroad watch—not to mention a 48-inch chest. And now he can send one away with the understanding that he will be made a metallurgist, an auto mechanic or a supreme court justice, providing, of course, there is no congestion in the mails. This is soft. All you have to do is check the job you want and the salary you want and send the coupon, and the return mail brings a stack of books that makes the five-foot shelf look like a Centralia telephone directory.

The coupon entitles the bearer to one boost to the top of the ladder, and, if he stumbles, he gets his money back. That is the beauty of the system. The mail-order educational factory is a new institution, but it has the edge on a bona-fide knob plant in that it gives you a boomerang clause with your price of admission.

Every magazine has a hard-boiled guy parked opposite the table of contents who grits his teeth at you, points his finger in your eye, and bawls, "I want YOU! Scrawl your name on the coupon! Look at Sousa—he started with a sour note! Look at John McGraw—he started with the Red Sox!"

might as well do something," he mut- . "There's no good making an utter p!"

He hurried to the park the next day at noon, surprised at the eagerness with which he scanned the little dell, the disappointment with which he saw that there was but one woman there, a charmingly dressed French girl, playing with a little French boy. But as she tossed his ball back to him with a clumsy left-handed throw, his heart beat quicker, for it was Janet Crewe.

As he advanced, lifting his hat, she stared for a moment at the tall stranger. The day was warm, even too warm, the skies softly overcast, and not an overcoat was to be seen in Paris. But it was not the trim gray suit of light English tweed that made him look so young, suddenly; it was his blue eyes, which she had never before seen.

"Why—why, Mr. Cromer!" she said, startled.

"HALLO!" he answered, with a breezy California cordiality. "Isn't it great? I saw the oculist this morning, and he said to take the glasses off whenever there wasn't any glare. So here I am! What a stunning dress—you look about 25 today!"

"I am 25 today!" she answered, blushing a little under his frank admiration. "And Sue sent me this for a birthday present. It is nice, isn't it? Speaking of age, though, you don't look so very aged yourself, you know." The little French boy took his ball and with a polite "Bonjour, madame! Bonjour, monsieur!" wandered discreetly away.

"Oh, I'm not quite ready for an old man's home," he said gravely. "I was 33 the day—the day I met you."

"But—but that was only day before yesterday!" she began, amazed, and he smiled.

"Yes. It seems longer, doesn't it?" he said.

"I—I hoped you might come," she began again hurriedly. "Madame gave me two tickets for 'Aida' this afternoon, and I thought you might—it's really going to be very interesting, I think. There'll be an Italian Aida—Muzio. It's quite a gala, and the seats are fine—way down in the orchestra."

"I'd love to," he answered, "and you must lunch with me, won't you—at Prunier's, being it's your birthday! We'll have champagne!"

"I'd love to," she repeated, adding doubtfully: "But ought we? I mean—Prunier's is so awfully expensive."

"Oh, expense!" he cried scornfully. "I'm rich, woman! I'm a Rockefeller! What do you think—I've sold a poster!"

"No!" she wondered. "Where? How?"

"I woke up at 6," he said, "and I just felt like it, somehow, and I went at that Breton thing I drew on the tablecloth yesterday—you remember? I had it half done by 10, nearly, and suddenly I thought how jolly it would be for a song ad. You know they have such stupid things, sometimes. I phoned Bartier to come over and see it—he was on that trip of Jim's and his father is French manager of the Gallo-American Soup Company, you know. Barty was crazy about it, and took it right off in a taxi to his father, and the old gentleman offered me a thousand francs for it, finished, and paid me on the nail! Barty says I can get a contract for a series, if I want. What do you know about that?"

"Fine!" she said eagerly. "Fine! I do congratulate you, Mr. Cromer! And what do you think I've done? I've earned some money, too—I've given my first lesson!"

"No! You haven't! Honestly?"

"Honestly," she assured him. "I went over to see Madame—I thought it was the only decent thing to do, she's been so kind—and if ever I intend to begin, I must, you see, while they remember me and are interested. She gave me the tickets and mentioned the coaching if I ever wanted to, and I apologized for the way I'd acted, and said I'd be glad to, whenever she had anything. She was rushed to death, and handed me a girl from Milwaukee—very talented. So I worked an hour with her. A hundred francs. I'm to have her twice a week. It's not much, of course"——

"But now let's hurry for our luncheon—the opera begins awfully early, you know, here."

He went sensibly home, a thrilling afternoon ended, and rested his tired eyes in a long dark sleep.

"But it was worth it!" he muttered. "How plucky she was to stick it out—you could see the music hurt her. Lord, what she must have gone through, that girl!"

IT SEEMED after this that they moved alone, in Paris. The others were shadows, didn't count, hadn't that terrible black brink behind them, over which they had so nearly slipped. When they sat, cheerful and friendly, in the little park on sunny afternoons (for both had been ordered a half-day in the open air; he for eyestrain, she for the anemia produced by shock and persistent underfeeding) they actually forgot, for whiles, the cruel strings to which their bright balloons of sympathy and comradeship were attached. But on gray damp days when the museums to which he led her meant fatigue to her and a constant, cutting memory to him, the strings tugged cruelly and the poor little balloons wavered and fell, sometimes, into the old dull pit of misery, and the maimed and hopeless future rose like a clammy mist, over and between them.

After a black week, when she had set herself, with a certain amount of success, to diverting him from the demon that clawed him, he admitted that his one recourse—after her—had for the moment gone. The soup posters, though successful, bored him; other ideas pushed into his mind.

"No!" she cried, wincing. "You don't mean that? Is that—is that really wise, do you think?"

"I don't know if it's wise," he answered, obstinately, "but I seem to want to get it out of my system! I'd like to do a girl on skis, with—with the other things just indicated, you know, and a little tiny village in the valley. Everything black and white, but just the girl. If I could get a model now"——

"Would you like me to pose for you?" she asked quietly. "Where is your studio, exactly?"

"You're wonderful!" he said. "I'll—I'll never forget this, my dear—never. Can you come—I mean, ought I to have anybody there?" he added doubtfully.

"Oh, Lord," she cried irritably "what rot! What difference do we make to anybody? You're not a Frenchman!"

"No," he agreed, "I'm not. That's true. Will you come tomorrow? In the morning?"

"It will have to be the afternoon, tomorrow—I have my pupil. She wants me to take a friend of hers, privately. The trouble is, she's nothing to do with the Conservatoire, and I haven't any piano. I've got to see how much it will cost to rent one, and if it's going to be worth it—for one, you know."

"'Special eyeglasses a little later, and no fine work of any kind,' he said, disconsolately. 'Not even painting.'"

"I see. Well, it will be worth it, soon, for you're bound to get more," he said soberly. "Come at 2, then, will you?"

She came in a taxi, with skis and poles, and when she threw off her long light coat he laughed with delight and stared at her. In a flame-red jersey, rough white breeches, red stockings and a red cap pulled over her ears, she looked like an Italian boy. She had rouged her cheeks, and above them her eyes glowed larger and darker. She appeared to be barely over 20.

"For heaven's sake! You ought to have your chaperon with you!" he cried. "Here, don't put them on—throw them over your shoulder and step out!"

"If I'd known I was going to pose for a first-year art student, I'd have brought my chaperon!" she answered, smiling at him.

In his dull-blue smock, and collarless as Byron, he was amazingly boyish; he might have been the son of the worn-cheeked man in the black glasses she had met a month ago.

"There! Just like that! And this minute—do you mind?" he urged, and she stood obediently in front of the white sheets he had hung on a line, and talked, since he seemed to like it, of the dry snow, the blue sky, the icy ramparts that protected the sharp curves of the wicked Cresta run.

"How can I do this? How can I do it?" she marveled, striding ahead like an Arctic Diana, smiling as she strode.

"But of course you can do it! If he can, you can. What difference does it make, anyway?" she answered herself.

It was not a hard pose, and she was able to stand longer than he had expected. While she rested, she stared, surprised, at a magnificent grand piano in the corner.

"But—but you don't play, surely?" she asked. "It's a Gaveau, isn't it? I did so miss my own piano at first!"

"Oh, no, that's Jim's," he said carelessly. "He's always wanted me to store it for him—he's going home for the summer. I didn't want to bother with it, before, but I told him yesterday he could send it over, if I could use it for a friend who wanted to give lessons on it, and he said I could do anything I wanted with it. I can get out, you know, when you need the place."

She breathed deep, a lump in her throat.

"THAT—that was awfully kind," she said slowly. "You—you have done a great deal for me, Mr. Cromer."

"And what have you done for me?" he cried hotly. "What are you doing now? Do you suppose I don't know? Do you think I don't understand? I—I was a beast to accept it!"

He stared at her strangely. She sprawled, resting, in a long wicker chair, one boyish breeched leg thrown over the other, her red cap pushed to one side on the tumbled strong dark hair. He might never have seen her before.

"No, no," she said, and smiled. "No, no!"

"Will you look at it?" he said shyly. "Will you tell me if you think it's worth it? It's—it's pretty coarse work, you know, but of its kind, I don't think it's so bad. It—it seems to mean a lot to me, somehow—I had to do it—to finish it."

She strode out, smiling at herself, blood against the snow, her cheeks, oddly enough, as white as their background. Great black eyes, at once frightened and exultant; strange black lines that indicated boldly the mountain sweeps; tiny black roofs and steeples, brushed into a distant valley, just glimpsed around a curve, the hunched shoulders and steering hands of a flying bobsled. It was almost Japanese, daring, arresting.

"Why, I think it's wonderful!" she said. "It's perfectly stunning! Worth it? I should think it was! I'm so proud to have been able to help you!"

"It's only you that can help me," he answerly slowly, staring at her like a man waking from a dream; "there's nobody else understands—can ever understand. Heaven knows there's little enough I can do for you, my dear. What could I, a man like me? And what you might have had! But you seem to feel—you say I do—oh, Janet, couldn't we help each other, always? Could we?"

SHE leaned to him, quite simply, and laid her head, sighing, on his shoulder, trembling as he kissed her hair. It had not occurred to her to call it love; what she felt for him, but she knew very certainly that to stand there with him, like this, was the answer to all her bitter questionings, the solution of all that was unreconciled, the reason, now, for living.

"If you think so—I think so," she said in her new deep voice.

The soft veiled sun of Paris streamed in a broad fan of light across the tall easel and struck the quiet shining piano. He buried his eyes in her dark hair, to avoid its beam, and she slipped her left arm around his neck, for the right arm hung at her side; but even to lame ducks the world is still kind, and life is still rich—with love!

HENRY DUNCAN DID NOT RUN FROM BILL EASLEY

In an article concerning Colonel Bill Easley, which was published in the Sunday Post-Dispatch Magazine of April 4, a statement is made that Henry Duncan, an attorney, fled from the courthouse when Colonel Easley threatened him. This was an error, as Mr. Duncan walked past Colonel Easley without speaking to him, and a little later again passed him in the hallway on his way to the library. Implication that Mr. Duncan was "yellow" was not intended; it is only fair to him, who, though small and unarmed, faced a known two-gun man, that this correction be made.

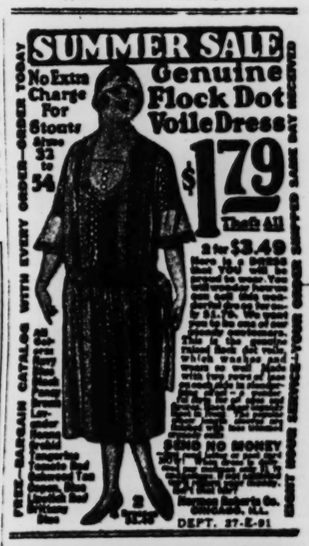
AGNOLO BRONZINO — his real name was Agnolo di Cosimo Allori, but Il Bronzino he was commonly called—was born at Monticelli, near Florence, in 1502 or 1503. He was a pupil of Raffaellino del Harbo, whom he assisted in some of his most considerable works.

Bronzino was a great admirer of Michelangelo, whose influence is seen in many of his works. But though this influence is seen, Bronzino was not one of the master's imitators.

This artist painted both in fresco and in oil, and in his historical pictures was a decided mannerist. By far his best works are his portraits of the Medici family and of many distinguished men of his time, which are among the finest of the sixteenth century. His largest work is the "Descent of Christ into Limbo." Among others of his best paintings are: "The Engineer," "Boy With a Letter," "Duke Cosimo I" and "Venus and Cupid." Bronzino died at Florence on November 23, 1572.

"Princess of the East," reproduced on [illegible] week's cover by courtesy of Noonan-Kocian Galleries, is an excellent example of his work. It is valued at $20,000.



CHOOSING A CAREER

By ELWOOD D. ULLMAN JR.

AMERICA is being visited by an epidemic of coupons. There is no doubt but what these little things are coming to play a very important part in our lives. In the past, a man could mail a coupon for a history of Rome, a seed catalogue, a Hawaiian guitar, or a railroad watch—not to mention a 48-inch chest. And now he can send one away with the understanding that he will be made a metallurgist, an auto mechanic or a supreme court justice, providing, of course, there is no congestion in the mails. This is soft. All you have to do is check the job you want and the salary you want and send the coupon, and the return mail brings a stack of books that makes the five-foot shelf look like a Centralia telephone directory.

The coupon entitles the bearer to one boost to the top of the ladder, and, if he stumbles, he gets his money back. That is the beauty of the system. The mail-order educational factory is a new institution, but it has the edge on a bona-fide knob plant in that it gives you a boomerang clause with your price of admission.

Every magazine has a hard-boiled guy parked opposite the table of contents who grits his teeth at you, points his finger in your eye, and bawls, "I want YOU! Scrawl your name on the coupon! Look at Sousa—he started with a sour note! Look at John McGraw—he started with the Red Sox!"

In the middle of the page is a picture of a wealthy-looking man sitting in front of a mahogany table big enough for a skating rink. There is a tablet of push buttons before him, and enough telephones to get the right number. Through the open window may be seen a lot of factories with smoke pouring from their chimneys. The executive is talking to a common workman and remarking, "One week ago, I was down in the assembly room putting squeaks in automobile horns. Today I am the head of this concern. Elmer Watson, why don't YOU sign the coupon?" But Elmer is scratching his head with a dumb expression on his face and appears to be wondering whether Mails will pitch.

The coupon is at the bottom of the page and bears a lot of occupations something like the following:

Expert accountant
Steamfitter
President of the U. S.
Ambassador to Russia
Railway mail clerk
Traffic cop
Chiropractor
Plumber
Private detective
Violinist
Janitor
Clog dancer

You have only to choose whether you prefer $25,000, $50,000 or $100,000 per year. Of course, the student must be careful in filling out his coupon. One man marked a coupon "concrete mixer" and told his wife to mail it, but there happened to be another coupon on the reverse side, and he received a tenor banjo with a book of instructions. Another man marked the square for "electrical expert" and studied the subject for 20 years only to discover that there had been a mistake at headquarters and he had been shipped a course of instruction on how to become a horse doctor.

At any rate, choosing a career these days is a simple matter and largely depends on the choice of the right magazine. It was no cinch in the old days. The head of the family would summon his lawyer, the boy's relatives, the neighbors, and finally the boy himself, and they would talk the matter over for several days until they came to a cloture. Then the old man would call the lad and announce in grave tones: "My son, we have decided to make you a butcher. I will start you out by giving you Bessie."

Nowadays, it is different. For instance, a college graduate comes home after studying law and is at an utter loss as to what to do. His father merely looks up from his magazine and barks: "Oscar, bring me the shears!"

Many a mother cherishes a dream to see her son grow up to become famous, and have a brand of spaghetti named after him. But all parents should be guided by natural aptitudes which manifest themselves in the boy's temperament, regardless of whether he is to attend a certified college or a mail-order alma mater. You might question the lad to discover his inclinations. Ask him how many ounces there are in a pound and, if he answers fourteen, you may rest assured he has a natural talent for a delicatessen proprietor. Consider these possibilities before signing coupons. We read that draymen have become interior decorators, cab drivers have become dentists, and baseball players have become evangelists.

NEWLY-MARRIED SWAIN: "Yes, darling, before we were married this is the spot where I used to sit and dream of you."

It is a fact that many aristocratic persons are having their sons mark the square branded "plumber." This calling, within recent years, has changed from a job to an art. The plumber has taken his place in society where he is lionized as are other curiosities. A student studying to become a plumber covers such courses as French, music, drawing and etiquette; although once in a while they might send him to fix a leak somewhere and the longer it takes him, the better his chances for success.

It is practically impossible to get a plumber out to one's home without giving two weeks' notice. A pipe burst in an exclusive residence and the frantic owner grabbed a telephone and got connected with a plumber's office where a girl picked up the receiver and said in a cutting voice, "Yes, this is MISTER O'Roulihan's. Who's calling, please? Have you an appointment?"

"No, I haven't an appointment!" shouted the citizen. "A pipe burst in my basement, the water is six feet deep, my wife is down there, and I can't find her!"

"This is no detective agency," replied the girl coolly. "However, I will see if Mr. O'Roulihan has returned from conference." She went away and returned to announce, "Mr. O'Roulihan says you should hire a deep-sea diver. He does no diving whatsoever."

"Let me speak to his honor," begged the other end of the wire, changing his tactics. "Tell him it's a matter of life and death."

Ten minutes later an impatient figure walked out of a door marked "J. Michael O'Roulihan, Plumbist." He picked up the receiver and snapped: "What is it, my good fellow? Come, be quick. A bursted pipe, you say? My dear sir, I can't be bothered with trifles . . . Oh, well. The charges are ten-eighty. Thanks, awfully. Toodle-oo."

At four o'clock that afternoon, the plumber entered the home. He was dressed in a cutaway coat and carried a cane, and there was a flunky following with a bag of tools. By this time, the water had seeped to the front door and was threatening to inundate the parlor. The owner of the place was walking around wearing a life-preserver.

The plumber turned to his valet. "The wrench, Jeeves," he directed. "I think there's an aperture in the piping. Trot down to the basement and tighten the fifth joint." While the valet was repairing the damages, the plumber adjourned to the music room and ran over a few classical selections on the piano.

One hour later the leak was mended, and the lady of the house invited the plumber to stay for tea. The plumber bowed, and sank his teeth in a vanilla wafer.

"Do you think I could make a plumber out of little Roger?" asked the hostess anxiously. "He never comes when I call him."

The Outline of the Arts — By H. G. WELLS

VII.—The Arts and the Renaissance.

The Artistic Reawakening Was in Progress Before the Classical Influences Began to Be Felt. And the Essence of the Changes in Art and Sculpture Was an Abandonment of Esthetic for Scientific Considerations. Resume of the Great Names of the Period.

IT WOULD be beyond our scale and compass to trace the multifarious revivals of domestic and decorative art in this great period of human recovery, or to tell how the Northern Gothic was adapted to municipal and private buildings, and modified and to a large extent replaced by forms deriving from the Italian Romanesque and the revival of classical traditions in Italy. Italy had never taken kindly to the Gothic that had invaded her from the north or to the Saracenic forms that had come in from the south. The Latin writings on architecture of Vitruvius were unearthed in the fifteenth century, and had a very stimulating effect upon processes of change already in operation. The classical influences which were flowing strongly in literature spread into the already active world of artistic creation.

But just as the literary revival preceded the revival of classical learning so the artistic reawakening was in full progress before attention was drawn to classical representative art.

The gradual reassertion of the sire for imitative representation rather than decoration had been going on in Europe ever since the days of Charlemagne. There was a vigorous development of painting, the painting of real things upon wood, in Germany in the twelfth and thirteenth centuries. In Italy, where the architectural forms gave more space than did the Gothic, mural painting also was steadily increasing in importance.

The first definite school of German painting was in Cologne (1360 onward). A little later came Hubert and Jan Van Eyck (circa 1380-1440) in Holland. Their work is bright and fresh and delightful; it is like the illustrations of a missal taking the air upon the larger spaces of the painted panel.

In Italy in the thirteenth century Cimabue was painting, the master of Giotto (1267-1337), who stands out as the early master figure of this first phase in the recovery of art. It was a phase that culminated and closed with Fra Angelico da Fiesole (1387-1455).

AND now there began in Italy and especially at Florence a strictly scientific research into the artifices of realistic representation.

It cannot be too strongly emphasized, because nothing is more steadfastly ignored in books about art, that the essence of the changes in art and sculpture that were happening in Europe in the Renaissance period was an abandonment of esthetic for scientific considerations. In the place of design and patterning, formal, abstract and lovely, there was a research for reality that was at best bold and splendid and often harsh and brutal. The swing and sway of the crude human body that Saracenic art had suppressed and Byzantine frozen came back upon wall and stone. Life returned to art and was presently sweating and gesticulating.

The problems of perspective were studied and solved and for the first time painters began to represent depth in the picture with assurance. Anatomy was acutely and minutely investigated. There was a close veracious rendering of details, flowers and jewels, folds of fabrics and reflections in transparent objects. A phase of extreme decorative beauty was attained and passed.

WE CANNOT trace here the sustained drive of these re-awakened impulses through the various schools of the Italian and Low German cities and the mutual reactions of Flemish and Florentine and Umbrian and such like groups of painters. We can but name among the fifteenth century masters the Florentines, Filippo Lippi, Botticelli, Ghirlandaio, and the Umbrians, Signorelli and Perugino and Mantegna. Mantegna (1431-1506) stands out because in his work more than that of any contemporary one traces the recovered leaven of the old classical art. He has at its best an inimitable austerity.

With the sixteenth century came Leonardo da Vinci (1452-1519), of whose scientific speculations we have already spoken. A kindred spirit in Nuremberg was Albrecht Durer (1471-1582). Venetian art rose to its climax with Titian (1476?-1576), Tintoretto (1518-1594) and Paul Veronese (1528-1588).

But it will mean little to the reader for us to catalogue names. We can only give a few intimations in passing as to the quality of these masters and schools; we can state only their general relationship to art and life as factors in a new attitude to the body and tangible things. The student must go to their pictures for his realizations of their quality. We may point him to the picture of Titian known by the inappropriate name of Sacred and Profane Love, or to various of the sibyls and to Adam painted by the Creation of Michelangelo on the roof of the Sistine Chapel, as among the supremely beautiful flowers of this growth.

PAINTING went to England with the German, Hans Holbein (1497-1543), for England had been too torn by civil war to shelter any school of painting. It was a mere visit. Even the Elizabethan time, so rich in literature, so fertile of music, produced no English painting or sculpture to compare with that of Italy and France.

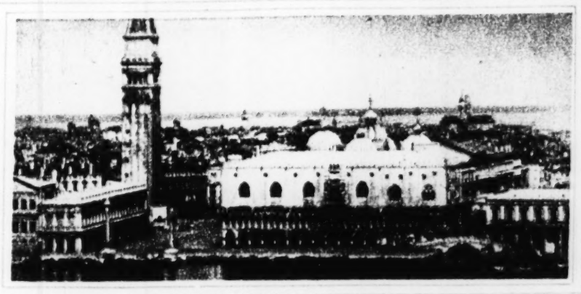
War and political trouble presently checked the art of Germany, but the Flemish impulse went on to Rubens (1577-1640), Rembrandt (1606-1669) and to a great number of delightful genre and landscape painters who reproduced in oil in the extreme west of Europe and without any possible connection or derivation work curiously similar in spirit and subject to some of the most interesting Chinese work. The parallelism may be due to some obscure parallelism of social conditions.

From the end of the sixteenth century onward the painters of Italy declined in stature. The novelty and zest of painting the brightly lit human body in every possible contraction, extension and foreshortening against backgrounds of more than natural vividness, faded, the justifications of sculpture and classical mythology for such illuminated physical exercises were largely exhausted, the representation of the virtues, vices, arts, sciences, cities, nations, and so forth, by freely revealed feminine figures agreeably disposed, ceased to provoke original minds, and a less strenuous type of practitioner was attracted to the practice of the art, content to paint pictures that did at the best merely vie with pictures already painted.

The European sculpture that had developed slowly and naturally in Germany, France and North Italy from the eleventh century onward and which had produced such fine works as the angels of the Sainte Chapelle in Paris, the equestrian monument of Can Grande in Verona and the Colleoni statue at Venice (by Verrocchio and Leopardi) was presently carried away by attempts to revive the peculiar qualities of the classical statuary that was now being disinterred and admired.

Michelangelo, drunk with this inspiration, produced works of a towering force and dignity and unparalleled anatomical vigor that stunned his successors into imitation and decline. As the seventeenth century progressed, European painting and sculpture began to have the quality of an athlete who has overstrained and is stale; of a rose that is overblown.

But architecture is sustained by material needs when less necessary arts decay, and through the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries a steady and various production of gracious and beautiful buildings went on all over Europe. We can but name Palladio (1518-1580), whose work abounds in his native town of Vicenza, and whose books and teaching spread his revivified classical style over nearly every European country. He was like a great fountain of architectural suggestion. We cannot trace here the intricate extensions and variations of Renaissance architecture that have continued in a natural and continuous evolution into our own times.



VENICE from the Grand Canal.

Painting in Spain was no such authentic growth of the soil as it was in Low Germany and Italy. The Spanish painters went to Italy to learn, and brought their art back thence. But in the opening half of the seventeenth century, at the shrunken but still opulent Spanish court, Spanish painting flowered in the great and original personality of Velasquez (1599-1660). He had a novel directness of vision, a new power in his brush. He, in company with the Dutch Rembrandt, stands out from the rest of the Renaissance painters in spirit and quality, and looks towards the most vigorous work of the later nineteenth century and of our own time.

61 Miles on a Gallon

Amazing Invention Makes Practically Any Car Give Double Its Regular Mileage to the Gallon!

Fits Any Make or Model Car!

NOW you can cut your gasoline cost as low as 9c a gallon. An amazing new invention makes practically any car give twice its regular mileage to the gallon—many run from 37 to 57 miles and even up to 61 miles on a gallon of gasoline! This wonderful invention is the work of Mr. J. A. Stransky of Pukwana, South Dakota. Already it is being used by over a million satisfied car owners—on all makes and models of cars. And now the inventor will send you a sample at his own risk! Read his offer below.

The Stransky Vaporizer is one of the biggest inventions of the century—an invention almost as revolutionary as the invention of the auto itself. Imagine a car running 28½ miles on common ordinary air—it doesn't seem believable, does it? This same car ran 27½ miles on a gallon of gasoline. But by using this amazing new device it did 56 miles on a gallon—a gain of 28½ miles, due simply to the introduction of FREE AIR! Every day we hear of some new mileage record—some difficult feat, such as pulling a car through deep sand or up a mountain on half the usual gas.

$51 an Hour

The Stransky Vaporizer is one of the biggest sales propositions of the century—you can make big money quick. But do not take our word for it. Read what these men say:

J. W. Cronk made $51 in one hour. He says: "The results of one hour's work—17 men gave me orders for the vaporizers."

$120 in One Day

I have found out that the Stransky will do what you said it would. I took forty orders in one day and wasn't out long. My Ford runs better than it ever did. I can save half the gas and it pulls better.—J. M. James.

$147.50 in One Day

My profits for one day were $147.50. In one week I made $280. Yes, I am always on the job.—S. E. Herrick, Ore.

$48 in Three Hours

My gas bill has been cut nearly in half. I have removed every particle of carbon from my engine. Since I installed it my engine runs as good as new, starts easier and quicker. I went out Saturday, about three hours, and secured 16 orders.—J. A. Williams.

Sells 500 in One Day

My best day's sales were 500 vaporizers; the next was 350. At another time I sold 23 in 35 minutes and at another time 27 in 45 minutes.—W. B. Eberlein.

$39 in Three Hours

In three hours on Saturday I cleared $39. In one hour on the previous Saturday I cleared $18.—T. M. Wiley, N. C.

Best Sellers I Ever Saw

One day I sold 111 and another 203. They are the best sellers I ever saw.—S. W. Brawley.

Sold 32 to Yellow Taxi Co.

Yesterday I sold the Yellow Taxi Co. 32 vaporizers after they had tried one out for a week.—P. J. Manker, R. I.

Ford Runs 60 Miles on a Gallon

I made approximately 60 miles per gallon of gas in a Ford Sedan as I make 15 miles on one quart of gas.—O. G. Ziegler, Pa.

Earn $250 to $500 a Month

And now this amazing new invention is making fortunes for agents and distributors. Now you, too, can make big money—just telling your friends about it. J. M. James made $120 in one day! Vernon Gaines netted $94 in eight hours. J. W. Cronk made $51 in just one hour! You can easily earn astonishingly big profits in full or spare time—many are earning $34 to $69 every day. There is no reason in the world why you cannot start out with this astounding invention and clean up $250 to $500 every month.

Here's how this wonderful little device works—how it adds more power and mileage to any make or model car. Every carburetor is adjusted to make starting easy—it gives a rich mixture to start a cold engine. But once the engine gets heated up the mixture is far too rich, resulting in faulty explosion. There is too much gasoline and not enough air. Half the gasoline is drawn into the cylinders in a raw state, and instead of exploding it burns. This causes a heavy deposit of carbon.

But with this startling little device in a car all this is changed. As soon as the engine warms up this device automatically begins to admit a much larger volume of air, thoroughly vaporizing all the gasoline, giving it fully 50% more power, breaking it up so that it explodes instead of burning.

A Carbon Remover

Not only does this invention save half the gasoline, but it also saves the expense and time of having carbon scraped out—a job costing from $5 to $25. It prevents carbon formation and it removes carbon after it is formed.

No dangerous drugs or chemicals are needed. Simply pour a little warm water and soda through the valves of the vaporizer and the carbon comes right out through the exhaust pipe.

The Stransky Vaporizer also reduces spark plug trouble, prevents overheating, makes engine start easier and prolongs the life of motor. It is absolutely automatic and self-regulating. It has no springs, shutters, diaphragms or delicate parts to get out of order. It requires no adjustment—you can attach it in three minutes. It will lengthen the life of any car—and it's guaranteed to last the life of a car.

Save Half Your Gasoline

The Stransky Vaporizer actually cuts the cost of gasoline in half, by making each gallon give double the power, double the mileage. Unless you use the Stransky Vaporizer you are actually losing half your gasoline—for every ten gallons you buy you are losing five. Already it is being used by over a million satisfied car owners—on all makes and models of cars.

Introductory Sample Offer

To introduce this new invention, Mr. Stransky, the inventor, will send a sample at his own risk. Not only that but he will actually pay you for testing his Vaporizer if you are not delighted with it! Write at once for his proposition.

Make Big, Quick Profits

The demand for the Stransky Vaporizer is enormous. Agents handling this device are simply coining money. Every auto owner in the country—and there are twenty million of them—wants this splendid new invention the minute he sees it. You can sell from five to twenty on one demonstration. Splendid for spare time work. Many former agents are cleaning up enormous incomes as distributors and crew managers. Farmers with no sales experience are sending in orders in 100 lots, netting them two to three hundred dollars. This may sound like big money. It is big money—it is a big proposition—the biggest ever brought to your attention.

...in a natural and continuous evolution into our own times.

Painting in Spain was no such authentic growth of the soil as it was in Low Germany and Italy. The Spanish painters went to Italy to learn, and brought their art back thence. But in the opening half of the seventeenth century, at the shrunken but still opulent Spanish court, Spanish painting flowered in the great and original personality of Velasquez (1599-1660). He had a novel directness of vision, a new power in his brush. He, in company with the Dutch Rembrandt, stands out from the rest of the Renaissance painters in spirit and quality, and looks towards the most vigorous work of the later nineteenth century and of our own time.

The properties were purchased from seven different ownerships at a total cost of $241,500.

The hospital site, with 340 feet front and the southeast corner of Kingshighway and Parkview Place, with a frontage of 162' 3" was purchased in 1920 for $181,000, or approximately $360 per front foot. THE VALUE OF THIS SITE TODAY IS TREBLE THE AMOUNT PAID FOR IT.

CHAMBERLIN METAL WEATHER STRIPS
"SINCE 1893-THE STANDARD"

Experience—the most trustworthy of all teachers—has demonstrated everywhere the necessity for Chamberlin Metal Weather Strips. That is why the new Jewish Hospital in St. Louis, an outstanding example of ultra-modern hospital construction, is Chamberlin equipped.

Chamberlin is needed on every type of building to bar out the cold, treacherous draughts that blow in around windows and doors, menacing health, causing discomfort to all and a pronounced wastage of fuel (20% to 40%). Dust and dirt cannot crawl in and when Chamberlin seals out this inleaking flow of air you no longer have to contend with the soot, grime and rain that depreciate furnishings and decorations.

Modern construction materials and the best heating plant cannot overcome the need of Chamberlin Weather Strips. And because Chamberlin installation methods are based on 33 years of practical experience and because Chamberlin mechanics excel due to special training and supervision the Chamberlin Company itself guarantees and services its installations "for the life of your building."

Mr. Aaron Waldheim, who had held the office of Vice President 1908, upon assuming the duties of the office of President in 1915 steps to carry out the plan of what stands as the last word in hosp development in this country. In 1919 a campaign was inaugurate raise funds for the project. This campaign netted $1,050,000.00. However, after the plans and specifications were completed it was fo that owing to the increased cost of building, the funds on hand were sufficient to build the kind of a hospital the Directors felt was neces to meet the requirements of the institution. Thereupon it was dec to conduct a second campaign in order to raise the additional m needed. This campaign netted in excess of $700,000.00. With a funds in sight the Board of Directors lost no time in starting bui operations, and ground was broken April 17, 1924. The new Je Hospital represents an outlay of about $2,250,000.00.

The building is laid on an "H" plan, the purpose of this being to t the maximum amount of daylight in all rooms.

While it was at an annual meeting of the United Hebrew Relief Association, held Oct. 13, 1878, that a resolution was first passed to build a Jewish Hospital, and while $1620 was subscribed in furtherance of this project at that meeting, it remained for a number of Jewish women, foremost of whom were Mrs. Rebecca Kahn, Mrs. Gertrude Mathes Mrs. Julius Weil and Miss Ida Kohn, as late as the year 1881 to preach the necessity of a Jewish Hospital. They spread propaganda and enlisted the support of Mr. Elias Michaels who made an initial subscription of $10,000.00. This started the ball rolling and in 1902 the old hospital was erected.

You, too, can have hair free from those telltale streaks of gray—hair glowing with health and youthful beauty. Just make this test—as thousands of men and women have done.

Get a bottle of Kolor-Bak and use as directed. This wonderful preparation is not sticky or mussy to apply—just a clean, colorless, pleasant liquid almost like water. But it has the remarkable power to restore any gray hair to its natural shade.

Kolor-Bak does not change the hair coloring instantly, as do ordinary dyes. It works more gradually, yet a week often suffices to accomplish desired results. And while restoring the color, it also acts as a tonic, routing dandruff and giving the hair a lustrous, soft texture.

Ask for Kolor-Bak today. No sample necessary. The same bottle is for any gray hair. If desired results do not appear, we will return your money. Guarantee in each package.

THE DUCHESSE de RICHELIEU tells how to keep the skin exquisitely soft and lovely

AS a young girl growing up in aristocratic Baltimore, there was that about the future Duchesse de Richelieu which caused all who saw her to predict for her an unusual career. Her head was finely modeled with its crown of golden hair. The blue eyes looked out from under delicately level brows. Her skin had exquisite fineness, fragile delicacy, the bloom of a young race.
When by her marriage this favored young American added to her native endowment one of the proudest names of old France, she was drawn at once into the glamorous whirl of international social life.
Asked how, through all her exacting social activities, she continues to retain her freshness and bloom, she replied:
"Care of the skin. It is an obligation always to appear with a complexion fresh and radiant, never betraying the least trace of any weariness or imperfection. And this care, in my opinion, can best be had by the daily use of Pond's Two Creams."
BEAUTY, charm and one of the mightiest names of France have made the Duchesse de Richelieu a young woman whose word is sought by many. In her New York home she presides over the famous collection of books, furniture and bibelots, which has come down to her husband from the great Cardinal, first Duc de Richelieu
Before retiring, cleanse your skin deeply with Pond's Cold Cream, patting it on lavishly and letting it stay on several moments. Now with a soft cloth or tissue remove all the cream and dirt which its pure oils have brought to the surface. Repeat the process. If your skin is dry, pat more cream on and leave it over night.
SEVERAL times by day, especially after an outing, cleanse your skin with Pond's Cold Cream the same way, and finish with a dash of cold water or a rub with ice to close the pores.
After these daytime cleansings, smooth over your freshed, invigorated skin, ever so little of Pond's Vanishing Cream. Its soft protection against wind and dust and chapping cold makes it delightful to use just before going out. But what pleases you most of all is the more exquisite tone it lends your skin. Flick on your powder and see with enchantment how evenly it lies, how natural is the glow it gives your skin, how long it stays.
Begin today to follow this method recommended by the lovely Duchesse de Richelieu. The Pond's Extract Company, 131 Hudson Street, New York City.

PILOT TELLS STORY OF NORGE FLIGHT ACROSS THE POLAR SEA

Final Lap Fight Against Arctic Storm, Col. Nobile Says in Official Account to Italian Premier.

LANDING MADE IN PERFECT SHAPE

If Atmospheric Conditions Had Permitted Trip Could Have Been Continued Another 1000 Kilometers

By the Associated Press.

ROME, May 17.—The final lap of the Norge over the North Pole to Alaska was a fight against an Arctic storm until a momentary lull permitted the airship to be landed at Teller, Alaska.

An official account of the flight, sent by Col. Umberto Nobile, designer and navigator of the Norge, from Nome to Premier Mussolini reads:

"The trip from Spitzbergen over the North Pole to Alaska, was carried out successfully, covering about 5300 kilometers (3293 miles) in 71 hours.

Ice Pacts of Dirigible.

"The first part of the polar flight was accomplished without difficulties, but during the second part, between the Pole and Point Barrow, dangerous ice formations on various metallic parts of the dirigible hindered flying, causing damages which fortunately were not serious because of precautionary measures which I had taken.

"From Point Barrow to here, the flight was very difficult because of strong winds and thick fogs which caused deviations toward the Bering Straits, making the last few hours of navigation very painful. Flying on the outskirts of Nome, there was a cutting wind, with snow."

"Profiting by a momentary lull, we landed successfully, in perfect shape. If atmospheric conditions and the operation of the radio—which during the last two days failed to work—had permitted, we could have continued our flight for another thousand kilometers, as the reserve gasoline on board was sufficient.

Crew's Conduct Admirable.

"During the three days in which the flight was made, amid really exceptionally bad atmospheric conditions, the crew conducted themselves admirably.

"Thus was accomplished the Rome-North Pole-Alaska flight over 13,000 kilometers (8077 miles) in 172 hours, exceeding the program mapped out in advance.

"The airship showed its ability to remain aloft in any circumstances."

It is reported that Commander Nobile will be given the gold medal for valor, Italy's highest military decoration, and will be made a General in command of a group of dirigibles.

Aeronautical circles also understand he will pilot the dirigible N-3, sister ship to the Norge, to Japan when he returns to Italy next month.

According to this report, he will supervise the mounting of the N-3 at the Ciampino Air Field and then pilot the dirigible, which has been purchased by the Japanese Government, across Asia to Tokio.

Many Gifts for Commander.

Premier Mussolini expressed his relief from anxiety regarding the Norge by taking a four-hour jaunt in a motorboat along the Tiber.

One official remarked: "The Premier never doubted the successful outcome of Nobile's flight, but waiting for news was not comfortable."

Messages of congratulation continue to pour in by the thousand.

A formal ceremony of thanksgiving under the auspices of the crew of the Norge has been opened by the newspaper, Popolo Romano. Italian Aero Club was arranged for this evening under the balcony of Mussolini's office in the Chigi Palace.

Newspapers announce dozens of gifts to be conferred upon Commander Nobile and his Italian companions, including medals, cups, albums and keys to various cities.

Message From Mussolini.

Mussolini sent the following message to Nobile in reply:

"Your triumphal voyage fills the entire Italian nation with emotion and pride. I embrace you and your intrepid companions."

The airship works where the Norge was built, and of which Nobile is a director, has received the following dispatch from Nobile:

"To the entire personnel of the establishment I send my affectionate greetings in this moment when our efforts have been crowned with full success. We are all in excellent shape."
